bringing into force of a license law. To the ordinary mind this is a position which no practical public man can hope to successfully hold, and we can have no stronger evidence on the point than is furnished by Mr. Foster, the leading temperance man of the Dominion, who, as member of the Dominion Cabinet, has found prohibition an impracticable thing, and is forced to become a party to the licensing of both the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors. The phase in which the matter presented itself to the Municipal Council was this: The Scott Act had been in force in the County for seven years; an attempt to suppress th illicit traffic that had grown to large proportions under it, by the appoint ment of a County Inspector, had failed; an attempt in the same direction by private parties had been attended by similar results; estimating the revenue on the basis of former receipts trom licenses, those of paying some $14,000, which the ratepayers of the County generally had been obliged to make good. The Council had also before it the experience of other places in the province which had adopted the Scott Act, in none of which it had been suc cessful in suppressing the traffic.

Advertising Agents.

The Canadian Press Association recently discussed the Advertising Agency nuisance, but appeared to hit upon no way of abating it. Some of these agencies are a positive injury to both newspapers and advertisers. One the largest in New York-Geo. P. Rowell & Co.-flood the mails with appeals to publishers to take advertising

But Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. are advertising agents. That is, busi ness houses having a good deal of advertising to do entrust it to Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co.

Now, this firm has $50 on its books against the Bugtown Banger for a page advertisement in their Newspaper Directory and, of course, it wishes realise, so no matter how poor an adver tising medium the Banger may be, the first-class business house's advertisement is sent to it by Messrs. On that day Pigott sent a telegram signed "Ponsonby," and addressed to the office in London of Shannon, the Times solicitor. The telegram announced his arrival in Madrid, and gave his address. The English government learned from this telegram that Pigott was in Madrid. It is reported that a note-book containing the addresses of a

The St. John Globe says :- Pigott takes nis life, thus removing the hope of the Parnellites that he might be extradited, and that the whole truth of his relations with the Times might be brought out. Pigott had a stormy career in the fiftyive years he was on earth. He was born a Dublin, his father having been book keeper of the old Nation when Sir Charles Gavan Duffy was its editor and Thomas Davis, John Mitchell and the other leaders of "Young Ireland" party were its principal writers, remaining in that position when the paper passed into the hands of the late A. M. Sullivan. He thus acjuired an intimate knowledge of the Naional movement, but never became a member of any organization. Later on he became proprietor of the Irishman, and in that paper in 1879, when the proposal of the "new departure," out of which the Land League grew, appeared in the Dublin Freeman, Pigott vigorously denounced it as a "betrayal of the National cause. He soon found, however, that the people were with Davitt and Parnell, and he tried to make peace with them, and to nake his paper the organ of their party. He was despised and distrusted, and all his offers were refused. Hence the efforts he made to injure the movement. Obliged to dispose of his paper, he went to Lon-don and there eked out a livelihood. Then he concocted the scheme of forging documents, incriminating the League and the Irish leaders, and tried to sell them to politicians and newspapers, but without result, until, in its blind prejudice and hatred of the Liberal and Home Rule cause, the hitherto great Times was induced, without inquiry or reasonable investigation, to purchase the forged "letters" which have so thoroughly humiliated and discredited it before the civilized world. Pigott sinks into oblivion as one of the most disreputable scoundrels that ever lived, Titus Oates not excepted.
