

Miramichi and the North Shore, etc.

PERSONAL.—John Rusk, Esq., Collector of Customs, Richibucto, was in town this week.

Hon. Surveyor General Mitchell is in town.

T. A. Vaughan, Esq., of Messrs. Vaughan Bros., St. John, and W. H. Olive, Esq., of Miramichi, are in town.

PICNIC AT RICHIBUCTO.—The Roman Catholic congregation of Richibucto will hold a grand picnic on their church grounds on Wednesday 29th September.

THE DRIVING PARK RACES on Thursday and Friday next will promise to be very attractive. Several well-known horses are already entered and the prospects of a full and attractive field are first class.

NOR LOST.—We notice in some of our exchanges that a young girl named McKinnon, who left Charlottetown, P. E. I. for Boston, was lost or enticed away on her arrival in the latter city. Such is not the case. She has turned up in Worcester all right.

NORTH SHORE CIRCUITS.—His Honor Chief Justice Allen and the attorney general, and Mr. F. H. Risteen, court stenographer, are in Dalhousie, where the Restigouche Circuit Court opened on Tuesday. Gloucester and Northumberland circuits meet on the 1st and 5th Sept. respectively.

THIS WEEK'S CAMP.—The camp of instruction for Nova Scotia's Militia District and that for Nova Scotia at Aldershot. The 73rd will not be called out for drill this year.

L. Col. McCulley will be Camp Quartermaster at Fredericton.

GARDEN PARTY.—On Monday evening next a garden party (in aid of the new Methodist Church fund) will be held at the beautiful grounds and residence of J. B. Snowball, Esq., Chatham. There will be music by the Chatham band, well as other music and refreshments and the occasion will, no doubt, be a very enjoyable one.

ARCHITECTURE.—Mr. H. B. Sellen, architect, has been in town for a few days looking over a plan with a view to locating here. Parties desirous of having plans made or supervision of any works attended to, will find him at the Adams House. A long acquaintance with Mr. Sellen, both personally and professionally, justifies us in saying that he is, in every way, competent to carry out any work which may be entrusted to him.

SAD DROWNING ACCIDENT.—An unfortunate drowning case occurred on Southwest Branch of the Miramichi river on Thursday last week. Samuel McKay engaged to lift salmon pickets for Thomas Vye at Wilson's Point. Mr. Vye went to Newcastle, and when he returned he noticed with surprise that the pickets had not been removed, and saw his canoe out from the shore caulked over. On going out to the canoe he saw the corpse of the unfortunate man, whose shoulders and head were under the water and the rest of the body in a fitful and a few days looking over a plan with a view to locating here.

Under ordinary circumstances the accident could not have happened. Mr. McKay leaves three or four young children, who are now orphans, their mother having died a few weeks ago.

HON. MR. ROBINSON'S ILLNESS.—Dr. Hart, of Philadelphia, Pa., residing at Robinson's, Me., was called to see Hon. Mr. Robinson Sunday evening. He is of opinion that the cause of his suffering is Bright's disease, which he thinks, however, will yield to medical treatment.

Dr. Earle, of St. John, who arrived Wednesday morning, having been sent for, agrees in the main with Dr. Hart's conclusions in reference to Mr. Robinson's condition. Mr. Robinson's illness has created a strong sympathetic feeling in St. Andrews, where he is so popular, and the hopeful sentiment expressed by the doctors has given widespread satisfaction.

QUELLED AND DOCKED.—A Miramichi yacht, containing two gentlemen sportsmen, entered Bathurst harbor in the early dawn of Friday morning last. A large number of gulls were disputing themselves on the shore near the lighthouse, and were mistaken by the yachtmen for ducks. A blazing fusillade was kept up for some time, and two of the crew of the yacht rowed to the shore and returned with seven of the feathered victims. The mistake was not discovered until the following day, when some Bathurst gentlemen, who had called to see their Miramichi friends, observed the steward of the yacht plucking the gulls, protesting to cooking them for a dinner that evening to which they had been invited. The yachtmen were at once informed of their mistake, but could not be convinced until Pilot Hachey was called in, and he at once pronounced them gulls. Notwithstanding the absence of the ducks from the dinner, the menu was first-class.—Sun.

