FORGER WANTED. - Police Magistrate Murray has received a circular from Cyrus Small, Superintendent of the Boston police, asking for information that will lead to the arrest of Eugene W. Witt, who is wanted on an indictment for forgeries, aggregating about $10,000. Witt is described as about 30 years of 150 pounds; has light complexion, and heavy red beard, but when he left had had a large tumor or abscess on the right jaw. Witt is a member of the bar and also studied medicine at the Boston College but did not get a diploma. He may be practicing either profession and will likely be travelling with some quack doctor giving lectures on physiology and medicine, or with some theatrical or vari ety company. He was accompanied by his mother, who is about 60 years of age, full medium size, fair complexion, Grecian nose, red hair, now turned grey. The Yacht Club's Championship Race. The race for the Vice Commodore's championship pennant, sailed on Thurs. day, from Black Brook to Oak Point and back, was the most closely contested of the season. The day was perfect. There was a good northerly breeze, which was not at all cold, and the water was not choppy enough to send spray into the boats. The yachts were ready at 11 o'clock, but the steamer Derby, with the Chatham party, was so late in arriving that it was afternoon when the start was effected. The competitors were Fisherman, Kilbride, Kittoch and Welcome Home. Fedora, without a racing crew, sailed over the course with part of her canvas set, but was not in the race. Kitage, five feet eight inches high, weight toch crossed the line promptly, at the extreme windward position, with Fisherman close behind. Kilbride followed, only a moustache; he has a feminine some distance in the rear, and Welcome Best Eve any age, A. G. M. Gillis 1 50 "sissy" voice. Kilbride, closehauled, followed in their wake, apparently trying to get to windward of them. All three were, as the result of these tactics, steadily working to the northward of the true course. Fisherman got past Kittoch, but still held on to the same course, to the astonishment of everybody in the steamer and on shore who knew the location of Murdock's Point buoy. In the meantime, Welcome Home, far to the southward, was steering a straight course for the Napan buoy, and had got a considearble lead because she was not close hauled like the others. The crews of Kilbride and Kittoch strained their eyes in search of Murdock's Point buoy, but couldn't find it. Kilbride finally broke off from the rear of buoy, and the Fisherman and Kittoch Kittoch in the reach for the buoy, and rounded it close on Fisherman's heels, man and Kilbride soon began another fight for the windward position, and, after they had worked themselves a good way out of a straight line between the buoys, Kilbride dashed past her rival in a hot puff that gave both boats all they could stand up under. Welcome Home, undisturbed by the near presence of any competitor, had made a straight course for the Mussel Bank buoy, rounding it and starting for Napan buoy with started sheets while her nearest competitors were still afar off. Kilbride rounded next, Fisherman 18 seconds later, and Kittoch over a minute and a half behind Fisherman. It was a broad reach across to the Napan buoy. Fisherman passed Kilbride on the way over, and was the second to round it, haul her sheets home close, and head the Murdock's Point buoy was gone courses were steered without regard to it. It was soon apparent to all that Welcome Home's lead was steadily diminishing. The other three crawled up on her steadily, Kittoch gaining faster than either of the others. Fisherman passed her, when pretty well up, and Kittoch, she crossed the finish line, being but one second behind, Kilbride being eight seconds behind her. Fisherman had crossed less than a minute before. No better after passing Kilbride, lapped her before finish was ever seen in a yacht race, the three crossing, after a ten or twelve mile race, within nine seconds of each other. A spectator, not in an exact line between the wharf and the mark boat, could not tell which was over first. Kittoch had done the best windward work on the homestretch, having tacked but once while the others tacked three times. She was sailed very carefully, and given a shoot to windward in every hot puff. Fisherman had not saved her time off the others, and when allowances were calculated it appeared that Kilbride had won by 13 seconds. A question regarding measurement was raised by Mr. Loggie, and Mr. Miller explained that his boat had not been measured on the water line, the overhang having been guessed at and

"Merry May," of Rustico, P. E. I., fell from that vessel's rigging to the deck and was picked up in a unconscious state. Dr. C. T. Weeks was summoned and had the man removed to comfortable quarters in Paul Le Goff's. Two of the man's ribs on the right side were parted and he was considerably "shook up" by the fall. The accident happened on Friday last and on Monday Doiron was able to return to his vessel and proceed to Rustico on Tuesday.
