stiffening frame of his father's old friend. Far up in the northwest, along the banks of the broad, winding stream the Sioux call the Elk, a train of white topped army wagons is slowly crawling eastward. The October sun is hot at noonday, and the dust from the loose soil rises like heavy smoke and powders every face and form in the guarding battalion so that features are well nigh indistinguishable. He sends his wagon train, guarded by four companies of foot and two of horsemen, by the only practicable road to the bend, while he, with ten seasoned "troops" of his pet regiment, the -th cavalry, starts forthwith on a long detour in which he hopes to "round up" such bands as may have slipped away from the general rush.

Even as "boots and saddles" is sounding, other couriers come riding in from Lieut. Crane's party. He has struck the trail of a big band. When the morning sun dawns on the picturesque valley in which the cantonment nestled but the day before it illumines an almost deserted village, and brings no joy to the souls of some twoscore of embittered civilians who had arrived only the day previous, and whose unanimous verdict is that the army is a fraud and ought to be abolished. For four months or more some three regiments had been camping, scouting, roughing it thereabouts with not a cent of pay. Then came the wildly exciting tidings that a boat was on the way up the Missouri with a satrap of the pay department, vast store of shekels and a strong guard, and as a consequence there would be some 2,000 men around the cantonment with pockets full of money and no one to help them spend it, and nothing suitable to spend it on. It was a duty all citizens owed to the territory to hasten to the scene and gather in for local circulation all that was obtainable of that disbursement, otherwise the curse of the army might get ahead of them, and the boys would gamble it away among themselves or spend it for vile whisky manufactured for their sole benefit. Gallatin Valley was emptied of Ladies' Woollen Hose in Oxford Grey and Black | its prominent practitioners in the game of poker. The stream was black with "Mackinaw" boats and other craft. There was a rush for the cantonment that rivaled the multitudes of the mining days, but all too late.

The command was already packing up when the first contingent arrived, and the commanding officer, recognizing the fraternity at a glance, warned them outside the limits of camp that night, declined their services as volunteers on the impending campaign, and treated them with such calmly courteous recognition of their true character that the eastern press was speedily filled with sneering FLANAGAN, esteemed fellow citizen Hank Mulligan and twenty gallant shots and riders like
