I'm not sure whether in such cases we see ourselves others see us; Lshould fancy so, for noticed that I looked extremely-I must hope abnormally-grumpy; I don't think I was improved either by the short beard he had set up, not to mention several streaks of grey in my hair. Just then saw Elizabeth crossing the grass to speak to me-I don't mean to myself, you know, but to him-and I heard her say : do you consider twenty-four too venerable an age for congratulations?' (This by the way, fixes the date exactly; it must have been the twenty-third of June, five years ahead from to-morrow.) I regret to say that in reply he only gave a sort of grunt, and muttered something about anniversaries being a great bore: and I remember thinking that if I were she l'd leave him to get out of his bad temper myself-I say, these pronouns and he adopted the suggestion. "Well, then, Elizabeth and John Lynn strolled aimlessly about for a while, bu scon went into the house, and after that I saw nobody else, except occasionally the gardener, for what seemed a very long period. I had nothing at all to do. and the time dragged considerably. The strip of beach on which I could move All have equal rights in life and liberty about was hot and glaring, and disagreeafternoon I walked more than a mile along it in a northerly direction, until l came to a dilapidated-looking old boathills, and just beyond the line I couldn' cross. Ar ugly, livid-hued cloud was spreading like a bruise over the sky to the south-east, and sudden gusts began to ruffle up the long, bent grasses of the sand-hills on my right hand. "When I came near the gate, several people were standing at it, apparently watching two men who were doing some thing to a small sailing-boat, which lay off a little pier close by. Elizabeth and Nellie, and my other sister Juliet, were there, and Elizabeth was explaining to an elderly man, whom I have never succeeded in identifying, that Jack and Vincent intended to sail across to Graston Spit-

'In that case,' said he, 'th sooner they're off the better, for it looks as if we might have a squall before very long, and the glass is by no means steady to-day.' Whereupon ensued a short feminine fugue on the theme of: 'Perhaps it would be wiser for them to give up the idea-I hope they won't go-Jack could drive him to the station, you know -Don't you think it would be much wiser if-' in the midst of which they both arrived, and naturally scouted the suggested that they should abandon their sail, John Lynn, whose temper seemed to have somewhat improved, asserting that they would have a splendid breeze, and that he would be back again in an hour or so. Accordingly they hurried over their taking no man with them.

"They had been gone perhaps threequarters of an hour, when the 'splendic breeze' made its appearance in the shape of a furious squall, which came hissing and howling on with remarkable suddenness and violence, and brought the girls who were still out of doors, running with dismayed countenances to look over the gate to seaward. The sweeping gusts bore to me fi ful snatches of anxious colloquies, the general drift of which, however, seemed to be towards the conclusion that the boat must have got over be-PORK & BEEF. fore the wind sprang up, and that Jack would, of course, wait there until it went down. As the blasts moderated a little, they were accompanied by driving sheets of large-dropped rain, which again sent the girls scurrying indoors, and I was left to my solitary peregrinations and reflections. These latter ran much upon the boat and its occupants, who must, I thought, be having a rather nasty time of in thinking it over," I replied with deit, unless they had really landed before the squall; for both wind and tide were against them, and a surprising sea hal got up already. I consider myself to know something about the management double or fetch might be credited with an equal amount of skill; otherwise their prospects certainly looked blue enough, as Vincent has had little or no experience now in this direction, and now in that, and I must have continued to do so for a again came in sight of the old boat-house, to which I had walked before. Almost at the same moment my eye was caught by

