SUPDEN DEATH.—The death of M Enoch Piper, of Portland, occurred Saturday night very suddenly. Mr Piper although advanced in years, had always been vigorous and hearty. On Saturday he was in his accustomed health. In the evening he went out to do some work in the garden attached to his residence on Wright street. He went in soon afterwards, complaining of feeling unwell. He grew worse rapidly and Drs. Holden and Andrews were sent for. They labored with him for some time and he rallied. At ten o'clock he seemed to in a fair way of recovering. Half hour afterward the attack returned, and despite the exertions of the physicians, death ensued The deceased was a na tive of the State of Maine, and came New Brunswick between fifteen and twenty years ago. He had large fishing interests at the North Shore and resided there for some time. He patented a refrigerator for freezing salmon, and, coming to St John, established himself on Brook street, near the IC R round house. He curried on a lucrative business there for some years, and about two years ago retired from active labor. He had been married about eight years and leaves no issue. His wife is a niece of Judge Williston of the North Shore. He was a man generally respected, and his sudden decease will be sincerely regretted.—

The Journal's steady aim shall be aid teachers by practi al suggestions as to their everyday work, to lay before its readers the results of the experience of practical and earnest educators, to enter into the progressive spirit that marks the educational advancement of the present age, and to seize upon all new and practical methods adopted by experienced educators and lay them before its readers.

The Journal, if it continues as it has commenced, will be indispensable to all teachers who wish to be acquainted with the latest educational news, It will supply a means of communication between teachers and trustees. The first issue embraces a valuable table of contents. The examination papers are also published, including information that will be greatly valued by teachers and all interested in educational work. The Journal promises to be a valuable ally and educator to the teaching fraternity, and its success may be confidently expected. -

Great Opera Attraction.

One of the greatest opera attractions ever within reach of people at the north will be the appearance at Moncton on Friday, July 2nd of the Owens Company, advertised in another column, in Gilbert & Sullivan's "Mikado." The company numbers thirty-two artists and the performance will be well worth making the excursion trip to see. One half of the seats are already secured for the evening. so any of our friends who intend going should order at once.

THREATS.—The Grand Manan correspondent of the Telegraph says-"Threats are frequently heard in Eastport to the effect that some day the General Middleton will be sunk by the fishermen, and that the government steamer Lansdowne would be run into and sunk by some the sharpshooters. This kind of talk will not help matters in the least, and the less said the better for all concerned. The fishermen on both sides of the border are too dependent on one another to destroy the good feeling that should exist between them. The governments are responsible, not the fishermen."

you propose would give it to them. would make the position of these 400,000 Protestants, by taking away Ulster from them, infinitely less secure. (Cheers. You would not even protect the Protes tants of Ulster, because the Prostestants, according to the last census, were in the proportion of 52 to 48, and we have every reason to believe that the Protestants and Catholics of Ulster are about equal in number. However it may be, the nationalists have succeeded in returning the majority of the Ulster members. (Home rule cheers.) The main reason that we have a majority of the Ulster members is that a large proportion of Protestants and nationalists voted in closely divided constituencies throughout Ulster in favor of the nationalists' candidates. So would still have the nationalist will to deal with in Ulster. Even supposing that you had a separate legislature there, the first thing the Ulster legislature would do would be to unite itself with the Dublin parliament. Driven away from the fiction of Protestant Ulster, the opponents of the bill upou this point seek refuge in the northeast corner of Ulster, consisting of three counties. Then there comes in the difference that, instead of protecting the majority of the Irish Protestants by constituting a legislature for the northeast Rev. Mr. Richard of Rogersville pubcorner of Ulster you abandon the Protes lishes another letter in the World on the tant majority to their fate under a Dublin parliament. Seven-twelfths of the Protestants in Ireland live outside of the three counties in the northeast corner of Ulster-Five-twelfths of the Protestants live in those counties. So, whatever way you put it, you must abandon the idea of protecting Protestants in Ireland by the establishment of a separate legislature either in Ulster or in any portion of

The best system of government for a country I believe to be one which requires that the government should be the result of all the forces of the country. We cannot give away to a second legislature any portion of the talent and influence of the Irish Protestants. This class will form a most valuable element in the Irish legisla ture constituting, as they will, a strong minority, and exercising through the first order, a moderate influence on the making of laws. We have heard of the danger which will beset that first trial by an untrained 'prentice' legislature. 1 regard their presence as vitally necessary in the Irish parliament. We want all creeds and classes in our parliament. ("Hear! Hear!") We cannot consent to look upon a single Irishman as not belonging to us, however much we recognise their great ability. We admit the ability of Irish Protestants and their influence, We cannot admit that there is a single one of them too good to take part in the work We admit that a small proportion fear the treatment they will receive at the hands of the Irish parliament. GLOUCESTER, Mass; June 12.-The fishing schr. "Augusta E. Herrick" arrived here on Thursday night. She has two brass six-pounders on her deck and throughout the forenoon yesterday they belched forth smoke and fire and the echoes reverberated through the hills like constant thunder. "The boys wanted to fire a salute for the Gloucester fishermen," said Capt. Herrick, "and I told them to go ahead. I did not know what might happen when I bought those guns," said he, pointing to the six-pounder amidships, the mouth of which was just perceptible over the rail. "We are going to have the rail cut down so there will be room for action. I don't believe in so much trouble on this fishery question. The fishermen here will go down to the bay for mackerel. I don't intend to go inside of the three-mile limit, but shall go after mackerel. We may be prepared for work as well as the cruisers. We can see the smoke of the 'Lansdowne' miles off and there is no trouble to get away from her and others like her. I would like to put the vessels out in good shape and go down.
