A heavy gale was blowing at the time, accompanied by snow, and the fire soon spread to the buildings on the opposite side of the street. The Courier office was totally destroyed with all its contents, including type, cases, presses, etc. There was no insurance on the building, but, the stock was insured for $1800. A grocery store in the same building as the tinsmith shop: occupied by Mr. Henry Bishop, was also destroyed. It is not known how the fire originated. The three places were owned by Mrs. Miller, and she is a very heavy loser, as there was no insurance upon any of the buildings. Dr LeBlanc and N A Landry, rister, had their offices on the ground floor of the Courier building, and they lost all their books and contents of office. It is the intention of the proprietors of the Courier to start that paper again in a few weeks. They have already sent for a large power press. The Courier was a newly started paper, neatly printed in French, and had only been about seven or eight months in existence and already had over 1800 subscribers, and had been doing well in advertizing and job printing. It was started by a company, and was edited by Messrs. LeBlanc and Landry. Great credit is due to the editors for the energetic manner in which they have undertaken the re-establishment of the paper.

On Saturday last, about noon, a twostory house owned by Mr. Thomas Black, Big River, five miles east of Bathurst station, was destroyed by fire, with nearly all its contents; loss about $400; no insurance. On Sunday morning, about 10.30 o'clock, the roof of Mr. John Hachey's house, Bathurst Village, was discovered be on fire, With great difficulty the fire was extinguished with considerable damage to the roof; loss covered by insurance.

Sad Occurrence:

The following, from a Grand Ance,

ed out of last week's paper .-On Saturday last, 20th, Mr. Gustave Dumas a well-to-do and very respectable farmer went out to see a well that he was having dug some time before, but which was left to see if any amount of water would rise in it. By the position of things when seen by your correspondent. who assisted in taking the unfortunate man out of the well, it seems as if he had been measuring the depth of water, and passed, and a fashionable woman's low- slipped and fell head foremost, his head striking against one side of the well, as there were cuts on his forehead. The unfortunate man's head and shoulders were > under water there being about 21 feet of water, and death must have been in tantaneous. The well was about quarter of a mile from his house and near Grand Ance Station. Never before has anything cast such a gloom over not only a whole parish, but the whole County, as Mr. Dumas was a well-known and very much respected man. He leaves large though grown-up family, and it was very affecting to witness their grief when the remains of their kind and loving father, who left home but one hour before in good health and spirits, was brought home dead. Mr. Dumas was about 55 years of age.

Election Talk.

The people in town had country-that s, the large number of them who have been within reach of the scene of operations-have been interested, instructed and amused over the political elements at work during the past week. "That ticket," which was organized six or seven veeks ago, and whose agents—sent through the County by Messrs Ritchie, Cormier and others-to have the signatures of all who could be induced to sign 'a paper on he stumpage question" secured to itreturned with thirteen hundred who said yea while over three thousand said nav, was reported to be in the threes of disso-

It was said that its weakness arose out of the attempt to combine incongruous elements, and the rumors of objections and criticisms under this head were amusing particularly to the friends tof the Gov-

People wondered how it was that Mr. Hutchison, whose friends had always understood from him that he entertained the greatest contempt for and animosity against Mr. Adams, could now be asked by that gentleman to help him to elect Mr. Adams as his political chum and

Mr. Adams' friends, also, commented on stories they had heard Mr. Adams relate of Mr. Hutchison having grossly attempted to sell him out in the first election he ran in the County, while Mr. A. declared he would never forgive Mr. H. or promising to work in his interest in different parishes, while he treacherously worked for his opponent.

A good many people said Mr. Hutchi son wouldn't do this, but Mr. Adams authority was quoted for it and it was said there could be no mutual confidence between Messrs Adams and Hutchison. Some people came to town from the country and really could not believe that Messrs Adams and Hutchison had been indulging in "a hugging and kissing match" but after seeing certain reliable friends of both, and being assured that neither party had ever meant anything they said against the other, they wonder ed "what manner of men they were" and resolved to have nothing more to do with

Then it was said that Mr. Hutchison was in no way changed in his feelings call a truce and give the weight of his name to "the ticket" in return for the promotion of the Douglastown Branch Railway interest with the Dominion Government by Mr. Adams.

But everybody said they could see no reason why Mr. Hutchison should "sell out" over that matter as there was not a man in either Newcastle, Douglastown or Chatham but would do all in his power to help him in it.

Then, it was said, Mr. Adams had led Mr. Hutchison to believe otherwise and had induced him to start his railway business so as to put certain of his best friends in the position of apparently opposing it, in order that he might be the more easily swallowed up, absorbed and masticated by the organiser of "the ticket," who now contemplates his victim with a satisfaction expressed with the tantaliz ing "don't you wish you may get it" pantomime that is as alluring as it is dis-

Mr. Tweedie was reported to be in "beg to be excused" frame of mind, having heard that Mr. Adams was disgusted over the meagre success of the paid and other agents of the Newcastle Committee who canvassed Chatham, Glenelg, Hardwick, Nelson, etc, for signatures to the requisi-

It seems that Mr. Tweedie felt that his opposition to Messrs. Gillespie and Burchill, in the interest of the lawyers' ticket, which so unfairly slighted the large lower parishes of the County, rendered it necessary that Mr. Gillespie should be got rid of in the contest.