Another Steamer.—The North Atlantic Steamship Company has, with commendable enterprise, placed the Steamer Nellie Wilson on the route between Miramichi and Charlottetown and Great Britain. She is somewhat smaller than the Clifton, but is an excellent vessel. The Nellie Wilson will be leaving port in good time to take over oysters to the British market and we hope some of our shippers will send a few barrels over, if only as a present. We recently referred to the large quantities of oysters shipped from New York to Great Britain and there is no good reason why the same should not be done here.

The Clifton will make another trip besides the one she is now on.

Visit of the Metropolitan.—The Most Reverend, the Metropolitan of Canada, administered the rite of Confirmation to 26 candidates at St. Mary's Chapel on Sunday morning last. The church was completely filled with an attentive congregation, and all were impressed with the solemnity and beauty of the rite. Immediately before the imposition of hands Holy 348 A. & M. candidates all kneeling.

As the end of the Confirmation Service the Bishop delivered a short and instructive address to the candidates, after which the Holy Communion Service was proceeded with by the Rev. Canon Medley, Rector of Sussex. The sermon was delivered by the Metropolitan, who spoke in his Lordship's usual interesting and instructive manner. The Rector, assisted by Canon Medley, then administered the Holy Communion to a large number of Communicants, including the newly confirmed. The church was handsomely decorated with flowers, etc., by the ladies of the congregation, and, together with the reverence and solemnity of the service, was the subject of much favorable comment.

On Sunday afternoon the Bishop preached at St. Paul's church, and at the Evening Service at St. Mary's the Rector was assisted by the Rev. Canon Medley, who preached a highly interesting and instructive sermon on the Ministry of the Holy Angels.

On Tuesday, the Metropolitan, accompanied by the Rev. Canon Medley and the Rector of Chatham, Judge Wilkinson, and others, proceeded to Bay du Vin on board the Miramichi. His Lordship immediately on his arrival, administered the rite of Confirmation in the Church of St. John the Evangelist.

Confirmation was attended by a large congregation, and was presided over by the laying on of hands, by the Rector, the Rev. W. J. Wilkinson. Yesterday afternoon, the Bishop, in the presence of an assemblage of the Parishioners of Chatham, consecrated the additional ground which has been enclosed in the churchyard of St. Paul's.

To-morrow evening His Lordship will administer the rite of Confirmation in St. Andrew's Church, Newcastle.

The departure of their Lordships for Chatham about half-past two o'clock, on Sunday was again the occasion of a large assemblage of the people. Mr. Young's wharf on Sunday that it was, the enthusiasm hitherto pent up by feelings of reverent respect, found vent in three of the heartiest cheers ever heard in Tracadie. We trust their Lordships forgave a Sunday cheer which was only offered by gratitude for the honor they had done us and by our love and affection for them as the successors of the Apostles—the representatives of Christ in our behalf.

The picnic took place on the following day, Monday, and was a grand success financially. The gross proceeds of the offerings made on Sunday at the blessing, together with the subsequent day's Picnic, were $294. The people of the place feel deeply grateful to the many strangers who assisted them in making their festival one ever to be remembered with pleasure, both on account of the greatness of the occasion, as well as the large amount realized towards furthering the work of their church. They feel profoundly thankful to His Lordship of Chatham and to his illustrious guests for having, by their visit, conferred an honor on the Parish which will live in the grateful memories of its people for many generations.

Death of Mr. John Tucker.—We regret to record the death of Mr. John Tucker, for many years an active and prominent citizen of St. John. Mr. Tucker was an Englishman by birth, and an American by adoption. He was an officer in the army, and subsequently rose to be an officer. In 1837 he was appointed foreman of shipwrights, and in the same year went out to Canada. Both Upper and Lower Canada were then in the throes of rebellion. Between 1837 and 1839 Mr. Tucker superintended the construction of a number of vessels on the lakes designed for naval service. In 1852 he was appointed Lloyd's surveyor for New Brunswick, and took up his residence in St. John. That office he held for twenty-eight years, till 1880, when he resigned, and Mr. C. R. Coker was appointed in his stead.

