York. Many old

A fine old historic flavor attaches to some of the names. At the head of the list, for instance, is Col. Edward Winslow, whose ancestor commanded the New England troops engaged in expatriating the Acadians in 1755, and who himself served in the British army during the American revolution and rose to the highest rank in Canada after his exile. There are also the Seaburys, Robinsons, Bots-Thomas White, in Montreal West after a | fords, Peterses and many others noted in American annals, from the landing of the Mayflower, and it is quite a surprise to find so many descendants of the Pilgrim fathers among the Loyalists.

Lieut. Col. Benjamin Thompson, one of these Loyalists, went on to England and was knighted. Thence he went to Bavaria, did valuable scientific work and was ennobled, and is known to the world as Count Rumford. Ward Chipman, another, held successively all grades of office in New Brunswick, won great distinction as attorney general, and died as president and commanderin-chief in 1824. And still another, Frederick days later I was agreeably surprised to meet De Peyster, not only wen high honors in Judge Allen at Grand Falls. We walked out Canada, but maintained through life the most friendly feelings for his relatives who adhered to the American side. The result was that many De Peysters returned to the United States. Three of his grandsons served in the Federal army during the civil war, and his kinsman, Col. Johnson De Peyster, of New York, raised the first flag in Richmond after its surrender. Abraham De Peyster, brother of Frederick, and one of the founders of St. John, died there in 1798. The St. Johnsites show a commendable pride in preserving and exhibiting the old buildings and the portraits of the fellows who founded the place. Here is a portrait of John Ward, who "looks the character" to perfection—that is, he looks just as one would expect a resolute old Conservative to look. The inscription says that he was born at Peekskill on the Hudson in 1752, and served as a lieutenant in his majesty's service in 1778-80. He was active in JOHN WARD. the negotiation between Arnold and Andre, and by an odd coincidence, Paulding, one of Andre's cap-tors, married a sister of Lieut. Ward. This illustrates the awkward division of families Ward & Sons ran the first steamers on the

It is not entirely without interest to relate that many hundred negroes were among the Loyalist refugees of 1783 and that the British government (ever generous to its friends in distress) gave them the same land grant, rations and live stock as other Loyalists, and that they and their descendants have ever since enjoyed all the privileges of other British subjects. Loch Lomond, a few miles neuralgia, croup, sore throat and aches from St. John, was founded by 371 negroes

By far the most interesting, however, of these Loyalist reminiscences concerns the life of Benedict Arnold at St. John. In 1780 he received from the British government 6,000 guineas and the rank of brigadier general. In 1781 he went to England with Lord Cornwallis, with whose assistance he got a pendoes not appear to have been treated with | sion for Mrs. Arnold of £500 a year for life and £100 for each of their children. In 1785 he located at St. John and remained there Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil several years trading to the West Indies. In 1788 his store was burned, and in 1790 his former partner, Munson Hayt, charged that Arnold had set it on fire to secure the insurance. Arnold brought an action for slander, ior to plain Cod Liver Oil, palatable asking £5,000 damages. After an exciting

There I expounded unto New Brunswick's chief justice the immense superiority of the United States system. Of course American newspaper man prevented my doing justice to the subject, so the chief justice replied: "The trouble with you is that the central authority is not sufficiently defined. We looked out for that at the start, and quite naturally, as our confederation was formed just after your civil war. Your plan was that all powers not granted to the Federal government went to the states; we reversed that exactly, and declared that all powers not clearly granted to the province belong you think that is better?" I ventured to remark that it was a trifle queer that such a centralized government should be called a "confederation," and that a line of amalgamated provinces should be called a "Dominion." Whereupon the genial chief justice smiled at my "Yankee prejudices," and we parted the best of friends.