He, therefore, demanded that he should be made to appear as the only Chatham To this end he insisted that Mr. Gilles. pie should be appointed to the vacant postmastership of Chatham.

The talk was that Mr. Adams put his foot down on that proposition, on the ground that Mr. Gillespie had helped to vote him out of office in 1883 and had even dared to refuse to follow him in that year, as he did after the election of 1878. Mr. Adams insisted that Mr. Gillespie ought to have jumped the fence at that time, and he'd get no post-office, because he had refused to follow him into the

Fraser-Young camp. The people, hearing of the way in which the barter of offices, railway contracts, etc., were being made elements of the situation, concluded that Mr. Tweedie's should appoint the revising commissioners

Reading, "Store Teeth," by Mr. Alex. feeling that the Government was entitled to the usual two supporters from Northumberland, talked of asking a third man to take the field, so that any "post office pletely disfranchised a large number in the tive" trick" might not work successfully.

Half a dozen eligible men were spoken of, but the common choice seemed to turn to Mr. Wm. Kerr of Chatham, postmaster, would have the strongest inducements offered him to come forward

The rumor that a third man in the interest of the Government was to be put forward, caused "the ticket" and its pro- the matter of income the amendment of be again postponed. moters the greatest concern and the thirteen hundred electors who, over month ago, had been induced to sign the Gloucester Co., correspondent was crowd-

Some of the Committee, as well as o the candidates, are reported as saying that the signatures were well paid for, and the gentlemen of "the ticket" were not bound by the ordinary rules of courtesy in such matters to acknowledge the compliment so expensively canvassed for.

"By-and-bye," said one of them, "when we have a fair understanding about the post office, and the railway matter is fixed, it will be time enough to let the innocents who signed the requisition know

Meantime it became evident that the Government candidates, Messrs. Burchili and Gillespie, were gaining a strength in popular favor which made the position of "the ticket" a hopeless one, and it was at this juncture that-yesterday morningit was announced that at a meeting in Newcastle the day before, the pulling and hauling was over, the hard words and recriminations, the inconsistencies and prejudices, animosities and mistrusts, old time treacheries and divergent interests were harmonized. Mr. Tweedie joined hands in temporary alliance with Mr. Hutchison and Messrs. Adams and Park spread their hands in winking benediction over both, and the County has before it this most remarkable quartette seeking to be sent to Fredericton to fight the next four years tors are asked to vote solid for this "ticket" and leave "Old Northumberland" in the person of Mr. Gillespie, and the staunch, honest and reliable Nelson merchant, Mr. John Burchill at home. The talk is that the County would cut a fine figure in the legislature with four men in opposition.

Mr. Tweedie's friends meet this point by saying that, if elected, he would go back on the opposition of to-day as quickly as he did on the Government in 1875. after he was elected on the School bil ticket, or as Mr. Adams did in 1878, when he left Mr. Gillespie and the "Irish Brigade" he used to talk about and joined Fraser, Young & Co., or as Mr. Hutchison has left Mr. Blair-whose lead he followed while he was in the legislature-to new join Mr. Adams to whom he formerly gave the best opposition he was capable

There is no small wonder over Mr. Tweedie turning against the Government, after it has done so well by Northumberland in the matter of public expenditure. in most of which Messrs. Adams and Park

Messrs. Gillespie and Burchill, it is justly claimed, should be supported as against Messrs. Adams and Park. who opposed Northumberland getting the benefit of the Railway subsidy by which the interests of the up-river parishes have been so materially promoted-a work that will remain a monument of the Blair Govern. meat's just dealing with this county, when the political dice-throwers who oppose it are long forgotten.

People who have business down the river, and who rejoice over the good fortune of their up-river neighbors in securing the railway, wonder how Messrs. Adams and Park can claim their support, after opposing the Subsidy to the downriver steamer. Some of them say they did not hear anything of Mr. Park opposing it, but, at all events, they know how faithfully that gentleman follows Mr. Adams and they did not hear of his coming out, man-fashion, in favor of the boat, as Mr. Burchill did. But, the comment on this is that had he done so he would lose the support of the owner of the Andover who claims to share, with Mr. Adams, the proprietorship of Newcastle.

The talk in certain quarters in Nelson has been very interesting. The contractor for the bridge is down on the Government because, as he claims, Mr. Ryan was "very personal." He has to admit to his nearest friends that Mr. Adams and he both opposed the Bridge, but when they found Mr. Burchill too strong for them, they did the next best thing by having all the blunders possible made and then endeavoring to throw the blame on the inspector. Of course, the people hint that there are visions of soft snaps on stumpage around Barnaby, as in days of yore, should Mr. Adams get back to power-visions which can never be realized while an honest government is power-hence the complaints about the unfairness of bringing on the elections before the powerful influences of the Boom and toboggan-slide, could be got in full operation. Meantime the Nelson voters have made up their minds to support the Government candidates, at all events, while they may scatter a vote here and there among the "happy family" represented by the ticket."
