The Temperance Question.

The Presbyterian General Assembly of the United States is composed of gentlemen who can not be open to the charge of being unduly influenced by the liquor traffic...

It is claimed that they are less qualified by education, respectability or intelligence—to say the very least—than any other body that may possibly be got together...

Persons whose knowledge of the world, as it is, and who possess qualities which fortify them against the prejudices and misunderstandings which always result from a considerable interest being awakened in great moral questions...

It may be assumed that there is no prohibitionist orator who will develop sufficient presumption upon the credulity, inexperience and gullibility of the average provincial audience...

Last week we had occasion to quote some utterances of Cardinal Gibbons on "The Vice of Intemperance," and the reproduction of the following extract therefrom is appropriate:

"I am decidedly opposed to prohibition as a means of preventing intemperance because it does not prohibit. Experience has shown, in those states where prohibition has been tried, that it is not an effective means of preventing the vice of drinking..."

Cardinal Gibbons is the head of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States, and when he is found in accord with the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of that great country against prohibition...

But our readers, doubtless, are anxious to know what action the Presbyterian General Assembly of the United States has taken. That is not to be wondered at, when so many of them have been taught to believe certain very erroneous things, relatively, in this connection by gentlemen whose prejudices have overcome their sense of responsibility in their high positions.

The Presbyterian General Assembly was in session in New York on Monday, 27th May, and occupied nearly the whole afternoon discussing the temperance question. Referring to the proceedings the New York Times says:

"The greater part of the day had been taken up with purely denominational matters, in which there was but little of popular interest. At the beginning of the afternoon session the report on temperance was presented, recommending the continued support and continuance of the committee and the enforcement of the means that would tend to the suppression of the liquor traffic..."

Up to this time the proceedings had been tame and uninteresting, for the gruff voice of Dr. Crosby called out, "Mr. Moderator, and there was a rustle of expectation throughout the room and in the galleries..."

"There are two great principles of opposition to the saloon that are entertained by Christian men. One is called prohibition and the other high license. Both are believed in by good men in the Presbyterian Church, and it strikes me that it would be unwise and impolitic to say which of them we believe in..."

We all agree that the saloon should be destroyed; we all believe that the removal of the most effective means that are at our disposal that will work the destruction of the saloon. Now, shall we cripple the work of those who believe that prohibition will not succeed in suppressing the saloon in their field of employment? I tell you if prohibition was made the law in New York city to-day it would multiply the saloons in our city at once. No doubt it is a success in rural communities; no doubt it is a success in some cities, like Kansas, where there are no large cities, and a partial success in Iowa; but in the big cities of this country prohibition means nothing but free rum. It is right to suppress the saloon in those cities, and it is right in the cities by this condemnation, in effect, of high license? Even if you shall give to the majority in this matter, will it be right to repress the minority? If you have no right to take such action as is proposed in this minority report, for it would in effect declare a political policy for the assembly, which is purely a religious body..."

The Rev. Henry M. Shockley, of Kansas, told how beautiful a thing prohibition was in Kansas. There had been ten-year-old children out there who had never seen a saloon sign. The Rev. Frederick R. Wobring, of Nebraska, was keeping a saloon in Kansas. He had never seen a saloon sign. The Rev. Frederick R. Wobring, of Nebraska, was keeping a saloon in Kansas. He had never seen a saloon sign.

It is noticeable that high license cuts off the saloon, the cheapest and most plentiful of drinks. It is not a saloon, but a bar. It is not a saloon, but a bar. It is not a saloon, but a bar.

One very important advantage of high license is that it prevents the saloon from being a place of refuge for the poor and the unfortunate. It prevents the saloon from being a place of refuge for the poor and the unfortunate.

The Metropolitan Excise Law, which was passed by the Legislature of New York on April 14th, 1886, affords an excellent example of the effect of high license. It prevents the saloon from being a place of refuge for the poor and the unfortunate.

Galvestonian Away Has Good Fortune. During the recent Mardi Gras celebration at New Orleans, a lady from Galveston while taking in the carnival, was not forgetful of the fact that it was near the time for the March drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery, she invested $1 in a lottery ticket, which she brought back, forgetting its possession. She discovered that she held one-twentieth of ticket No. 10,420, which drew the second capital prize of $100,000, thus entitling her to $5,000. The ticket was cashed in this city, being paid over to the representative of the fortunate lady.—Galveston (Tex.) News, April 2.
