was six o'clock. Mr. Mitchell then crossed over to Sir Hector and said to him that it was not treating the people who were interested in the bill fairly, that he knew that many members would be away that night, that private bills would occupy the House probably to half-past nine-as the big fight between the G. T. R. and the C. P. R. was to come after recess-and that it was not much of a concession to devote the balance of the evening to other government measures and defer this bill to next Government day (Tuesday). He stated to Sir Hector that he, personally, had done everything in his power to promote Government business and had not given any obstruction to their measures.

Hector admitted this but said that Council had fixed the matter and ha had to go on as they decided.

Mr. Mitchell then told him that such treatment would not tend in the future to promote the despatch of their business, and the Government would gain nothing conversation took place close to arles Tupper's seat, who interfered in the discourse and said to Mr. Mitchell: "Your impudent threat, sir, will preclude the Government from deferring to your

At this insulting language Mr. Mitchell turned upon him and asked him how he dared to address him in that impertinent way. Mr Mitchell said, "I was addressing the leader of the House, Sir Hector Langevin, not you, and your interference is both impertinent and uncalled for and don't dare to repeat it to me," and as Sir Charles passed out Mr. Mitchell said, "I am not one of your serfs to do as he is told and although you evidently control Sir John Macdonald you cannot control

In answer to Sir Richard Cartwright, Sir Charles Tupper said he expected to make the budget speech on Tuesday and to lay the supplementary estimates on the table before that day.

Sir Charles Tupper gave notice to-night of a resolution relating to the latest deal with the Canadian Pecific Railway Company. In consideration of the company giving up their monopoly the government agree to guarantee interest on $15,000,000 worth of C. P. R. bonds at 3 per cent. for 50 years, the bonds to be secured by the company's lands which will be administered by three trustees, one of whom shall be a cabinet minister and two others appointed subject to the approval of the government. The proceeds of the land sales are to go towards the payment of interest on, and principal of, the bonds. All land grant bonds issued by the com- it to run out. Its departure may be expany up to the present, and still held by them, are to be cancelled and in case the Pacific company sell or lease the Pembina brauch railway the proceeds of such sale or lease are to go into the fund for the redemption of the guaranteed bonds OTTAWA, April 23.

It is understood that the House will adjourn to-day until to-morrow evening to enable members to go to Montreal with Mr. White's remains

Owing to the death of Hon. Mr. White and the adjournment of Parliament, Sir Charles Tupper will not deliver his budget speech on Tuesday, but will give it on Friday instead.

Sir John Macdonald was completely prostrated at the news of Mr. White's de cease and the other members of the cabinet feel the loss of their colleague keenly. All kinds of rumors are affect as to who will be Mr. White's successor. Here are some of them: G. R. R. Cockburn (Toronto), Hop. Mr. Kirkpatrick, J. C. Patterson (Essex), Adam Brown, (Hamilton), Rykert (Lincoln). White (Renfrew), Hesson (Perth), Haggart (Lanark) and Dr. Ferguson (Welland). It is well known that there was to be a general shuffle in portfolios after the present session closed, but Mr. White's death will complicate matters very much. It was not out of the range of possibilities that Mr. White would have been transferred to the finance department it being generally understood that Sir Charles was to return to London as high | ris & Son's commissioner.

OTTAWA, April 23. In the House of Commons, to-day, after routine, Sir Hector Langevin, in moving the adjournment of the house, said the death of Mr White was a terrible blow and they all deplored his loss. Mr. White, for a good many years, had been connected with the government and had rendered good service. After participating with vigor in political warfare, he was always ready to shake hands with his opponent. When the choice of Mr. White was made, as a member of the government, it was universally considered that it was an excellent one. He had passed away, he hoped, leaving not a single enemy behind. The motion was then made that the house adjourn until Wednesday at 3

Hon. Mr. Laurier seconded the motion. He said that struggling, as they were, in 1867. every day in political strife, men were apt to forget that they were of one kindred, and they never realised a man's worth until he was gove. Mr. White's untiring industry and diligence, his ability and eloquence and his great knowledge of public affairs stamped him as one of the foremost of our public men. His sudden death served to recall those words of Burke: "What shadows we are and what shadows we pursue."

