A SPLENDID MERMAID.

'I was one day out a-fishing,' said an old salt to a London newspaper man, 'in about three fathoms of water.

'It was a cold October day, the water very quiet. There was codlings, whitings, poutings and like of such fish to catch in plenty, and I rowed out to see if I could airn a shillin'.

'Well when I came to the place where I reckoned the fish was, I threw in my oars, picked up the boat's anchor and chucked it overboard.

'Guess my surprise and annoyance when I found that some one had been and gone and cut the cable close to where it was made fast in the boat. It was the doing of some boys, I suppose; but, anyways, the anchor took the cable, and away went the whole consarn.

'It was a new rope, and I had no notion of loosing it and my little anchor as well; so I took a fishing line, put some extra weights upon it, and secured the other end to a little cork fender, with which I buoyed the spot, and then rowed home again for a loan of a creep.

'A creep, I may tell ye, is a contrivance for sweeping the bottom of the water with, to bring up anything ye may have lost.

'Well, I got the loan of one, and called to Jimmy Dadds, a chap of about 18 years old, to come out and give me a hand, promising him half a pint. We rowed out, came to the place, and he began to row quietly, while I chucked the creep over.

'It hadn't been down two minutes when it came across something that felt soft. It wasn't to be pulled up easy. The hold of it anchored the boat.

'What the blazes have we hooked here!' says I to Jimmy, feeling whatever it was wobbling, as it might be, upon the creep, and yet refusing to come up.

'Come and len's us a hand.'

'He got up laid hold of the line, and hauled with me. What was coming we couldn't imagine.

'The feel, I tell ye, was quite sing'lar. It wasn't like a piece of wreck; it wasn't like a fish; it wasn't like being foul of a rock. There was a kind of swaying and softness about it, as if the object was alive and was hoiding on to prevent being drawed up.

'"Haul"! says I.

'We bent our backs and started the object out of its moorings below; and what d'ye think came up?

'Why, sir, there popped half out of water the beautifullest female as ever yet set eyes on! She looked right at us, and I never see such a smile as she had.

'She seemed to be covered with jewels, and her black hair was all wreathed about with seaweed. She had one arm raised out of water, and this was stretched out to us as if she entreated us to leave her alone.

'Jim, who was the most ignorant fool of a lad that ever I met, at sight of her gives a screech and tumbles right backwards into the bottom of the boat.

'His falling threw the line out of my hand. The woman disappeared, and when I hauled up the creep for it again the irons came up naked.

'I own I was a bit scared myself, but not so alarmed that I wasn't anxious to go on creeping for her again. But Jimmy refused to have anything more to do with it. He said no; he come out to sweep for an anchor, he didn't want no dealings with apparitions. As to the half-pint, I might drink it myself. What he required was to be put ashore.

'However, I wasn't going to leave without my anchor, so I gets the boat into position again, and at the first throw of the creep I brings up the cable I then rowed Jimmy ashore, where, meeting a couple of men, I tells them of the apparition that came up, and invites them to come out and try if another sight could be got of her.

"Well, they consented, but though I could have swore we swept over the place twenty times we never hooked on to the object. It got talked about, and others tried, but to no purpose.

"Jimmy's yarn made people believe it was a mermaid. Fact is, he was in such a state of funk, he saw a good deal more than I did, or that any other man that hadn't lost his head would.

'He said she motioned with her hand, as though to drive us away, and that her eyes sparkled. I couldn't deny myself that she looked as if her dress was coated with jewels and pearls, at least as much of her dress as I could see; and there's no denying, also, that her hair was a beautiful black, and as she rose to the surface, looked to be floating and filling under the seaweed that hung about her hair so gracefully you might ha' swore it was her sweetheart's doing."

'But it wasn't a mermaid, of course,' said I.

'Well, I dun know, I m sure,' he answered.

'The newspapers said,' exclaimed another man, 'that it must ha' been a ship's figurehead.'

'Aye,' said another seaman, with some little show of resentment, as though refuting an argument that annoyed him. 'It's all very fine saying it might have been a figurehead. But why was it never come across again? How was it that me and the scores of others who tried for it never could hook it?'

'I'm not going for to say that she was alive, for I ain't such a fool as Jimmy; but neither are ye going to get me to believe that the smiling, beautiful figure as rose up glittering with jewels was a carvin' out of wood, and so I tells ye. What it was I dun no, but I do know what it warn't.'

