CHAPTER IX.

"Mrs. Clancy, you must watch him." "I have been reading over your letter of Thursday last, dear Steven," wrote Miss Travers, "and there is much that I feel I ought to answer. You and Kate are very much of a mind about the 'temptations' with which I am surrounded; but you are far more imaginative than she is, and far more courteous. There is so much about your letter that touches me deeply that I want to be frank and fair in my reply. I have been dancing all this evening, was out at dinner even confirmed consumption affords grate- | before that, and have made many call this afternoon; but, tired as I am, my letter must be written, for to-morrow will be but the repetition of today. Is it that I am cold and utterly heartless that I can sit and write so calmly in reply to your fervent and appealing letter? "Ah, Steven, it is what may be said of me; but, if cold and heartless to you, I have certainly given no man at this garrison the faintest reason to think that h has inspired any greater interest in him. They are all kind, all very attentive. have told you how well Mr. Royce dances and Mr. Merton rides and Mr. Foster reads and talks. They entertain me vastly, and I do like it. More than this Steven, I am pleased with their evident admiration—not alone pleased and proud that they should admire me who am pledged to you-not that alone, I frankly confess, but because it in itself is pleasant. It pleases me. Very possibly it is because I am vain.

"And yet, though my hours are constantly occupied, though they are here from morning till night, no one of them is more attentive than another. There are five or six who come daily. There are some who do not come at all. Am a wretch, Steven? There are two or three that do not call who I wish would call. I would like to know them.

"Yet they know-they could not help it, with Kate here, and I never forgetthat I am your promised wife. Steven do you not sometimes forget the conditions of that promise? Even now, again and again, do I not repeat to you that you ought to release me and free yourself? Of course your impulse will be to say my heart is changing—that I have seen others whom I like better. No; have seen no one I like as well. But is 'like' what you deserve, what you ask' And is it not all I have ever been able to promise you? Steven, bear me witness for Kate is bitterly unjust to me a times, I told you again and again last summer and fall that I did not love you and ought not to think of being your wife. Yet, poor, homeless, dependent as I am, how strong was the temptation to say yes to your plea! "You know that I did not and would not until time and again your sweet mother, whom I do love, and Kate, who had been a mother to me, both declared girl respected the man of her choice; love would come, and come speedily when once she was his wife. You yourself declared you could wait in patience -you would woo and win by and by. Only promise to be your wife before re turning to the frontier and you would be content. Steven, are you content? You know you are not; you know you are unhappy; and it is all, not because I am growing to love some one else, but because I am not growing to love you.

is sacred and shall be kept. "More than that, if you say that it is your will that I seclude myself from these attentions, give up dancing, give up rides, drives, walks, and even receivwho have taken it. It not only gives | ing visits, here, so be it, I will obey; flesh and strength by virtue of its own but write this to me, Steven-not to Kate. I am too proud to ask her to show me the letters I know she has received from you-and there are some she has not shown me-but I cannot understand a man's complaining to other persons of the conduct of the woman who is, or is to be, his wife. Forgive me if I pain you; sometimes even to myself I seem old and strange. I have lived so much alone, have had to think and do for myself so many years while Kate has been away, that perhaps I'm not 'like other girls;' but the respect I feel for you would be injured if I thought you strove to guide or govern me through others; and of one thing be sure, Steven, I must honor and respect and look up to the man I marry, love or no love.

> "Once you said it would kill you if you believed I could be false to you. If by that you meant that, having given my promise to you to be your wife at some future time, I must school myself to love you, and will be considered false if love do not come at my bidding or yours, I say to you solemnly, release me now. I may not love, but I cannot and will not deceive you, even by simulating love that does not exist. Suppose that love were to be kindled in my heart. Suppose I were to learn to care for some one here. You would be the first one to know it; for I would tell you as soon as I knew it myself. Then what could I hope for-or you? Surely you would not want to marry a girl who loved another man. But is it much better to marry one who feels that she does not love you? "Think of it, Steven; I am very lonely, very far from happy, very night, Mr. Hayne and 1, and may not; but he is a man whose story excites my profound pity and sorrow, and he is one of the two or three I feel that I would like to see more of. Is this being false to you or to my promise? If so, Steven, you cannot say that I have not given you the whole truth.

