So the harsh answer went back to the young Benedict that, as he had adopted his own course in the marter, the writer could scarcely see how he could be expected to interfere at the present date; 'but,' concluded his father, 'you and your wife may come home.'

We may go home my darling!' whispered Teddy Adams to his young wife. 'We may go home; but I won't let you go alone, as I know you'll be much happier here, and there's no danger but what we'll get along.' And with a mock, stern command not to worry, handsome, impulsive Teddy Adams started on his long winter trip. A queer little smile played around the dimpled mouth of Teddy's wife, as reading a morning paper, a day or two after-ward, her eyes chanced to light upon for an organist, determined to come up the following advertisement: W ANTED AT THE "LORIE"—A LADY organist for the Baptist Church.