Mr. Tucker had a most thorough knowledge of, and interest in all that pertains to shipbuilding. He was regarded by the British admiralty as an authority upon Canadian shipping matters. Hundreds of vessels and hundreds of thousands of tons were built under his survey. He was the means of disseminating a great deal of information in regard to shipbuilding which was invaluable, and his heart was entirely in the work of promoting and developing our mercantile marine.

Since his resignation Mr. Tucker for a time was manager of the Eastern Marine Insurance Company. His illness was of considerable duration. He leaves two children, a son and a daughter, the former well known as Major Tucker, latter being the wife of Mr. C. W. Weldon, M. P.—Telegraph.

Fish and Lumber in Boston.—(Boston Herald, 21st.) The mackerel fish is doing very little, and the market for both fresh and packed is firmer and higher. There seems to be a shortage of fish, but they are coming in among the rocks, and the fishermen cannot follow them without great risk of sickness and other injury. The result has been a small week's catch, and consequently a much firmer market. The fleet is at work on the eastern shore, and is pretty well scattered from all the way to the Bay of Fundy. The mackerel are reported plenty in Frenchman's Bay. A fare of 300 blis, fat mackerel has arrived this week at Halifax from North Bay, the first fat fish of the season from there. There are none of the New England fleet now in North Bay. Receipts of packed mackerel at all the New England ports have been much smaller than for the previous week. The last sales at Gloucester were at $3.50 with blb for bays; shore mackerel were held at $5.50. There is a good jobbing trade, and the dealers are generally busy. The tendency of prices is upward, but there are still considerable amounts of the early caught fish in store which tends to keep the price down. Prices are about 50c higher in cargo lots. The jobbers quote No. 1, 1 sh. $1.75; extra 1 sh. $2.25; No. 2, $1.75; No. 3, $1.50; No. 4, $1.25; No. 5, $1.00; No. 6, $0.75; No. 7, $0.50; No. 8, $0.25; No. 9, $0.10; No. 10, $0.05. The market for dry and pickled codfish is quiet, dealers finding about the usual season's business for this class of fish. In large lots, large pickled hake are quoted at $3 to $3.25; medium, $2.75 to $2.87; large sh. $3.50 to $3.75; dry hake, large, $3.75; medium, $3.50; jobbers quote, Georges fish large, $3.50; medium, $2.75 to $3; large pickled hake should be quoted at $3.25 to $3.75; and medium at $2.75; dry hake, large, $4.25 to $4.25; medium, $3; haddock, $2; hake, $2.25; pollock, $1.75; shalckal salmon, $2.37 to $2.40. Trade in salt herring is quiet at unchanged price. Box herring are very firm and are advanced in price. The jobbers' quotations are: Large, shore split, $4 to $4.25; medium, $2.50 to $2.75; small, $2.50; large gibbed, $2.75. Box herring, strictly medium, $3; medium, 15c to 16c; No. 1 and No. 2, 12c to 13c. There is a good jobbing trade for dried and salted herring, and the imports of mackerel from the Provinces since Jan. 1st, 1885, amount to 20,351 blis; last year, 129,221 blis; same time in 1883, 30,272 blis; in 1882, 15,000 blis.

The trade in eastern lumber is very good for the season, and dealers are all fairly busy. Large receipts by rail and water have caused a slight accumulation, but as yet there has been no change in prices, the good demand preventing a break in the market. Spruce lumber is steadily held at $12 to 12.50 for random grades; frames of easy dimensions, $12.50 to 13.50; unusual widths and lengths, $14 to 15. The request is good for selected spruce boards at $18 to 20; second clear, $16; coarse, $12; refuse, $8. There is a good request for spruce floor boards. Planed spruce boards sell at $10.50 to 11. Hemlock boards sell at $11.50 to 12.50 for planed, and $10.50 for rough. Eastern pine is quiet, with the market nominal: Boston spruce is 2s, $50; 3s, $40; 4s, $30; clear 5s, $25; coarse 5s, $18 to $18; refuse, $18; red, $20. Boardwalks are active at $10.50 to $11 for 8-7; 10-8, $9; 5, $8. Shingles are in good demand at steady prices: Extra sawed cedar are quoted at $3.50 to $3.75, with clear and below easy at $3 to $3.25; extra No. 1, $1.75 to $2; No. 1, $1 to $1.50. Some popular makes bring higher prices. Clapboards are steady: Extra spruce, $30 to $32; clear, $28 to $30; seconds $21 to $22; Pine clapboards lower and sell slowly. Sap, extra, $45 to $50; clear, $40 to $45; second clear, $30 to $35; heart, extra, $30 to $35; clear, $45 to $50; second clear, $30 to $35; laths are lower at $1.75 to $2.125.