The house then adjourned till Wednes. ing one.

It is understood that the budget speech will not be elivered till Friday. The supplementary estimates for 1888 were submitted by Sir Charles Tupper this afternoon. They amount to $1,794. 922, of which $458.200 is to be charged to capital; $98,600 to rebellion expenses and $1,238,121 to income. Thomas Crimmen. Savings bank agent at Newcastle, N. THEY SHOULD COME TO CHATHAM:-The St. John Sun reports that two girls, sisters, named Morrill, belonging to Moncton arrived in that city by train, having gone there to look for employment, but, finding none, they returned to the railway station which they wished to enter for the purpose of taking the track to walk back to Moncton, having no money to pay their way on the train. Officer Stevens, however, could not allow them to do that, and, with his usual kindness of heart, he made their case known to several gentlemen about the station who contributed sufficient money to purchase tickets for the disappointed girls, who returned home. If the girls were seeking employment as domestic servants they should have come to Chatham, where they would be sure to obtain it. Girls who have pluck enough to undertake a journey on foot from St. John to Moncton might be relied on for the possession of the good qualities which usually win success in life.

Ten years after he retired from that partnership and formed another, in the same business, with the late Mr. Locke (better known as Petroleum V, Nasby) under the name of Bates & Locke. In 1878 Mr. Locke retired, Mr. Bates, since that time, continuing alone, and in 1886, buying out the business of his first partner. S. M Pettingill, and merging it with his own. In his transactions as an advertising agent Mr. Bates has paid about $15,000,000 in cash to the press of the United States and Canada, and we can say from our own experience, that he carries on all his operations in a bona fide way, pays his bills promptly and never resorts to any but legitimate methods in making either engagements or settlements. It is no reflection on the comparatively few other good advertising houses in New York to say that Mr. Bates leads them all in the fairness of his transactions, for they nearly all resort to "tricks of the trade" with a majority of self-styled and so-called advertising agents are little better than confidence operators. We, therefore, wish him continued success and enlarged busiress in his new offices.

MR. FAIREY ON NEW BRUNSWICK AS A FIELD Mr. R. Fairey gave an address on the above subject, at the Liberal Club, on Wednesday week. Deprecating, at the outset, the ambitious title of "lecture. which appeared against his name on the handbills announcing the Wednesday club-evenings, he explained that he would much prefer that it should be called a and an Idyl," H. L. Spencer relates a ro-"little talk." He remembered going once to a Unitarian Church in New York, where he anticipated the usual placid ser vice with an orthodox sermon to follow. Somewhat to his surprise, the Pastor on taking his place on the rostrum, announced that on that evening he proposed to vary the procedure somewhat. He would first the Old Northumberland? He has also left ask the choir to give them a few choice selections, and would then descend from notions relative to tasteful apparel. His long residence there entitled him to say that he was fairly familiar | especially deserving of commendation. with the place, its conditions and prospects. Ceded to Great Britain by the French in 1763, after much sanguinary warfare, the early records of New Brunswick exemplify, very well, the methods by which many of our colonies were acquired. The country had been settled chiefly by French immigrants, who had penetrated but very little way into the in terior, and it was in Nova Scotia close to the confines of New Brunswick, that the old French settlement of Acadie, was founded. Here was laid the scene of Longfellow's beautiful poem of "Evangeline," and to this day his description of the general aspect of the country remains remarkably life-like and true: Still stands the forest primeval; but under the shade of its branches Dwells another race, with other Linger a few Acadian peasants, whose fathers from Wandered back to their native land to die in bosom.

