HAPPILY RUINED.

Arthur Morton sat in his room in his hotel. He was a young man, six and twenty, tall and slim frame, with a face of great intellectual beauty, dressed in costly garments, though his toilette was but indifferently performed.

He was an orphan, and for a time had lived at an hotel. It required but a single glance into his pale features to tell that he was an invalid. He sat with his head resting upon his hands, and his white frame would ever and anon tremble, as though with powerful emotion.

As the youth sat thus, his door was opened, and an elderly gentleman entered.

'Ah, doctor, you are moving early this morning,' said Morton, as he lazily rose from his seat and extended his hand.

'Oh, not early for me, Arthur,' returned Weston, with a bright smile. 'I am an early bird.'

'Well, you have caught a worm this time.'

'I hope it will prove a valuable one.'

'I don't know,' sighed the youth. 'I fear a thousand worms will inhabit this poor body ere long.'

'Nonsense, you're worth half a century yet,' cried the doctor, giving him a gentle slap on the shoulder. 'But just tell me, Arthur how is it with Crosby?'

'Just as I told you. All is gone.'

'I don't understand it, Arthur.'

'Neither do I.' said the young man, sorrowfully. 'That Matthew Crosby could have done that thing, I would not, could not, have believed. Why, had an angel appeared to me two weeks ago, and told me that Crosby was shaky, I would not have paid a moment's attention to it. But only think, when my father died, he selected for my guardian his best friend, and such I even now believe Matthew Crosby was, and in his hands he placed his wealth, and for him to keep until I was of age. And when I did arrive at the period of life, I left my money where it was; I had no use for it. Several times within three or four years has Crosby asked me to take my money and invest it, but I would not. I bade him keep it, and use it, if he wished. I only asked, that when I wanted money, he would honor my demand. I felt more safe, in fact, than I should have felt had my money been in a bank on deposit.'

'How much had he when he left?'

'He should have had a hundred thousand dollars.'

'What do you mean to do?'

'Ah, you have me on the hip there.'

'And yet you must do something, my son. Heaven knows I would keep you if I could. I shall claim the privilege of paying your debts, however.'

'No, no, doctor—none of that.'

'But I tell you I shall. I shall pay your debts, but beyond that I can only help you to assist yourself. What do you say to going to sea?'

A faint smile swept over the youth's pale features at this remark.

'I should make a smart hand at sea, doctor. I can hardly keep my legs on shore. No, no—I must—'

'Must what, Arthur?'

'Alas, I know not. I shall die—that is all!'

'Nonsense, Arthur, I say, go to sea. You couldn't go into a shop, and you would not if you could. You do not wish to remain here, amid scenes of your happier days. Think of it; at sea you will be free from all sneers of the heartless, and free from all contact with things you loathe. Think of it.'

Arthur started to his feet, and paced the floor for some minutes. When he stopped, a new life seemed already at work within him.

'If I went to sea what could I do?'

'You understand all the laws of foreign trade?'

'Yes. You know I had a thorough schooling at that in my father's counting house.'

'Then you can obtain the berth of a super-cargo.'

'Are you sure I can get one?'

'Yes.'

'Doctor Weston, I will go.'

* * * * * *

Arthur walked home one evening to the house of a wealthy merchant, John Melburne.

It was a palatial dwelling, and many a hopeful, happy hour had he spent beneath its roof. He rang the bell and was soon admitted to the parlor. In a few minutes Grace Melburne entered.

She was only twenty. She had been waiting until that age to be Arthur's wife.

Some words were spoken—many moments of painful silence ensued.

'Grace you know all. I am going from my native land a beggar. I cannot stay longer.

Grace, did I know you less than I do—or, knowing you well, did I know you as I do many—I should give back your vows, and free you from all bondage. But I believe I should trample on your heart, did I do that thing now. I know your love is too pure and deep to be torn from your bosom at will. So I say—wait—wait! There are other feelings in the human heart besides love. That love is poor, profitless which puts aside all other considerations. We must love for eternity, and so our love must be free. Wait. I am going to work—aye, upon the sea to work."

'But why upon the sea? Why away where my poor heart must beat ever in anguish, fear and doubt as it follows you?'

'Because I cannot remain here. Hundreds of poor fools have imagined that I shunned them because I was poor. They do not know it was the tainted atmosphere of their moral life that I shunned. They gloat over my misfortune. Men call me foolish, but it would kill me to stay here.'

'Alas, must it be?'

'It must, you will wait?'

'I will wait even to the gates of the tomb.'

'Then heaven bless and preserve you!'

* * * * * *

The ruined youth was upon the ocean—his voyage commenced—his duties as laborer for his own daily bread all fairly assumed.

Ah, it was a strange life for him to enter upon. From the ownership of immense wealth to the trade books of a merchant ship, was a transition indeed! But, e're he went on deck again, he fully resolved that he would do his duty, come what would, short of death.

He would forget that he ever did else but work for his livelihood. With these resolves clearly defined in his mind he already felt better.

At first our supercargo was too weak to do much. He was very sick, and it lasted nearly two weeks, but when that passed off, and he could pace the vibrating deck with a sthut stomach, his appetite grew sharp, and his muscles began to grow strong.

At first he craved some of the many delicacies he had been long used to, but they were not to be had, and he very soon learned to do without them.

The result was that his appetite became natural in its wants, and his system began to find itself nourished by simple food taken in proper quantities.

For years he had looked upon breakfast as a meal that must be set out and partaken of from mere fashion. A cup of coffee, and perhaps a piece of dry toast, or a seasoned and highly spiced titbit had constituted the morning meal.