A Northwest View of Rio's Case.—It frequently occurs that petitions are circulated asking for the commutation of a capital sentence. The opposite of this is seen in Rio's case at Regina, where, the Leader tells us, a petition is being signed praying that the sentence of death shall be carried out. The Leader, which is edited by Mr. Nicholas Flood Davin, a Catholic Irishman and Conservative, claims that if sentiment is to be considered in the matter the feelings of the people of the Northwest should also be considered. They want Rio hanged. The Leader finds no reason why the sentence should be commuted, or why the Quebec people should ask it; says the talk of insanity is nonsense to any one who was at the trial; Rio did not know the heinousness of the half-breed who was his depository; he planned a war of extermination against the whites, that he has been a leader in two rebellions and in both showed himself mercenary and mean; that when the priests opposed his schemes he abandoned his religion and set up for a prophet, and since his incarceration has professed to become again a devout Catholic; and that his speeches show if again at liberty he would again seek to play the game of rebellion. In connexion with these points the Leader asks—Is there a sound principle on which Rio's sentence could be commuted.—Telegraph.

The Truth About Protection.—(N. Y. Herald.) Whenever a word is said about the desirability of revising the tariff in some way, or at least keep American workingmen busy, or to save them and their families from starvation, some devotee of protection jumps up, wriggles into the robes of an alleged prophet, and roars "Woe, woe!" in reply to one of these bugaboos the Boston Herald says:—

The truth is, and the workingmen as well as their employers are beginning to see it, that the war taxes on the necessities of the people and the essentials of manufactures have been retained too long. No enemy of American industries, had the power been given him, could have kept them in a worse condition than they have been in for ten out of the last twenty years under the care of their professed friends who steadily declined the protected industries suffering first and most severely. Accumulated stocks and enforced idleness have been the natural results of over-stimulation. If freer trade shall not give to this country, with its great natural and institutional advantages over all other countries in the world, more than two years of real business prosperity out of twelve—as we have not had since 1873—the advocates of that system will very frankly confess that their theories are wrong, and seek for a remedy outside the field of legislation.

But to decline that those who ask for a reduction of the taxes on universal necessities, like sugar, salt, iron, glass, crockery, clothing, lumber, wool, and who insist that the crude materials necessary for our manufacturers should be obtainable on the terms enjoyed by our competitors, are suffering first and most severely. Accumulated stocks and enforced idleness have been the natural results of over-stimulation. If freer trade shall not give to this country, with its great natural and institutional advantages over all other countries in the world, more than two years of real business prosperity out of twelve—as we have not had since 1873—the advocates of that system will very frankly confess that their theories are wrong, and seek for a remedy outside the field of legislation.

Lord Coleridge's Marriage.—THE WEDDING CREATES A GREAT SENSATION IN ENGLISH SOCIAL CIRCLES. LONDON, Aug. 18.—The marriage of Lord Chief Justice Coleridge, which took place yesterday, has created a tremendous social sensation. Every detail of the affair is eagerly sought for and retold as an opportunity offers with such embellishments as imagination can supply. The bride, whose husband is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual attendance upon her. After his arrival in London, however, the aged lord's ardor cooled rapidly, and in a short time the thermometer of his affections registered a very low temperature. It was at this stage of proceedings that the lady's mother came to the front. She reminded his lordship of the former of his father-in-law, and the contracting parties were thus brought to the bride's mother. Mr. Coleridge's bride is the daughter of a well-to-do family, and her father, who is now 67, is described as being a decided brunette about 30 years of age, with graceful carriage, a slender though perfectly moulded figure, and aquiline features. Her fascinating and vivacious manners so charmed the leading dispenser of British justice that during the voyage he danced almost continual