FALSE PRETENCES, -It is amusing to find the World setting itself up as an authority in military matters against the gallant Captain Cropley, who really has seen service, while the pretensions of the "great American war man" in that direction are grossly fraudulent. His stories of military experience are all as imaginary as his recitals of his prowess in other fields of conquest.

BAND at Chatham Skating Rink tonight.

"PIXIE" is evidently ahead of all other cigars in the province, as shown by th following item which appeared in th Telegraph the other day, -"Owing to the rumor of a heavy increase of duty on cigars the St. Jonn manufacturers have been filling up the revenue cash box. Yesterday the call for revenue stamps, of a Canterbury street factory, exhausted the supply, which, it is said, was an unprecedented occurrence in the history of the revenue department."

THE "WORLD" has a convenient lot of correspondents who make enquiries through its columns in reference to matters of love, jealousy, passion, design, etc. in which the editor of that paper is personally interested. To one of these he en dearingly says-"Will tell you why you'll call" to another he reveals his jealousy over the fact that the ADVANCE office prints the Public Works Report to another a similar spirit is manifested because Councillor Smith did some county printing, the World asserting that he did it under an assumed name-a statement that is, of course, untrue. The editor of the World ought to cultivate a better frame of mind, for he is treated with more toleration in Chatham than he ever was elsewhere. He might become less of a social scab than he is if he were to behave like other people and avoid manifesting his inborn qualities so frequently.

Mr. Anthony Adams' Views of the down-river Steam Service.

NEGUAC, March 22nd 1886 To the Editor of the Miramichi Advance. SIR. - I observe by the Legislative reports that Mr. Adams, M. P. P., condemned the grant to the Miramichi Steam Navigation Co., and stated the downriver boat was entirely unsuited for the service. I would like to know what Mr. Adams would consider a suitable boat. Perhaps a boat is of no public use unless it suits him or his friends' particular views and convenience. We all know the history of the Andover and the number of years she got $2000 a year subsidy; and when she was cried down for up-river how a petition was fixed up praying for a continuance of the bonus to have her run down-river in the interests of the fishermen. The public have some recollections of the service she performed by carrying a few excursionists to Bay du Vin on very fine days. We know Mr. Adams was the principal mover in getting the grant for her, now, when there is a company form, of the most public-spirited men of the County, who have pluck and energy enough to invest their own money and build suitable boats, Mr. Adams says they should get no bonus as their downriver steamer is not suited for the service.

Mr. Adams simply knows nothing about it. All he knows or cares is that me of the company are not his political friends and, therefore, should get no favors, or even Justice.