They were very blinding and baffling, but a longer rift soon showed me plainly that it was a small boat in saw myself enter upon the scene, also from sorry plight, in fact filling and settling down so fast that her final disappearance would evidently be a question of a very few minutes. There was nobody in her, and I thought to myself that if anyone had gone overboard in that sea, he must assuredly have preceded her to the bottom. And I felt equally convinced that she waa no other than the boat in which I had seen the two Lynns embark. "This opinion proved to be both right and wrong; she was the Lynn' boat, but the Lynns had not gone to the bottom. On the contrary, they were just then safely emerging from imminent danger of so doing. For I now became aware of a human form, which, at not many yards' distance, was making slow and struggling progress through the swirling surf towards the water's edge, and had already reached a place shallow enough to admit of wading. As I ran forward, not to assist, having long since ascertained that could by no means demonstrate my presence, but merely to investigate, it turned out to be John Lynn, half carrying and half dragging along Vincent, who was apparently insensible. I had an aw- N. B. Trading Co's Office, Water St. ful scare, I can tell you, for he flopped 'You're a very unfeeling relative! Have let him go, in such a lifeless, limp sort of way that I thought at first the lad had really come to grief. However, I suppose he had only been slightly stunned : at any rate, in a minute or two he sat up. and seemed none the worse. But when he got to his feet, it was evident that he had somehow damaged one of his ankles -sprained it badly I should say-and he could hardly a tempt the feeblest hobble. 'Here's a sell,' he said, 'especially as we don't seem to have landed near anywhere in particular.' All this time the rain was coming down in torrents, and it was blowing so hard that you could scarcely hear yourself speak. 'It's a good stepmore than a mile,' I heard the other say. 'Do you think you could get as far as the old boat-house? You see it there opposite to us. Then you'd be under shelter, while I run back and find some means of conveying you home.' This suggestion seemed sensible-though I say it who I suppose, shouldn't-and they made their way haltingly to the boat house, which, judging by the cobwebby creaking of the

> "Presently John Lynn came out alone, and set off running towards the house at a really very creditable pace, considering the depth of the sand and the weight of his drenched garments. I had found a tolerably sheltered station under the leeof a sandbank, and I decided to wait where I was for his return; but I had to wait much longer than one might have expected. The twilight turned into dusk, and the wind dropped, and the sky cleared, and a large full-moon came out, all in a leisurely way, but there was no sign of anybody coming near us. I couldn't account for the delay, and abused John Lynn a good deal in consequence of it. I know my wits sometimes go woolgathering, but I'm certain I should never have been such an ass as to leave another fellow sitting wet through for a couple of hours-enough to give him his death, I said, for one always takes a pessimistic view of things when one's being kept waiting. Of course it was possible that he might have found all our womankind in hysterics-though from what I know of them I shouldn't think it particularly probable-but, even so, he should have managed to send somebody. Vincent, too, was evidently getting impatient, for I heard him shout 'Jack' once or twice, and whistle at intervals in a way which I knew betokened exasperajunable to follow them.

"At last John Lynn came posting though he'd been away long enough to have collected half the country. As he ran up to the boat-house, I saw him taking out of his pocket something which gleamed in the moonlight, and was, I'm pretty sure, the top of a flask, so he'd at any rate had the sense to bring some spirits. I wanted to find out whether any more people were on their way, and forgetting for the moment that the boathouse wasn't in my reach, I went after him to the door. And there two queer things happened. In the first place, I got a glimpse, just for an instant, but quite distinctly, of-you, Dr. Harlowe : and immediately afterwards an extraordinary feeling of horror came over me, and I began to rush away, I don't know why or where, but on-on-on until the air suddenly turned into a solid black wall, and I went smash against it, and somehow seemed to wake up-sitting here at this table. "That's the first sensible remark you've made to-day," I said, in the most smoothingly matter-of-fact tone that I could assume; "only why do you say seemed? I should think it was perfectly obvious that you did really wake up-or is there more

"Then I dreamt it all?" said he. "All of it that you haven's evolved out of your internal consciousness since then,

"Oh, well," said my young friend, with a certain air of forebearing superiority, "as it happens, I dreamt it no more than you did. But if you prefer it, we'il call of a boat, and I supposed that my strange it a dream. At any rate it wasn't a bad one. I should feel rather uncomfortable now if it had ended disastrously; however, as far as one can ace, nothing worse seemed likely to come of it than Nellie's of nautical matters.
