rould tell how, after fifty years' labor, he died in the midst of his official duties, not having had a day's rest until he was on his death bed. He (Sir Hector) had spent half his lifetime by the side of his late chief and would like to speak of him in his personal relations.

He was proceeding to do so when he broke down altogether and was forced to take his

Mr. Laurier said that he fully appreciated the deep grief of the premier's friend and colleague. The emotion that choked his utterance was more eloquent than any words could be. They, he said, who did not believe in his policy nor always approve of his methods, felt that the loss was more than a personal calamity. It was a national loss, for the man who was dead was Canada's foremost statesman. Mr. Laurier spoke of the premier's unceasing activity and told how that some months ago everybody afraid that the angel of death was near. Later, their came a night when the house in the midst of an angry discussion had learned that the angel of death was indeed at hand, and the voice of strife was instantly hushed into calm. And yet it was almost impossible to convince the unwilling mind institutions of the land had broken down. Speaking of the verdict of history, Mr. Laurier said that already it was agreed that in the act of governing men Sir John Macdonald was gifted as few men have ever been. He would have shone on any theatre of affairs; the more, the larger the theatre. His power to unite conflicting elements in the nation was almost unprecedented. He maintained the confidence and ardent devotion of all the elements of his party. The record of his life is the history of a country which had grown from a few scattered provinces with no common interest, into the country as it is now. We, said Mr. Laurier, did not agree with him in the last campaign. He had imputed to his opponents motives which in my heart I know did not exist. To-day these things might be forgotten and all would acknowledge his great gifts and qualities. Mr. Laurier spoke further of the late premier's character, attributing to him all the far-reaching vision which enabled him to judge of the future of national events. The career af Sir John Macdonald had been a fortunate one. He had met few reverses, and his times of adversity were short. He loved power and did not disguise the fact. Power was him His ambitions for himseparation. The dead needed not our sympathy, but it should go out to those who were left and especially to the brave and noble woman who had watched by his side. After referring to the older statesmen lately passed away and especially to Chief Justice Dorin, Mr. Laurier, in closing his address, said it might well happen that at such a time we lose heart lest the institutions of the land be placed in danger, but

Canada shall live on.

Mr. Laurier would have no objection to adjournment had information been given that the governor general had sent for some one to form a government. He was surprised that no information on that point had been given. By British custom the house would have been adjourned from day to day to allow the house to be kept informed of the course that was being pursued. Sir Hector said that he and his friends were not aware that the governor general had sent for any one. The appearances were that nothing would be done until after the funeral. He explained that if the house adjourned until after the funeral nothing would be gained by meeting before Tues-

Mr. Mills quoted a number of British precedents in favor of immediate action by the sovereign or her representative in sending for the person selected to form a new government. He hoped there would be no delay, as no one could tell what would happen at any time and at present the country had no government and no person

Sir John Thompson said that the motion for adjournment was not put forward to give the governor general time to choose hi chief adviser, but for the convenience of the members. He and his friends were by no means in a position to say that his excelleney would not proceed at the proper time, or that he would await the close of the period of adjournment. The house would certainly refrain from advising the governor general as to his course, having all confidence in him.

The house then adjourned.

On Sunday Mr McDonald noticed the window open, forgotten and though our great men go which led him to investigate when he discovered his loss. He immediately started out to run down the burglars, rightly surmising that they had gone towards Fredericton. He overtook them some distance above Dooktown, and identified them by the goods they had in their possession. He demanded the surrender of themselves and the goods, but as he had no warrant they got away from him. He went to Justice Archibald for the necessary papers, which were quickly issued and placed in the hands of Constable Holmes for execution. When Mr. McDonald started for the necessary authority to arrest the two men he had asked some young men whom he m to shadow them and these did their won so well that when officer Holmes arrived he found them on what is known as the Nelson bridge with a guard placed at each end. Bathurst Notes.

JUNE 8, 1891. The news of Sir John A. Macdonald's death was received here with expressions of deep regret. Yesterday and to-day flags were floating at half mast from the public buildings and the Keary House flag-staffs.

Forest fires of unusual size and intensity are raging in the vicinity of Bathurst. On Saturday last, a farmer living on the west side of the Basin kindled a brush fire and, a norwester striking up, the wood land was soon a mass of flames which could sometimes be distinctly seen from town although about 3 miles distant and sheltered from view by a high hill. The wind changed to northeast in the afternoon and subsided to a calm towards evening. Yesterday morning, another gale from the northwest rekindled the blaze and at one time the farm houses on the basin were likely to be licked up, but the wind changed to the northeast and the course of the flames was changed and the danger fortunately averted. The fire pursued a snake-like course of about four miles in length, and about two miles in width. Numberless fences and a quantity specting its utterances. His immediate of hewn lumber were destroyed. To-day the air is full of smoke, fires burning in all

The Caraquet Railway time table for the summer comes in force to-day. Hereafter trains will leave Shippegan in the morning arriving at Bathurst about 10 o'clock, leaving for Shippegan at 4 p. m. This is a very great advantage to persons from the lower end of the county as it gives them about 5 hours in which to attend to their business and arrive home the same day, The lumber is all down and in the booms. This must be very satisfactory to operators n view of the adverse weather this spring. A base-ball club is being organised by "the boys." A few trial games have had a stimulating effect and Bathurst is to be treated to its share of ball talk as well as the other summer sports.

Destroyed, etc. During the latter part of last week and on Sunday, as well as since, fires have occurred in the woods in the vicinity of the railway between Chatham and Fredericton. On Saturday last, serious damage was done in the Dunphy Settlement, near the parish line. The fire raged in the woods in the vicinity and it was with great difficulty that the widow Donald's store and the Baptist Church were saved. The Donald bridge across the South West Miramichi was observed to have taken fire in the pier in the middle of the river and Mr. Elijah Donald ran with a pail and partially extinguished it, but before he could get a second, the fire had gained such headway that it could not be approached with sufficient nearness to enable water to be thrown on it. The structure is almost completely destroyed. From what we can learn it seems that the mid-river pier and one of the shore abutments, together with the superstructure are burned, The foundations of course, remain so that reconstruction will not be so heavy an undertaking as the erection of an entirely new bridge. This bridge is a very important one, as it accommodated the Cain's River Settlement,

ON RECORD.

"TOTALLY DISABLED," YET CURED. Hamilton Times, May 27th, 1891. One of the most remarkable cures in the history of medicine has just been effected in this city and the fame of it is fast spreading throughout the land. Over four years ago Mr. John Marshall, then employed as manager of Mr. J. C. Williams' coal oil refinery healthful and vigorous, and enables the lost the use of his legs entirely and could of girlhood upon brow and cheek, the light use of a crutch and a stick. During the course of these years no less than fourteen leading physicians of this city treated him. Sometimes two or three of them were in attendance at once. All agreed that his disease was incurable. Mr. Marshall went to Toronto for electrical treatment, at a heavy expense, but received not the slightest benefit. He tried every patent medicine that was recommended to him, yet without getting any aid. The "suspension" treatment was resorted to, and he was suspended by means of appliances under his arms from the ceiling of the barn, but got no relief. Electric belts and appliances of an endless variety were tried, and thoroughly tried, too, but all resulted the same way-they left Mr. Marshall just as they had found him. At one time twenty pins were run right into the flesh of his leg. He barely felt two of them: the others he did not feel at all. His flesh was cut into with a knife and he felt not the slightest pain; and so he went on, until the 13th day of April last, every remedy suggested by anyone being tried, and hundreds of dollars spent upon patent medicines, to say nothing of doctors
