A Winter Night Tale.

(Rockland Courier-Gazette.) "Wal, if this ere ain't agoin' to be a master tough night, then I'll give in Farmer Prescott precipitated this sentence simultaneously with a huge armful of well-seasoned hickory; the one in the direction of the little woman in the chimney corner, the other into the capacious wood-box, expectorating, as he finished both feats, into the sober looking ash-pan by the side of the wood-box, by way of punctuation.

He might have been communicating his climatic prognostics to the wood box mentioned, for all the sign the quiet figure sitting in the old rocker made of having supposed it addressed to herself. She sat silent and motionless, save when the old rocker, from force of habit, now and then jogging thoughtfully back and forth. Her knitting-work lay idly in her lap, under her folded hands, and her dim gray eyes gazed absently into the ruddy blaze of the kitchen fire. "What's the matter, mother?" queried Farmer Prescott, drawing his chair opposite to hers, and preparing now. for his evening smoke.

"Sixteen years ago to-night," she the fire: "sixteen years ago to-night, Jack whispered : Jack-our Jack-shouldered his little bundle and went out into the night, never to come back!"

Farmer Prescott was about to make the well worn path from the farm an angry reply, when his eyes fell house to the smaller dwellings under from the writhing branches of the elm | the old tree, who, having vainly strivto the snow-piled mound beneath, and he remained silent. Graves have such an appealing, pathetic language, that the roughest of us grow calm as we stand before one, and our resentment dies a natural death.

With a suspicious moisture gathering in his eyes, the sturdy farmer left | bers, and the birds talk to them both his place at the window, and resumed the occupation of filling his pipe.

A nod from the farmer, and the remark was followed by silence within, and a wilder burst of the storm without. Laying his yet untasted pipe aside, the old man went again to the window. There was know likelihood of his having 'to give in' so far as the night was concerned. In fact it seemed rather to be putting itself out to prevent the worthy farmer from making any such sacrifice. Nothing was now visible from the window but blinding sheets of snow, hurled past by the shrieking wind. "Somehow," resumed the feeble voice, "there never comes such a night as this but I think Jack is at the door, come back to us in our old age to -Father! Father!" Failing to recognize, as she had hoped to do, in the poor wreck of humanity before her, the ruddy youth who had in anger left his home sixteen years before, the farmer's wife went as hastily as her aged limbs would allow to prepare a hot drink for the stranger, muttering to herself as she went: "I should want anybody to do it for Jack."

"Come fur to-night?" asked Farmer Prescott, as the traveller stretched his thin hands towards the cheery blaze. The little woman stopped with the steaming bowl in her hand to catch his reply. "Only from the village."

There was something in that voice that sent the little woman's sluggish blood thrilling through her veins as it had not done for long years, and taking a step forward, she said as if to herself:

"It's so like—but it can't never be -can't never be. "Seafarin man" pursued the farm-

"'Pears as if you'd heen sick?" "Yes, fever in a southern port." A crash! The bowl had slipped from the trembling old fingers, and had broken into a dozen pieces on the brick hearth. "Jack! Jack! don't tell me it ain't Jack!" and the little woman tottered forward, and would have fallen on the stranger's breast, but he had grown who have used the above goods. Geo. Hildebrand, Eq.

DEAR SIR—I purchased from Messrs. Johnson & Co. through you one of Mann's Seeders, which I have used for four years, and I can safely say that I would not be without it for three times the cost, I could never raise more than 5½ or 6 bus. from one when sown by hand, but now I can raise 8 to 9 from one when sown with the Seeder. A farmer who will sow 70 bushels of grain in one year will. save enough in that time to pay fer his Seeder. I also bought one of your first prize steel plows, I had used two of Frost & Wood's Plows before getting one from you, and I could not get more than three or four days in the week with them. My team is very heavy and my farm is very rocky and the seed of the seeder of the seede whenever they would strike a rock they were sure to break, but the one I got from you proved most satisfactory and easy. I also purchased a heavy Iron Harrow from you and have been using it in a very strong soil, and it has given entire satisfaction and stood the test most wonderfully.

I was almost getting discouraged with farming before I purchased these im plements, as I was daily visitor to the Blacksmith's during the farming season. Very respectfully,

DANIEL SULLIVAN,

Benous

Renous, Northumberland Co Geo. Hildebrand Esq.

DEAR SIR:—I have purchased through you of the late firm of Johnson & Co., one Iron Harrow and one of Mann's Broadcast Seeders on wheels. The harrow has been used on my farm three seasons and I am well satisfied with it. It will do twice the amount of work the old wood frame harrow will do and does it much better, for by means of its narrow sections it adapts itself very nicely to uneven surfaces. I have thoroughly tested it on rough ground and it stood its work first class.

The seed-sower is just what is wanted for putting in grain. I have used it for two seasons, and can sow whatever quantity per acre I wish and do it evenly whether there is a wind or not. I am also convinced that machine sown grain ripens more evenly than hand sown, and that less seed requires to WM. A. McLAGGAN. Thos. Flanagan, agent, Chatham, will keep on hand samples of all machinery and a full stock of
