OBITUARY:-The death, at a comparatively ear rage, of Mrs. Henry A. Muirhead, although not altogether unexpected for some time past, has called forth great regret in the social circle of which she was a prominent and valued member, as well as general sympathy for Mr. Muirhead and the little ones, to whom the bereavement is an irreparable loss. The funeral, which took place Sunday afternoon, from Blink Bonnie, was very largely attended, notwithstanding the exceedingly unpleasant state of the weather. The services, both at the house and grave, were conducted by Rev. Joseph McCoy, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, and the pall-bearers were Hou. L. J. Tweedie, R. A. Lawlor, T. Fire!

Fire broke out about half past eleven on Saturday night in the forward cabin of the Steamer Miramichi, as she stood in her winter berth on Ritchie's wharf beside the steamer Nelson. The flames made a good deal of headway before water was got on, the upper woodwork of the Nelson on the starboard side, forward, having also taken fire, and for few minutes it was feared that both steamers might be destroyed. To make matters worse, whoever screwed the suction hose of the steam fire engine to gether allowed the rubber packing ring of the coupling to get twisted and so much off its seat that air entered with every stroke of the pump and the stream was both weak and light. Fortunately. however, it was sufficient to deaden the flames, which, being done, the fault was rectified, all necessary water obtained and the fire completely subdued. The Neison's damage is confined to a portion of the exterior sheathing of the forward cabin only, whilst that of the Miramichi does not affect either planking or timbers, forget the representatives of the people Jardine. That is the kind of preachers the country wants: men who have the power of their convictions, and who are not afraid to stand on the platform of the people's liberties in this Temperance question.

L'abbe Filiatrault is a leading Roman Catholic priest of Montreal. Seldom have the citizens of that city listened to as fine a lecture on the Temperance question as the stirring address delivered by the reverend gentleman in St. James' church, Montreal, on Sunday evening last. The French press is unanimous in pronouncing his discourse, on this occasion, a masterpiece of pulpit eloquence. Not only was his reasoning solid and convincing; not only was he apeaking solerly and in earnest, but his remarks must have been a crushing blow to political corruptionists, whom he charged with having saturated the province with rum, and to be themselves the great hindrance to the rising of the moral standing of the Temperance movement as not only christian one, but also a most patriotic one, and in fact the most important that could be imagiced, the reverend gentleman, in the course of his remarks, said that the holy banner of Temperance would have long ago floated over the whole province of Quebec but for the apathy and want of zeal of the people, who had failed to send the proper men to represent them in municipal councils and houses of parliament. They must not held their seats because the people choose to have them there, and with the people lay the power to impose their conditions on their representatives. As it was, the country lay in the clutches of the demon of Intemperance, who had in his service numberless agents, who, under the hypocritical guise of patriotism, were the enemies of their own race. These held mon laborer. In the face of such a state of things, were they to despair and give up the struggle? Mr. Spencer, whom he called its rector, and by Miss Hutchison whom he might call its bishop, using the word in the sense of caretaker. He intended to offer no compliments concerning the work which God had enabled her to do. He spoke of the danger and hard work to which seamen were subjected, noted the perils of a winter voyage and then pointed out the terrible moral danger to which sailors were exposed when coming ashore after a long voyage. They had to struggle with their pent up passions and appetites, and something was needed to stand between them and the inevitable result of excesses in which they were prone to indulge. In the Home they would be brought under the healing influence of the gospel, but the building's masses. After referring to the present library and its smoking room, gave evi

The result would be profit to body and salvation of soul. Hymn No. 154, Repeat the Story O'er and O'er was then rendered, after which Mrs. Philip Palmer and Mrs. Charles Palmer sang Consider the Lillies in ex-

"Regret cannot be with you at opening Seamen's Home. Send you $10. Wish you success in noble undertaking.