And, after this wise speech, looking very gravely at me, he filled his pipe afresh and sat smoking thoughtfully.

Don't.

From an English print of the above title we take the following article on things not to do in public:

Don't neglect to keep the right of the foot-path; otherwise there may be collisions and much confusion.

Don't brush against people, nor elbow people, nor in any way show disregard for others.

Don't fail to apologise if you tread upon or stumble against any one, or if you cause inconvenience in any way. Be considerate and polite always.

Don't stare at people, nor laugh at any peculiarity of manner or dress.

Don't point at persons or objects. Don't forget to be a gentleman.

Don't carry a cane or umbrella in a crowd horizontally. This is a common trick, and a very annoying one to the victims of it.

Don't smoke in the street, unless in unfrequented ones. Don't smoke in public vehicles. Don't smoke in any place where it is likely to be offensive. Wherever you do indulge in a cigar, don't puff smoke into the face of any one, man or woman.

Don't expectorate on the pavement. Go to the curb-stone and discharge the saliva into the gutter. Men who eject great streams of tobacco-juice on the pavement, or on the floors of public vehicles, ought to be driven out of civilized society.

Don't eat fruit or anything else in the public streets. A gentleman on the promenade, engaged in munching an apple or a pear, presents a more amusing than edifying picture.

Don't obstruct the entrance to churches, theatres, or assemblies. Don't stand before hotels or other places and stare at passers by. This is a most idle and insolent habit.

Don't smoke in a non-smoking compartment. Remember the rights and the comfort of others. Tobacco smoke always leaves an unpleasant smell.

Don't forget to raise your hat to every lady acquaintance you meet, and to every gentleman you salute, when he is accompanied by a lady, whether you know her or not.

Don't stop your lady acquaintances in the street if you wish to speak to them; turn and walk by their side, and leave them with raised hat when you have done.

Don't neglect to raise your hat to a strange lady if you have occasion to address her. If she drops her handkerchief, and you pick it up for her raise your hat.

Don't be in haste to introduce. Be sure that it is mutually desired before presenting one person to another.

Don't, in a walk, introduce your companion to every person you may chance to meet. Off-hand street introductions are rarely called for, and commonly serve no end.

Don't ask questions of strangers indiscriminately. Young women run risks in approaching unknown people with questions, and they should scrupulously avoid doing so. In travelling inquire of the guard or of some official; in the street, wait until a policeman can be found.

Don't be over-civil. Do not let your civility fall short, but over-civility is a mistake.

Don't rush to pick up a man's hat, don't pick up any article that a stranger or companion may drop, unless there are special reasons for doing so. Be prompt to pick up anything that a lady lets fall, and extend this politeness to elderly or infirm men. But haste to wait on equals is over-civility; it has a touch of servility, and is not sanctioned by the best usage.

Don't talk aloud in a railway carriage, and thus prevent your fellow passengers from reading their book or newspaper.

Don't deceive intending travellers by putting your luggage about the seat to make believe the seats are all taken.

Don't rush for a seat in a carriage, in church, or at a public entertainment, in utter disregard of every one else, pushing rudely by women and children, hustling men who are older or less active, and disregarding every law of politeness. If one should on an occasion of this kind, lose his seat in consequence of a little polite consideration, he would have the consolation of standing much higher in his own esteem—which is something.

Don't bustle into a church after the commencement of service, or into a theatre or concert after the performance has begun, to the annoyance of others. Arrive early and be seated in time. The manager who will resolutely refuse permission for any one to enter an auditorium after the curtain has risen, will win for himself a golden meed of praise.

Don't, if you go into a church or any place of worship, show any contempt for the service. You are not obliged to go there, but if you do you are bound to respect the feelings of others, and as nearly as possible follow the customs of the regular worshippers.

Don't, if you go to a strange church, decline to contribute to the offertory on the grounds that you do not like the service.

Don't beat time at a concert with your foot or stick, and don't hum the time with the orchestra.

Don't talk at the theatre or at a concert when the performance is going on. To disturb others who wish to listen is gross ill breeding; but, unfortunately, it is common with the very class who pretend to an exclusive share of good breeding.

Don't at any public performance make a move to leave the auditorium before the performance is over. Men who recklessly and selfishly disturb public assemblies in this way have the instincts of savages, not of gentlemen.
