FATAL FALL :- Simon Louis Allain, aged about 45, of St. Mary's, was fatally injured on Thursday last. He was engaged in shingling the roof of a barn at that place for Moses Cormier, and was working near the edge of the roof when the staging gave way and he fell to the ground, a distance of about 15 feet. He was carried to his home and next morning, when his condition was found to be serious, Dr. King, of Buctouche, was sent for. The man, had, however, sustained internal injuries of such a character that he died at noon on Friday. He leaves a wife and a large family.

Somebody who handles base-hall matters for the Advocate ought te be suppresed. That paper has frequently made erroneous reports of the games played between the young people of Chatham and Newcastle, and even intimated that the Newcastle players had been badly treated here. It dealt in the same manner with the circumstances of the Campbellton match in which the Newcastle lads were victorious. It seems however that there was no just ground for the Advocate's reflections on Campbellton as the manly little fellows who composed the Newcastle nine have published the

For example I said "Indging from the fact that little girls seem to have an innate tendency to hanker after doll babies, cradles, house keeping etc., and from the fact that women are endowed with such tender natures, such sweet powers of sympathy and such holy maternal longing, one would conclude that nature had intended woman's sphere to be laid out in a direction, other than that of a public professional life, viz: Marriage, raising of children and the tender administrations to the hom?." This copied in the Evening Gazette becomes "women, he said, were destined by nature only for bearing and rearing children." This certainly, outs my sentence in a different light entirely and conveys to the public, a meanthe least. I made no "attack" upon ladies as the Gazette heads it but, I think, spoke very highly of them. I did not say they were "incapable of practicing medicine" but brought forth reasons to show there were serious obstacles in the way of them doing so without harm to themselves. My whole line of thought has been misconstrued and by some who seem to prefer dealing with personalities.