But now, when the breakfast hour came, he approached it with a keen appetite, and felt as strong and hearty as at any other time of the day.

By degrees the hollow cheeks became full, the dark eyes assumed new lustre, the color rich and healthful, came to the face, the breast swelled with increasing power, the lungs expanded and grew strong, the muscles became more firm and true, the nerves grew strong, and the garments which he had worn when he came on board had to be let out some inches in order to make them fit.

His disposition became cheerful and bright, and by the time the ship had reached the southern cape of Africa the crew had all learned to love him.

Through storm and sunshine, through tempest and calm, through dark hours and bright, the young supercargo made his voyage.

In one year from the day which he left his native land, he placed his foot again on the soil of his home.

But he did not stop. The same ship, with the same officers, was going upon the same cruise, and he meant to go in her. He saw Grace Melbourne and she would wait. He saw Dr. Weston and the kind old gentleman praised him for his manly independence.

Again Arthur Morton was upon the sea, and again he assumed the duties of his office and even more. He even stood watch when there was no need of it, and during seasons of storm he claimed a post on the deck.

At the end of another year the young man returned to his home again. He was now eight and twenty and few who knew him two years before could recognize him now. His face was bronzed by exposure, his form was filled out to perfection and he was greeted with great effusion by old Dr. Weston, who would insist on his staying with him during his leave on shore. On the day after Arthur's arrival he suddenly burst in the room and said, abruptly—

"Well, Arthur, Mr. Crosbie is here, will you speak to him?"

"See him? See Matthew Crosbie? Of course I will. He owes me an explanation and I hope he can give me a satisfactory one."

The door was opened and Mr. Crosbie entered.

He was rather an elderly man but hale and hearty.

The old man and the young one shook hands and each inquired after the other's health.

"You received a note from me some two years ago," said Crosbie, "in which I stated that one in whom I trusted had got your money and mine with it, and that I could not pay you."

"Yes, sir," answered our hero, not knowing what was to come next.

"Well," resumed Crosbie, "Dr. Weston was the man. He had your money.'

"How? What?" gasped Arthur, gazing from one to the other in blank astonishment.

"Hold on my boy," said the doctor, while a thousand emotions seemed to work in his bosom. "I was the villian. It was I who got your money. I worked your ruin my boy. And now listen and I will tell you why: I saw that you were dying. Your father died of the same disease. A consumption was upon him—not a regular pulmonary affection; but a wasting away of the system for want of vitality. The mind was wearing out the body. The soul was slowly but surely eating its way from the chords that bound it to the earth. I knew that you could be cured, and I knew, too, that the only thing in the world that would cure you would be to throw you upon your own physical resources for a livelihood. There was a morbid willingness of the spirit to pass away. You would have died ere you would make an exertion, from the very fact that you looked an exertion as worse than death. It was a strange state of both mind and body. Your fortune rendered work unnecessary, so there was no hope while that fortune remained. Had it been wholly a bodily malady I could have argued you into necessary work for a cure. And on the other hand, had it been wholly a mental disease, I might have driven your body to help your mind. But both were weak, and I knew that you must either work or die.

'And now, my boy, I'll tell you where my hope lay. I knew that you possessed such a true pride of independence that you would work. I saw Crosby and told him my plans. I assured him that if we could contrive to get you to sea and make you start out into active life for the sake of a livelihood, you could be saved. He joined me at once. I took your money and then bid him clear out. You know the rest. Your money is safe—every penny of it—to the amount of a hundred and fifty thousand pounds. Poor Crosby has suffered much, knowing how you looked upon him; but I know that he is amply repaid by the sight of your noble, powerful-frame, as he sees it to-night. And now, Arthur, are we forgiven?'

It was a full hour before all the questions of the happy friends could be asked and answered; and when the doctor and Crosby had been forgiven and blessed for the twentieth time, Mr. Melbourne said—

'Wait!'

He left the room and when he returned he led sweet Grace by the hand.

Late in the evening, after the hearts of our friends had fairly begun to grow tired with joy, Arthur asked Grace whether he need wait any longer.

Grace asked her father and the answer may easily be guessed.

LIVER COMPLAINT.

SYMPTOMS Yellow eyes, Sallow Complexion, Pain Under Right Shoulder, Alternate Costiveness and Diarrhœa, Tongue Coated with dark heavy Slime, Dull Spirits, Weariness, Sick Headaches, Variable Appetite, Poor Circulation, Debility, &c.

CAUSE The Liver being the largest Glandular Organ, and a filterer of the Blood, is oftener diseased than most other Organs, both in animal and human beings. Its cheif office besides is to Secrete Bile, which is the Natural Cathartic to the Bowels. Whatever then deranges the Blood or Bile—as improper food, bad drinks, bad air, cold, malarial poison, bad drainage, etc.; or whatever will clog up the Bile Ducts will induce Liver Complaint.

CURE The Diet should be Plain and Nourishing to make Pure Blood and Healthy Bile. Shun the causes above enumerated. Keep the Bowels free, and the Digestive Powers active, and

Arouse the Sluggish Liver with that Grand Liver Regulator

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Which acts at the same time upon the Bowels, Stomach and Blood, while it regulates and strengthens every Organ.

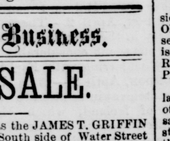
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.



CURE

Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

SICK

Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured

HEAD

Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them. In vials at 25 cents; five for $1. Sold by druggists everywhere, or sent by mail.
