The Advocate takes the ground that total abstinence, only, is temperance—that the ADVANCE never favored temperancethat its editor is doing well-paid for work as "the mouthpiece of the, at present, illegal traffic," etc .- and it expects us to discuss the question of the Scott Act with it. We do not propose to mar our columns by dealing with such writings and writers in any other way, than to state publiclyas, we have, personally, to some of our respectable and self-respecting temperance friends-that as the Advocate does not choose to discuss this or any other subject with us in a courteous manner, as becomes a respectable paper, we must let its crudities and misrepresentations go for what they are worth, believing that they will do little beyond deepening the prejudices of a few ignorant persons. EV. MR. PRATT REGARDS IT OF GREATER INFLUENCE THAN THE PULPIT

[Halifax Echo.] Rev. W. A. Pratt discoursed in the Church of the Redeemer last evening on "The newspaper as a factor in modern society." He said it was undoubtedly a factor for good or ill. Once a week church-going people gathered together to worship according to the dictates of conscience and to receive religous instruction; not one day in seven but six out of seven, came the newspaper to the people as an educator, as an exponent of the justice of the cause it championed and as the Nemesis of the wrong doing which it rebuked. people of this 19th bentury the reading of books. Should it cease, trade, commerce, science and religion would receive a grievous blow. The newspaper that lives up to it responsibilities should be the relentless foe of wrong-doing in high and low places alike. Rev. Mr. Pratt said he believed there was more hypocrisy in the pulpit than in the editorial sanctum. He James conducted religious services at the | had in his hand a copy of the Presbyterian confession of faith, and he read passages on predestination and also passages he construed to refer to infant non salvation. He asked where a Fresbyterian minister could be found who had not practically slid over to Armenianism, compared with the strong language of the confession? And where could the minister be found who paeached the doctrine that the vast majority of those dying in infancy could not be saved? The church at Toronto the | in the sense of pressing the butter into a Castoria is recommended by physicians other day, he said, refused to change these | solid mass. Butter is no longer "worked" tenets. They all, too, at ordination had solemnly subscribed to them, and yet in the pulpit they either gloss them over or never mention them at all. In view of these and other facts the preacher thought there was more mental dishonesty and double-dealing in the pulpit than in the editoral sanctum. Horace Greeley, though a man ambitious for political honors, deliberately courted and secured defeat by, from a sense of duty, writing an article on a general amnesty at the close of the An erican civil war. All journalists, however, do not occupy this high ground, Some are slaves to party, others make their columns do the duty of moral sewers. In the editoral columns of some newspapers, there was he might say, "a continual weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth." Coarse, abusive and arbitrary writing would not succeed in the end or gain public confidence. Too many editors seem to forget that the only oracles of truth are not invariably found in their own office. The preacher condemned the publication of lengthened reports of crime, merely to satisfy a morbid craving of its readers for such details. It was no justification of such proceedure to say that there was nothing printed but what was demanded by a newspaper's constituncy. "Do right though the heavens fall." It was the duty of every man to support what was best in journalism, secular or religious, and if such were done the corrupt would soon fail for lack of patronage. The lecturer expressed himself as not being opposed to the Sunday newspaper. Those who were should look to it that reports of their sermons did not appear in Monday morning's papers, which papers, he asserted, entailed more Sunday labor than the regular Sunday paper. The preacher concluded his discourse by reiterating his conviction that, rightly conducted, the newspaper was an invaluable help in every good work, in all the spheres of labor in this 19th century. The subject

Christian Unity.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has written a letter to the English Presby. terian synod, in which he said he was requested by the bishops lately in conference to send a copy of the encyclical letter issued by the conference. The letter was various branches of the Anglican comm union hold themselves in readiness to enter into fraternal conference with the representatives of the other Christian communions of the English speaking races, in order to consider what step could be taken either toward corporate reunion or toward such relations tas might preface the way for fuller organic unity hereafter. To this Principal Dykes of the synod sent a reply, in which he said he would bring the matter to the notice of the church which he represented. The synod approved of this course, and deferred any further action in the matter in the mean time.

Little Women are as a rule, possessed of happy dis positions; but when these sweet dispositions become soured and irritable, in consequence of the long train of distressing features peculiar to female complaints, they are then not companionable to say the least. ### A Great Gold Fird.

Some years : go when the ainual meeting of the American Institute ofmining engineers was held in Halifax, the most eminent members visited the gold mines at Montague. In the New Albion mine which about that time had beer organized have no doubt the request would be in London, they saw what they declared to readily granted. Mr. Mowat is to use be the finest specimens of gold they had every effort to obtain a large supply the ever seen either in America or Australasia.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Casteria.

The New Albion is a pocket mine and just about that time the miners "had struck it exceedingly rich." For a while the mine paid 5 per cent, per month. These rich "pockets" were succeeded by a lean streak.

While the shareholders accepted the 5 per cent. dividend with commendable promptness, they declined to respond to extra calls upon their stock. Consequently the mine was sold at sheriff's sale and bought in by Charles Annand, and since then very ittle work has been done in it. Six months ago Sandy McGuire and some others made arrangements with Mr. Annand to work the mine on tribute. They did fairly well, paid all expenses and are said to have netted $500 each for their six months work. The arrangement for working the mine on tribute has about expired; but yesterday the boys struck a pocket of extraordinary and unprecedented richness, which gladdened their hearts and surprised and delighted everyone who had the good fortune to see the result of their luck. They turned out a nest egg said to be worth $3,000 or $4,000. The box of specimens brought to the city last night made the mouths of old miners water. The quartz bristled with junks of the glittering metal. Some of the pieces of stone was fairly riveted together with gold. One piece of quartz seemed, from its weight, to be a solid mass of gold, and Mr. Mc Guire said he would not take $500 for it. It is to be hoped that these specinens will be exhibited in some window on a prominent thoroughfare, so that the public may get an idea of the vast mineral wealth that lies buried within seven miles of the The newspaper has largely replaced with Halifax post office, and which can be obtained by intelligent, honest and persistent work. If such "a strike" had been made in the wilds of Mexico or the American Indian territory, 1,000 miles from the confines of civilization, we should have had columns of despatches about it, and thousands of people would probably have been reported as making a gaand rush for the place, spend. ing their last cent to get there. But this "find" was made right under the nose of Halifax, and is but an illuspration of Nova Scotia's vast gold mining