In the fisherman's cot the wheel and the loom are Maidens still wear their Norman gaps and their kirtles of homespun, And by the evening fire repeat Evangeline's story: While from its rocky cavern's the deep-voiced neighbouring ocean peaks, and in accents disconsolate answers the wail of the forest. After the war of independence, many of the best British families preferring to preserve their nationality rather than to live under the flag of the new Republic, left their old homes in New England States, and founded a Colony on the mouth of St. John River, where the City of St. John now stands. To this day the decendants of these old Loyalists, as they were termed, keep up the traditions of their fathers, and there is still a deep undercurrent of devotion to the "Old Country," and anything in the shape of annexation to the United States is looked upon with the greatest aversion. Till quite recent times, New Brunswick was a Crown Colony, but in common with other of the maritime provinces it was cajoled by the gilded pill of confederation into the union now known as the Dominion of Canada, Latterly, a strong separation policy has sprung up, and various proposals are keenly discussed by Canadian politicians. What the result may be it is impossible to say, but a glance at the map will be sufficient to show how necessary possession of New Brunswick is to the Canadian people. It is their one point of access to the sea all the year round, their chief outlet thereto, the St. Lawrence river, being frozen over for at least five of the winter months. St. John is also becoming a great railway centre, and is doubtless destined to become the great winter seaport of Canada. It is for shipping. Any talk then of annexation to the States must be the merest moonshine. Canada could not permit it. fore who feels any qualms about having to change his nationality at some future time, may make his mind pretty easy on a good annual and if publishers wish to that score. As to the population and area use it as an advertising medium he accepts of New Brunswick, at the last census in 1881 its population was, relatively to that of the whole country, 320,000 to 4,350,000, the area in square miles being 27,174 to 3,510,000. It can be seen at once that New Brunswick is more thickly populated than Canada as a whole, and it is in fact a much more settled and civilised district. But to show that there was no danger of over population, he would only say, without bothering them with figures, that a country one fifth the size of Great Britain and Ireland supports only one-hundredth part of the same population per square mile. The country is indeed very sparsely settled, wide stretches of country are still to all intents and purposes virgin soil, trodden only by the hunter and trapper. For the greater part the province is still clothed with an immense forest, and timber is the staple interest of the people. There is still, however, much meadow land unappropriated, some of it the richest in the world. All sorts of roots and grain The Kent Northern Railway and the grow splendidly. The two great necessaries for the settler, wood and water, are at present in abundance. The climate is good. The markets for all the settler can produce lie close at hand. The means of transport and communication are excellent. The emigrant is within fourteen days reach of any part of this country. Hop. Mr. White, member of Parlia ment for Cardwell, Ont., and Minister of the Interior, died at Ottawa on Saturday night after a comparatively short illness. A man of more than ordinary ability. Mr. White had long taken a prominent part in the affairs of the country, and his death will be heard with regret by men of all shades of political belief. Mr. White was only fifty-years old. He was of Irish exthe said lot Number Five, being the land and traction, entered the journalastic profession early in life-as an editor and proprietor working successfully at Peterboro, Hamilton and Montreal-and also engaged in politics. He was unsuccessful several attempts to enter the House of Commons, but finally carried Cardwell 1878, and has represented that constituency ever since. In 1885, Mr. White was created Minister of the Interior, and held that post until the day of his death. A strong conservative, he did valuable service for his party on the platform, in parliament, and in his paper, the Montreal Gazette, and his death will make a

"Woman.

The April issue of Woman is full of entertaining and instructive matter. Edgar Fawcett's new novel, "A Demoralizing Marriage," is continued through several chapters. Florence Percival contributes a lively sketch, entitled "An April Fool, the denouement of which leaves one in a condition of delicious mystification. "Lesbia's Fancy Work," by Grace Winthrop, is a graceful love story. In "An Island mantic episode connected with the Island of Grand Manan at the mouth of the Bay of Fundy. Laura Clay discusses "The Responsibility of Women to Society. Anna Olcott Commelin describes some women's clubs, with a retrospective glance at the history of clubs from earliest times. Under the title of "One Woman's Idea," Elanor Corbet imparts some excellent is, of course, the usual amount of useful in which they are handled and sustained.
