BY MARY C. FRESTON. I wouldn't stand it! said Myra Be with a flash in her blue eyes, which would make one think she really would not stand much without protest. But I know he loves me best of all gently answered her stately, dark-eyed friend Ione Valon. If I had a doubt of his affection I would set him free to-day; but much as he pains me, greatly as he sometimes seems to ne glect me, I know that in his heart he cares for no woman as he does for me.

A faint color was in her olive cheeks, a touch of pain shadowed her steady, gentle eyes, but Myra tossed her blonde head angrily.

Then let him prove it, she said sharply. Why, one might swear he was the lover of that cousin of Jack's, he hangs about her so constantly since she came here. I just met them now riding together. Why don't you pay him back in similar coin? Flirt with some nice fellow and have a merry time as he has.

Ione smiled. Pray, where would I find the man who would permit me to flirt with him? she asked, leaning back indolently in her garden chair, a slight curl on her young lip. Myra, you are laughing at

Not I, asserted Myra, bringing down a little foot with some show of force on the green sward; let me loan you my Jack.

What! Ione sat erect, genuinely surprised. You would have me flirt with Jack Atherton, my dear Myra? I know that Jack was over his ears in love with you two years ago, said Myra laughingly. He told me all about it when he asked me to wear his ring; but that is all over and Jack loves me now and I love Jack; but I want you to let him play the devoted ad mirer to you for a month or so, just to see how Boy Howel likes it. He doe n't know Jack is anything to me, and when he finds him at your side half the time he may give you more of his own precious time and less to every precious girl he meets. See here, Ione, if he really loves you it will teach him that it is possible to lose and, dear, I love you too well to look on and see you neglected as you have been lately. May I tell Jack?

A painful flush was on Ione's face; she tried to smile but her lips quivered Ah, it had stung her sorely, even her perfect faith, to find that any fair face could lure her lover, and that he could go hither and thither with devotion that he had pledged to her.

Yes; I will try the experiment, she said at last, and Myra sprang up and kissed her.

Do, dear, she said eagerly; and here he comes now, riding like a prince through the sunlight. Ione, begin today-this very hour! Go in and don your riding dress; tell them to saddle your pretty pony, and while you're gone I will explain to Jack. You shall ride with him to-day—every day! and now go, Ione, go; hurry! Be ready in ten minutes or I'll not loan you my precious

So, half coaxed, half pulled out of her chair, Ione stood up and went toward the house, while Jack Atherton, in obedience to a small beckoning hand, turned in at the gate and cantered up the drive.

Now, Jack was a handsome young man as one might care to see, with a bronzed, laughing face and a pair of sunny dusky eyes, and it was no secret in the pretty little town that he had been very much in love with Ione Valon, while the transfer of his affections to Myra was a secret between the lovers; so, when twenty minutes later, he and Ione mounted at the door and rode down the drive and out to the sunlight of a fair June day the laughter of his firm, handsome lips and the hot color on Ione's young face might very escort when mine is at your serviceeasily be misread.

Such a pretty girl as Jack's cousin forget me sometimes. was-all pink and white daintiness and big gray eyes and flossy, golden hairbut Roy Howel, riding with her beside the river, suddenly turned from her dainty loveliness to look after the dark eyed girl whom he had neglected for

That was cousin Jack; who is the lady! asked Miss Atherton, after they had passed with a few merry words. Miss Valon.

Ah! He has been in love with her, then, for a long time. I hope she cares for Jack, he is such a noble fel-

Miss Valon is betrothed, he said distinctly.

Jack? No; to another.

The pretty, babyish lips widened in a soft, merry laugh, which somehow did not please the youth. Then let that other man look to it; let him guard him from my fascinating cousin, she said, or Jack will steal his sweetheart; for Jack is one of the very nicest young men I have ever met, Mr. Howel, and such men as he seldom woo in vain. You know him though. Yes, I know him, but I have found nothing wonderful in his composition. The sun is setting, Miss Atherton: will we return homeward?

Yes, and wh en we ride to-morrow-Pardon me; but I have an engagement which will prevent my riding tomorrow.

She looked at him in wonder; for a month he had been her daily cavalier; was the pleasant flirtation at an end and her visit only half finished

Ah! perhaps he had heard of her engagement to Leonard Blaine, the dandy of her native city, and that was why he would not ride with her on the mor-spoil her visit by giving up those long, lovely rides, those delightful rows on the river; and when she parted with him at her uncle's he had torgotten all his slight uneasiness concerning Jack and his betrothed, and had promised to give Miss Atherton a row the afternoon of the day that would follow on

To-morrow I will give to Ione, he thought generously; I'll call around tonight and ask her at what hour she will be ready. Guess I'll take her for a drive. Poor child! she must have missed me lately.

But when he called at Io ne's home in the evening he did not find her, as usual waiting to welcome him with lovelit eyes and shy sweet glances; she had gone with Mr. Atherton to spend the evening at Myra's.

He started: she didn't miss him so greatly, after all, then.

He sat on the verandah chatting with Mr. Valon until the evening was far spent, and then Ione and Jack came slowly up the patch, his mellow laugh flowing out on the still air, followed by the girl's silver ripple of merriment. It irritated Roy, why he could not have

Now say something decidedly cool to him, Jack whispered to his companion when he saw the waiting lover; and Roy saw the bent head the devoted attitude, the whispering lips of Jack; but then he knew how her face would light at sight of him. What was Jack Ather-

She ran lightly up the steps and gave him the most careless, indifferent greeting in the world.

I am glad papa was not alone! she said cheerfully, taking the chair Jack drew for her, although Roy had drawn one forward too. Had I known you were here I might have remained an hour longer; and the evening had been so pleasant.

Roy felt as though he had dreamed a dream and was awaking from it. Was this his gentle, adoring sweetheart.

Jack, stationed at her chair back, gave an inward chuckle. Roy stood there, unbending and unsmiling.

I have waited to see you, Ione, he said distinctly, in a tone touched with annoyance. I want to ask at what hour I may take you for a drive to Palmer. You said once that you would like to go Too late, old fellow, put in Jack with she was not looking at him; her dark eyes, smiling and soft, were turned upward to meet a glance—as tender as he could make it-from Jack.

You will not go with me to-morrow Roy asked her. I have promised to go with Ja-Mr.

Then you will ride with me on the following day?

Our tennis battle comes off that day eminded Jack softly. Roy turned upon him with a frown. You seem to monopolize Miss Valon's time, he said curtly.

I would like to, was Jack's unmoved nswer, and then, thinking he had done all required of him, he took his

Mr. Valon had disappeared, and the betrothed lovers were alone, and Ione was as cool and serene as Roy was hot and angry.

See here, Ione, he began, this is the first time you have treated me in this manner, and I want to understand it Are you going to throw me over for Jack Atherton? Be honest with me.

Does my being civil to him annoy

Never, my darling, he cried passionately, dropping on his knee beside her chair and putting his arm about her; never for an hour of my life! And I will promise you that, after keeping some engagement which I have made with Miss Atherton, I will not even look at her again if I can help it. You'll go with me to-morrow, Ione, and send Jack an excuse? No, Roy; since you intend to keep an engagement with Miss Atherton I will keep mine with her cousin.

He remembered the words of the blonde, Jack may steal his sweetheart.

Do you know, he said suddenly, that I am jealous of Jack Atherton? Don't tease me if you love me, dear. Then give me some consideration,