I will say that no better sea-boat of her size can be made than the Miramichi, and the lives of passengers and the freights are safe in her in any weather, and she is capable of doing all the trade required of Lecture to Farmers. Northumberland Agricultural Society did a good thing when it secured a lecture from Rev. Neil McKay, who, on Monday Esq., occupying the chair. Mr. McKay briefly to the antiquity of the farmer and shepherd as well as the superior moral illustrate the character of different soils. the effects of cropping without adequate fertilization and modes of fertilising. Under the latter head he referred to the four recognised modes of enriching land, all of which save that of employing imported manures (i. e. those brought from sources beyond the immediate soil itself) were objectionable, because of their in adequacy. He drew his illustrations chiefly from Prince Edward Island, where he had spent two pertions of his lifeseveral years between 1855 and '60 and, again, from 1872 until last year. He said that before the value of mussel-mud was known there, the farms near the rivers and coast-the older farms-were being run out, or impoverished, and the most valuable farms were the new ones, cleared out of the forests. As soon, however, as the mussel-mud was applied to the land, these depreciated farms recovered their value, in determining which the question with buyers was not as to the age of the farm, but, "how far is it from the oyster bed?" Hay, in the old days, was worth from $15 to $18 a ton on Island farms in the having season, and during the winter it used to fetch anything, from twenty to forty dollars a ton, but since the oyster, or musselmud came into use it could be had for five or six dollars per ton off the field and for eight or ten dollars during the winter. Referring to enquiries he had made by letters to farmers on the Island, with a view of placing the subject of his lecture the more intelligently before his audience, he quoted replies he had received from two well-known farmers, Hon. Alex. Laird, of Wilmot, and Mr. D. C. Ramsay, of Port Hill. Mr. Laird said that the number of miles it would pay to haul oy-Go to the Skating Rink and enjoy the ster-mud depended on the facilities available for getting other manures. Here the lecturer explained the necessity of developing the inorganic properties of the mussel-mud by the use of the organic matter in barnyard manure and say that the Rector, who was entirely vice versa Quoting Mr. Laird, again, it was shown that, in that gentleman's opinion, 20 loads of barnyard manure put Perley, on land previously mudded would pro- Dr. Black, duce as good results as 40 loads on land not previously treated with mud. Mr. Laird further stated that on his land fronting on the river, 40 horse-loads to the acre was an ordinary application. At a distance of two or three miles from the shore one half that quantity, or, even less was enough. Mr. Laird had found very little benefit from oyster mud on land that had been previously manured by eel-grass or kelp. All the crops grown are benefitted by the mud, but clover in a greater degree than any other. Mr. Laird also stated that his habit was to apply the oyster or mussel mud to the same land once in 12 or 14 years. On the subject of stock the same authority recommended-as combining good milking with beef-producing qualities-a cross of Ayrshires and Shorthorns, or, what might answer as well, the breeding of good na-

strong, but quick in its effects. Mr. Ramsay's views on the above points were in the main similar to and in most cases identical with those of Mr. Laird. Mr. Ramsay, however, was especially strong in reco.nmending the growth of fodder corn for cattle; and the lecturer here devoted some time to this branch of the subject. He especially deprecated the habit among farmers of allowing their cattle to run at large and showed that by raising green fodder and making ensilage for winter and spring feeding this might be avoided, thus saving to the land the benefit of the fertilizing material scattered about the woods and waste lands by cattle in the summer tion calling for them. she is to the public. After the vote was taken, Mr. Ellis declared that he was thoroughly in earnest in this matter. Mr. Wetmore said the house must have noticed the despatch with which the returns asked for by the hon, member for Northumberland (Mr. Burchill) in reference to applications for N. W. Miramichi lands, had been brought down in less than 24 hours after they had been asked for. He was sorry, however, that the government had not been so prompt in reference to other returns asked for. On the 4th of March a motion was made for returns of contracts, promissory notes, drafts, etc., and they have not been brought down. On the 5th a detailed statement in reference to the Dunn petition of right was asked for. On the 6th a motion was made for papers in reference to the Cape Tormentine railway, and on the 8th particulars as to appointments of shorthand reporters were asked for, as well as returns reference to sales from the stock farm. Other returns had been asked for, and yet only the N. W. Miramichi land applications had been placed on the table. Mr. Adams said no such apology would answer. The attorney general had declared that he (Adams) had passed through certain lands to his friends in face of orders in council against such a course; had insinuated that if a committee of inquiry were appointed be would be surrounded by all kinds of crime in connexion with the matter; that he had given away to his friends for little or nothing property worth $10,000. A Strange Winter.

In large portions of the north temperate zone this has been one of the most severe winters on record. In North America the cold waves have rolled further southward than anyone can remember of their ever going before, and the much talked of frost line in Florida has been moved away below the extremity of that peninsula. During one day in January snow flakes were seen flying above the Cuban orange groves. while lower Mexico and even Centra America have felt the chilly touch of northern winter. Europe has exhibited a similar severity of weather. The British Flour, Pork, Fish, Islands were very nearly frozen up altogether, and in Rome, where even ice is seldom seen, enough snow accumulated to produce good sleighing.

While other countries have endured this extreme refrigerating, our maritime provinces enjoyed a winter of exceptional mildness.
