OLD BOWSER'S LOVE LETTERS. 'My dear child,' said an old aunt mine the day I was married, 'have you got all your husband's love letters?'

'Of course. 'And now that you are married you will probably burn 'em?' That's just what I was going to do.'

'Well don't. Keep 'em the longest day you live.' 'But why?"

'Because they will be stronger weapons than all your tears, pleadings or arguments. Nothing will bring a husband to time like a sight of some of the love letters he wrote before marriage.' I took her advice, and have always been glad I did. On several occasions a romantic as well as a practical argument down off his high horse, and the fact says that they bother his peace of mind is proved by the other fact that he has several times hunted the house over in my absence in hopes to lay hands on

Beauty and Utility.

According to the London Telegraph, rose bush hedges are found to furnish an excellent protection to railway lines against the hindrance of traffic and locomotion caused by drifting snow. In fact, the rose hedge is better than any fence yet devised, and continental lines which in former years invariably became blocked with snow, have been kept clear during the abnormally heavy falls of the past winter through this agency. But there is I have used them to bring Mr. Bowser in favor of the rose hedge. The Telegraph

Although, no doubt strictly practical considerations have suggested the planting of these avenues of rose bushes which have been instrumental in keeping open an arterial line of communication between Central and Eastern Europe throughout Something went wrong at the office the other day and hecamehome cantankerous. He held in until we got to the furnish a theme to poetical inspiration. It requires but little imaginative effort to picture to the mind's eye a summer jour-ney gladdened by the glory of roses, shin-ing to the right and left of a swiftly-gliding steam chariot, while the surrounding atmosphere is fraught with faintly subtle why is it I can never get anything fit to scents which superinduce a soft languor in the fortunate traveller. Such sights and odors have hitherto been rarely allotted to tourists dependent upon railway locomotion for their transport through the Roumelian lowlands adjoining the southern and eastern slopes of the rugged

Balkan range. Between Tatar-Bazar and Adrianople the horseman following the post-road on a sultry June day rides, mile after mile, through enormous rose plantations, blazing with scarlet and crimson, and giving out odors well-nigh as overpowering as that of the attar distilled from their gorgeous blossoms. In those elds of queen flowers he may gaze hi fill on "the damask rose, whose rare mixture doth disclose beauties pencils can not feign," and test by experiment the truth of brave old John Marston's dainty lines: "Having clasped a rose within my palm, the rose being ta'en away, my hand retains a little breath of sweet."

Rose hedges may not be practicable in this country, but if the managers of our provincial railways ever hope to attract that proportion of continental tourist travel to which our glorious summer climate entitles us, they must pay more attention to the adornment of the line. A large part of the country through which the railways pass is simply hideous. The settlements are generally located some distance from the line and the works of car windows are usually a blot on nature. The following from the Telegraph may be
