Messrs. Farnworth & Jardine. The two steamers Avonmore and Cameo, with cargoes of Mr. Gibson's shipment, are now nearly all cut. These have not been placed upon the market, but are being piled on the shipper's account on the Hornby storage ground. With the three cargoes recently yarded there they will amount to about 4.000 standards. This indicates that at any rate Mr. Gibson has faith in the future of these goods, and we Mr. Patrick, though proficient in his part, may perhaps see at no distant date that some of the clever country buyers have missed their opportunity.

prisoner at Eastwood about half-past three on that day. Their statements as to his clothing coincided. The two last witnesses ca'led for the crown were George Hay, brakeman, and James Duffield, news agent on the G. T. R. The former swore positively that Birchall went east on the train on the alleged day of the murder. James Duffield, news agent on the same train, saw the prisoner on his train, sold him several articles and sat with him for half an hour. The prisoner said his name was Smith and was on his way to Buffalo where he was to meet his brother. This closed the case for the crown and an adjournment for lunch was made. The opening of the afternoon session was delayed until 2 o'clock for the preparation of the defence by Mr. Blackstock. John Rabb was called. On the evening of 18th about

Mr. Blackstock, chief counsel for the defence, said he had one witness that would take considerable time, longer than the judge would care to sit this evening, and asked for an adjournment till morning, promising to have all his evidence in by noon to-morrow. An adjournment granted and it was agreed that at the conclusion of the defence the court would adjourn till Monday.

Woodsrock, Oat., Sept. 25th-The first

witness for the defence today was Dr. Burns of Woodstock. Dr. Burns said the bruises as described by the previous medical testimony could not have possibly been caused by a body failing after being shot from behiad, "Could such bruises be received in the way indicated," was asked. He declared that he would give a startling testimony was abduced, neither can it be said that the position of the crown has in the main been slaken. The defence may be summed up as follows: (1) That the witnesses who swore to seeing the prisoner and the deceased in near neighborhood of the swamp that day were liable to a mistake in the matter of description of both men and WOODSTOCK, ONT., Sept. 24.—The third | the dress which they wore. Sept. 20-Before the speeches of the counsel to-day, some evidence for the defence was taken. Mr. Blackstock, counsel for the prisoner, was the first to address the jury. He pointed out the great preparazion made for the case by crown and the enormous expense incurred to secure conviction as contrasted with the position of the defence. He appealed to the jury to acquit the prisoner and set the mob and press at defiance. He asked them not to judge his client for his honesty, for if Henry Thomson, assessor in the township they did he would have to pass him over to their censure. He wished to draw their attention to the frailty of human memory. He asked did Birchall visit Princetown, and went on to show that the prisoner had not been proved to have done so. Mr. Blackstock pointed out Birchall and Benwell were about the same size, while all the crown witnesses who alleged they saw the two men going towards Blenheim swamp swore one the evidence offered by a number of crown was taller than the other. He dwelt upon witnesses, and said he did not wish to say WOODSTOCK, Sept. 25. - This has been a they were dishonest, but it must have imhard day for Birchall, yet the prisoner holds pressed the jury the light and easy manner ed freely. admitted that Birchall was at Eastwood on the 17th February, and that he had attempted to deceive the Benwells, it would be no evidence that he had murdered young Benwell. As his counsel went on, vividly pointing out the difference between the witnesses for the crown and defence. in the evidence, Birchall never took his eyes off the pale face flushed brightly. Mr. Blackstock quoted several previous cases to show how easy it was to be mistaken and attacked the evidences of the witnesses who had identified Birchall, alleging that not one of them was to be relied on. The letter written to Col. Benwell by Birchall, of which so much had been made, counsel held clearly proved the prisoner's innocence, for in it he directed that £500, which was to be remitted, be sent to the firm of Birchall & Benwell and that without Benwell's presence Birchall could not obtain a cent of the money. Baker's and Colwell's mysterious movements were next held up to show that there were strange goings on around there, although Mr. Blackstock remarked "God forbid I should east unkind suspicions on an innocent person," Why had not the crown put these men in the box to explain their conduct; it was all very well to say they were on a drunken spree, out what was more likely than that men about to commit a crime should fortify themselves with liquor? As for the keys, lead pencil and checks, they only proved the prisoner's innocence. What was more natural than that Birchall should pass all baggage together or borrow Benwell's lead pencil? Birchall knew he was going to be arrested, and yet he kept these in his possession. Was that the conduct of a guilty man. Mr. Osler for the crown opposed all Mr. Brickstock's contentions and pointed out that, instead of Birchall not being able to lraw money sent to the firm of Birchall & Benwell, it was an arrangement he could have made under which he could draw money without Benwell being present, as in cases of that kind any member of the firm can draw money. Judge McMahon supported the crown counsel's position on this point and all through his address charged strongly against the prisoner. Mr. Blackstock's address occupied five hours and five minutes; Mr. Osler's address for the crown was four hours and five minutes, and Judge McMahon's three and a quarter hours. At 11.53 p. m. the jury, being out two

A Foregone Conclusion.

It has caused no little surprise that there should be some doubt existing with egard to the exact date when the present charter of The Louisiana State Lottery Company expires. This is plainly expressed in the charter of the company which being a public document, is on file and accessible. Even the present charter does not terminate uniil 1895. Moreover an amendment has been ordered by the Legislature of the State to be submitted to the people by which the charter of the company will be extended up to the year 1919. Charters are necessarily granted for a limited time, and their renewal is a mere matter of form. This has been fully provided for, as anyone familiar with the facts of the case must know. Great satisfaction is expressed at the management of Generals Beauregard & J. Ritchie. and Early, who, as superintendents of the drawings, have maintained the high standard to which The Louisiana State Lottery Company has always lived up. - Memphis (Tenn.) Ledger, August 27.

To the Ratepayers of the Parish of Chatham.

GENTLEMEN: I learned on Tuesday morning that I had been nominated for the Municipal Council on Monday evening, and the fact causes me no little em parrassment. I appreciate the compliment and good intention, which the nomination implies, and am always willing to serve the community-as I have done b fore-in the Council or any other capacity within my ability. But, having, on a good many occasions, and especially of late, intimute 1 to en quiring friends that I would not be a candidate unless the objections current against our present Councillors took the form of some public expression in that direction, I feel that a inomination, under the circumstances, is not timely. The present Councillors have been canvassing and securing promises of support from many who say they would not have so promised had they known that others were to be nominated. My engagements for the next week render a personal canvass impossible and myself and friends at a great disadvantage. Besides this, some of those who favor the other gentlemen in nomination, seem to have thought it necessary to make a most violent and scandalous attack upon me in a local print. I have neither the time nor taste for a contest with elements of this kind, and while thanking all who have tendered me their support I beg to be considered as having withdrawn from the eandidacy in which-without my consent-I have been placed

I am Respectfully, your obt. servant, D. G. SMITH.
