'Are you in pain, Janie? 'No; not particularly. Only think, I dare not read aloud to you any more. I begin to think that comical genius, Sir Boyle Roche, was exceedingly correct when he said that 'the greatest of all calamities was generally followed by one much greater.' It seems so, actually. 'Well, Janie, here I am at last!' Cleo exclaimed an hour later flashing

'Well, Janie, do you know the most romantic incident has occurred this afternoon? Really, I do actually begin to think there must have been some one around practicing black art, whatever that may be. There, now, don't commence to lose your patience, and I'll begin and tell you the whole odd occurrence right from the start. I went to the Gallery first, of course, and gave in my work and got my money, all of it—three big, round dollars, if you please. Then I went to the market to get something nice for you. From there I went over to Mr. Norton's drug store, and I told him I wanted a flask of his very best wine, and I wanted it just as cheap as he could let me have it, and do you know—now don't say a word. I know you are fixing to scold me for my 'shameful extravagance,' but you need-n't, for I haven't got any,' she explains, ternoon? The time is six weeks later.

To the two sisters the long, hot summer days seemed to have fairly rushed.

and I was in a dreadful dilemma. I finally decided, though, that the best thing would be to make a scamper for home as fast as my feet would carry me. So I took a fresh grip on all my bundles, and was just striding along with my most Elizabethan-like strides, when that most exasperating shoe of mine came untied—of course, I would have on those thin, low things. That was in the plot, you see. I was going wildly along, breaking my heart thinking how muddy my skirts and the tassels were getting—you know these are my grand tention than did these two unfortunate orphan sisters. There has been absolutely nothing left undone that he could compass for their benefit, or amusement or pleasure. Baskets of choicest fruits and most lovely flowers; tickets for splendid concerts; invitations for delightful yachting excursions all found their way to the young ladies' humble abode; and I may add, likewise, the donor of these gifts also finds his way there with surprising frequency.

'Is that so? Well, well! After that, the Deluge! By-the-way, you were in one at the time. I am amazed. It was fate, my dear—it was written. Well, and—go on—what did he do, and what did he say?' Janie questions in a most fluttering state of interest.

'Say? If you believe me, I never said anything. I couldn't! and I shall and you'll blush for me' I know, when I tell you that I actually stood there and began to whimper. Yes positively, I did, and couldn't help it neither, And what did he do? Two days later there comes another exquisite bouquet and a note in which tickets are enclosed for a lecture. 'What are the tickets for, Cleo?'

'They are for a lecture that is to be given this evening at Temple Hall, and he hopes to see us there. How is it with yon, Janie? Do you think you are able to walk so far?'