"W. H. SMITH." Superintendent Potter, of the Halifax Seamen's Home, was the next speaker. He expressed his hearty approval of the work, and in mentioning the various institutions for sailors with which he was acquainted he spoke in the most complimentary fashion of the building in which he was speaking. Ten and a half years ago, he went on, there was not a sailors' home on this side of the Atlantic, and there was only one reading room for the exclusive use of seamen. Then Montreal built a home, then Halifax, then St John's, Newfoundland, and now he was proud to say St. John had followed suit. Work of this kind was going on rapidly. He was happy to have an epportunity of pleading for the sailors of St. John. spoke of seamen's boarding houses and their influences. The literature to be encountered by the sailors was usually nothing more than a pack of cards and the more efficient the men became in playing cards the greater was the credit given to the boarding house keeper. From these boarding houses the tars were very apt to go to the bar-rooms and squander their hard earned money in drink. The institutions like that in which they stood gave the sailors a real home where they might be given the comforts of life and have an opportunity to rise above the level common to sailors who were left to

In order that the institution might be

nost powerful for good it was necessary that it should have the aid of the community. In Halifax during the past ten years 7,800 men had been given homes, and from what he had seen of St. John he thought this port had a greater num ber of foreign visitors by sea and accordingly the opportunities for work were excellent. One thing was sure, if the sailor once came to this home he would come again. Miss Hutchison and her assistants would send the seamen home to their families without allowing them to squander their money in drink. Prayer and preaching were, after all, but half the work, and the sailors had to be made at home and given all the benefits possible. He hoped the masters of vessels and merchants would give the home a chance, and ne thought it would be greatly to their benefit. The sailor's life, though hazardous at sea, was perhaps worse on shore. for there he encountered numberless dangers from sharks and land lubbers, who were constantly on the watch for an opportunity to defrand him of his pay. Men hung about sailors with all the inducements of the evil one in order to get his dollars. He prayed that the ladies would have the support of the christian but one which requires for its settlement | were nine young men who gave their services to the home, and besides these were a number of young ladies who collected money for the institution in various ways. 2 Bedroom sets. good teaching upon sailors, telling of sea-men in St. John who had received letters from Miss Tilley at the home in Cardiff. and who, on having these letters read to them were greatly affected and profited by them. All the comforts of a modern hotel or dwelling were present, and all must feel with Lady Tilley that the establishment of the Home was one of the greatest boons which could have been offered, and must doubt if any similiar event in the city's history could approach in importance. (Applause.) How could the merchants do otherwise than support it and take an interest in it if they felt an interest in the port's welfare. I'll Stand By You Till the Morning was then sung, after which God Save the Queen marked the end of the ceremony. The visitors again devoted their attention to an inspection of the rooms and after its first cost if fairly used. But we have known a man to buy a carriage from us and break it all up before reaching home. The carriage was not to blame though; rum was. We warrant the carriages we sell for one year against fair usage but not against rum. That knocks our warranty out and we are sorry to say it usually knocks the man out too.

There is a little history attached to the factory where our carriages are made which may interest you.

The Gananoque Carriage factory was started by some Ontario men. They did not have much experience when they began though they had a lot of money. One was a grain buyer and another a merchant and another a member of parliament and so on. In a year or two they had less money but more experience and then being sensible men they began to look about for other men who had both money and experience to join them else they would not have had anything but experience left.

Just about that time, some makers of carriages from Ohio were at Ottawa trying to get the government to lower the barriers which prevented them from driving their vehicles over into our markets. But the government said NO. If you want our markets bring your men and your machinery and your money into our country and make here the carriages you want to sell to our people. Then the Ohio men sought the Ontario men and they all combined. The Ohio men had practical experience in making fine carriages and the Ontario men had a good general knowledge of our country and what its people wanted their vehicles to be like.

The combination was a good one and has prospered. Gananoque carriages were sold last year by the thousand in every province in Canada from the shores of one great ocean to that of the other and all along the ways between, We sold over five hundred ourselves last year and expect to sell as many this year.

We will have a grand display of the Gananoque Carriages at Newcastle and samples in the hands of local agents. Call and look them over critically. They will stand the closest inspection.