"It is very late at night-1 o'clockand Kate is not yet asleep, and the captain is still down stairs, reading. He is not looking well at all, and Kate is sorely anxious about him. It was his evidence that brought years of ostracism and misery upon Lieut. Hayne, and there are vague indications that in his own regiment the officers are beginning to believe that possibly he was not the guilty man. The cavalry officers, of course, say nothing to us on the subject, and I have never heard the full story. If he has been, as is suggested, the vic-tim of a scoundrel, and Capt. Rayner was at fault in his evidence, no punishment on earth could be too great for the villain who planned his ruin, and no remorse could atone for Capt. Rayner's share. I never saw so sad a face on mortal man as Mr. Hayne's. Steven Van Antwerp, I wish I were a man! I

"This is a strange letter to send to-to you; but I am a strange girl. Already I am more than expecting you to write and release me unconditionally; and you Is prepared to receive pupils in OIL, WATER COLOR, LUSTRE and DECORATIVE PAINT ought to do it. I do not say I want it. "Faithfully, at least, yours, DRAWING FROM NATURE

"P. S .- Should you write to Kate, you are not to tell her, remember, of my PERSPECTIVE & SHADE COMmeeting with Mr. Hayne. Of course I am anxious to have your reply to that letter; but it will be five days yet." An odd letter, indeed, for a girl not yet twenty, and not of a hope inspiring character; but when it reached Mr. Van Antwerp he did not pale in reading it; his face was ghastly before he began. If anything, he seemed relieved by some passages, though rejoiced by none. Then ne took from an inner pocket the letter that had reached him a few days previous, and all alone in his room, late at night, he read it over again, threw it upon the table at which he was sitting, then, with passionate abandonment.

buried his face in his arms and groaned aloud in anguish.

Two days after writing this letter Miss Travers was so unfortunate as to hear a conversation in the dining room which was not intended for her ears. She had gone to her room immediately after breakfast, and glancing from her window saw that the officers were just going to headquarters for the daily matinee. For half or three-quarters of an hour, therefore, there could be no probable interruption; and she decided to write an answer to the letter which came from Mr. Van Antwerp the previous afternoon. A bright fire was burning in the old fashioned stove with which frontier City for Tourists, Professional and Busand she perched her little, slippered feet upon the hearth, took her portfolio in her lap and began. Mrs. Rayner was in the nursery, absorbed with the baby and the nurse, when a servant came and announced that "a lady was in the kitchen" be disturbed, and wondered who it could be that came to her kitchen to see her. "Can I be of service, Kate?" called Miss Travers. "I will run down, if you say so."

"I wish you would," was the reply, and Miss Travers put aside her writing.
"Didn't she give any name?" asked Mrs. Rayner of the Abigail, who was standing with her head just visible at the stairway, it being one of the unconquerable stages and Elevated Railroad, and s convenients ly located and accessible to places of amusement and business, including Coney Island, Rockaway Manhattan and Brighton Beach, Central Park, High Bridge, Greenwoed Cemetery, Brooklin Bridge, Starin's Glen Island, Bartholdi Statue, "Liberty Enlightening the World," etc. We have first-class accommodation for 400 guests, and our building being four stories high, and with numerous stairways, is considered the safest Hote in the city in case of fire. "Here, Jane, take the baby! Never mind, Nellie; I must go!" And Mrs. Rayner started with surprising alacrity; but as she passed her door Miss Travers saw the look of deep anxiety on her face. A moment later she heard voices at the front door-a party of ladies who were going to spend the morning with the colonel's wife at some "Dorcas society" work which many of them had embraced with enthusiasm. "I want to see Miss Travers, just a minute," she heard a voice say, and recognized the pleasant tones of Mrs. Curtis, the young wife of one of the infantry officers; so a second time she put aside her writing, and then ran down to the front door. Mrs. Curtis merely wanted to remind her that she must be sure to come and spend the afternoon with her and bring her music, and was dismayed to find that Miss Travers could not come before stable call; she had an engagement. "Of course; I might have known it; you are besieged every hour. Well, can you come to-morrow? Do," And, tomorrow being settled upon, and despite the fact that several of the party waiting on the sidewalk looked cold and impatient, Mrs. Curtis found it impossible to tear herself away until certain utterly irrelevant matters had been lightly touched upon and lingeringly abandoned The officers were just beginning to pour forth from headquarters when the group of ladies finally got under way again and Miss Travers closed the door. It was sion of Wm. Crosbie. now useless to return to her letter; so she strolled into the parlor just as she heard her sister's voice at the kitchen
