THE ACTORS IN THE PACIFIC SCANDAL these results were predicted .(Hear.) We could not but suffer a degradation of public morals. I do not intend to deal with the grave features of that transaction, but let me recall one singular minor incident. Do you know that in 1872 there was a private bargain whereby a prominent member of Parliment secured a secret share in the Canadian Pacific Railway Company? On the surface he was to pose as the Independent for Blankton, arguing and voting on high public grounds for large subsidies and liberal treatment to the Company. In truth he was to be a partner in the concern, making profits out of his votes and his seat. ("Shame.") The facts became known, but after a decorous period of retirement he was again returned by his constituents and now fills a Ministerial office ("Shame.") If such a transaction is to be followed by political also cures Rheumatism, Sprains, Bruises, promotion, why should you be surprised | Sore Throat, and all Inflammatory trouthat it is followed by still more objection- | bles. able and scandalous relations between members and the public chest? · Why should you be surprised that

THE DISEASE HAS INFESTED ELECTORS as well as members, and that more and more openly the atrocious doctrine is disseminated that the public moneys should be appropriated, and that local claims should be regarded with reference to the political opinions of the district and the degree of support it may accord to the Government? (Hear.) Nor is this all. The patronage is abused. The officeholder is not free to vote as he wills. know a case in which a member warned an office-holder that if he voted against the Government candidate he might lose his office, in which the man did so vote, and was shuffled out of his office accord-

Thus you see that a gigantic system. o corrupt influence has been organized, by which the independent action of members and electors is checked, and the ascend-ancy of the Government is maintained up the wasted body. Our task is to break that system down! (Loud and prolonged applause.)

THE CENTRALIZATION POLICY. In another sphere of politics a most important line has been pursued by Ministers. They have attempted a course of centralization most injurious to and subversive of the federal Act. Our future depends largely on the full recognition of Syrup. the federal character of our constitution and the preservation of our local liberties. (Cheers.) But the Minister was from

on principle. (Hear.) If he could have remedy for the irritation, and cures all had his way all power would have been centered at Ottawa. He became a federalist from interest as the condition of keeping power. That power he has used so far as he dared in furthering Legislative Union. Both in framing and interpreting the constitution he has minimized its federal character. He has had many failures in his anti-Provincial campaigns, but he has attained some successes injurious to his country. Of these, late examples are the extension of the power of disallowance, the seizure of the Provincial railways, and the appropriation of the franchises. As to

HIS UNSUCCESSFUL ATTEMPTS; He early claimed the right to the issue of marriage licenses. But the Imperial authorities decided against the constitutional lawyer who has boasted so vaingloriously of his infallibility, and he was stipation, indigestion, biliousness, malarial forced to abandon his prey. (Cheers.) fever, ague, &c." and they will tell you: He claimed the right to escheats, But | Mandrake! or Dandelion!" the Privy Council decided against the view of the constitutional lawyer, and he And compounded into Hop Bitters, was forced to abandon his prey. (Cheers.) such a The Ontario Legislature had declared that the laws give a right to run timber down certain streams: and they provided for compensation for the use of the owners' improvements. The constitutional awyer averred that this Act altered, and did not declare the law; that it was a theft of the owners' property, and he disallowed it as unjust. The Privy Council decided against the views of the constitutional lawyer, that the law was such as the Ontario Legislature had declared it to be. So they had not stolen the owner's property; on the contrary, their Act was his security for compensation for a lawful use. So the last Streams Act, I believe, has not been dis allowed; we hear no more of this great outrage on the right of property: we hear no more of theft; he has been FORCED TO ABANDON HIS PREY. (Loud cheers.) Yet the wound inflicted on the Constitution is not healed; nor will be until there is at least some formal repudiation of the claim to disallow local legislation on local matters not affecting Dominion interests, simply because an Ottawa Minister may fancy the act unjust. This pretension is subversive of the chief of all Provincial Rights-that of effective legislation on local affairs. (Cheers.) THE BOUNDRIES QUESTION.

The constitutional lawyer declared that the limits of Ontario to the west did not reach Port Arthur, and to the north were the height of land. He averred that the limits of the Lake of the Woods and the Albany River were wrong, and such as could not be supported by any court or tribunal in the world. He sought to seize on a territory the size of a kingdom, which was the property of Ontario. For the paltry purpose of creating strife between Ontario and Manitoba, he assumed to hand this territory to Manitoba. She was encouraged to take possession; while Ontario was declared to be violent and wrong because she claimed her own. But company promoters, speculators, office- the Privy Council has decided against holders, contractors-all looking to Otts- | the boundary set up by the constitutional wa and begging for favours.
