They All Do It.

Some of the pre-Socratic philosophers used to amuse themselves by compiling tatistics concerning the comparative number of lies for which the different species of fish were respectively responsible, and Thales, Anaximenes and Heraclitus were agreed that trout led as an object of mendacity, that black bass came next, and catfish occupied the third place, while few falsehoods were related of the catch of suckers or devilfish. Aristotle made some investigations showing that perjury was not the only crime to which persons afflicted with the disease are liable. He mentions the case of an eminent Athenian-whose name is withheld for the sake of his relatives -who, after sitting for an entire day upon the banks of the Cephissua fishing for brook trout with a pickerel spoon without getting even so much as a mosquito bite, murdered a Dacian slave on his way home to steal a string of fish he was carrying, and discovered upon reaching his palace that they were salt mackerel, which his unfortunate victim had just purchased at a market in the Piræus. Another philosopher, pursuing the same line of investi- backs and then by legerdemain substigation 500 years later, discovered that tuting bundles of worthless paper. Hol-Caligulo had once burned a Christian for land caught them in the trick and got remarking "Bosh" when the Emperor | the drop on Tom Davis at once and fired. told of having hooked a codfish eight | He also attempted to kill Theodore Davis, feet long while firm in the Tiber, which but failed. fell off the hook being it could be hauled

A Surprising Sormon

Says the New York Sun: The Methodist camp meeting on Martha's Vineyard this summer has been somewhat disquieted by a remarkable sermon which was preached the other day by Bishop R. S. Foster. The occasion was the dedication of a chapel at a quarter past 8 in the morning. The text was the question "W at shall be the character of the services | eld here in years | to come?" The answe was in substance, 'Not a camp meeting revival service at

No wonder this answer, coming from such a source, has excited surprise and critical comment among the Methodists. The Rev. Dr. Foster, according to the report of his discourse before us, takes the broad ground that modern religious revivals for the most part do more harm than good. People go to a great summer resort like Martha's Vineyard because they find it a pleasant and healthful place for their families and themselves, rather than because a camp meeting is held there. They seek rest and recreation, rather than the excitement of a religious revival Autumn & Winter "Our tabernacle services," he says, "must be adapted to the level of the thoughts | ination of Cod Liver Oil. and spirit of the people while here. They may be such as will elevate, broaden, and strengthen men and women, and so make them worth more to the church, without attempting revival work. Thus he frowns on revivals, denounces "noisy services and religious crudities," and asks his fellow Christians to cease calling a man sinner because he does not shout. If some outsider should say all this, there would be nothing surprising in it but it is indeed noteworthy in view of the position of the speaker in the Church itself It would seem to indicate that something?akin to what is called "reform within the party," is going on in the Methe-

SALMON FISHING on the Tay, Scotland, shows little sign of falling off, and within the six days to Aug. 20 as many as 10,000 salmon and grilse had been taken below Perth. Tacksmen were at a loss what to do with them, and they lay piled in heaps on the banks of the river. Sixty of the fish weighed were found to average 45 lbs.

GENERAL NOTES AND NEWS

Sir Charles Dilks is a widower who was married to an Irish lady of great beauty and sterling accomplishments. He was profoundly attached to her. She died in the child-birth of her first child. Dilke has since her death suffered from a grief so profound that many of his friends thought his reason would become unhinged. He used to be seen wandering by night around the railings of the park which is opposite his house, hatless raving, hysteric. His grief was intensified, perhaps by the fact that he could not visit her grave. She was a woman of strong mind and advanced opinions, and she left it as a solemn testament that her body should be cremated. Cremation was illegal in England and her body had to be transported across the continent to Germany where the dried ceremony took place. The boy survived the mother, and Chamberlain has brought up the lad with his own children.

A N. Y. despatch of 31st ult. says,-"Tan Davis," the backer of Fitzgerald, the pedestrian, and one of the best known sporting men in America, was shot this afternoon by James B. Holland of Colorado City and Avelin, Tex., in the second story of M. Purcell's saloon and sporting house, corner of Reade street and Broadway. Johnson was arrested immediately. According to the confession of one of the parties concerned in the affair, Holland came to New York for the purpose of obtaining a large quantity of counterfeit money from Davis and his brother. The latter two tried to cheat the Texan by showing him $10,000 in genuine green-

The Maxwell case bids fair to take its place in the foremost rank of causes celebres.
