CHATHAM, N. B., AUGUST 6, 1891.

Speech of Hon. Mr. Adams, M. P.

We make room this week for Hon. Mr. Adams' speech in the debate on Sir Richard Cartwright's amendment to Hon. Mr. Foster's Tariff resolutions. The reports of speeches in the daily papers seem to convey inadequate ideas of what is really said. The conservative papers expressed a good opinion of Mr. Adams' speech, but did not give its scope, while the liberal papers characterized it as one dealing principally with scandals. We give, however, the Hansard report of it, so that Mr. Adams' constituents may judge it for themselves. While we do not agree with Mr. Adams in some of the views he propounds, we think the speech an able and clever effort—creditable to our representative, and one in which even his opponents in the county will find little to complain of.

Mr. Adams—in claiming the indulgence of the House, I assure you, Sir, that I shall be as concise as possible in dealing with some of the points raised by the various speakers who have taken part in this debate. We have had, during this discussion on the resolution of the hon. Finance Minister and the amendment thereto of the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright), all sorts of questions raised. All the matters in connection with reciprocity, and in connection with the National Policy, and in connection with the administration of the country by this Government, have been discussed in detail from every point of view. Each speaker has treated the subject in his own peculiar way, some dealing with it as it suited their own localities and their own prejudices, while others have taken broad and general grounds and discussed it from the national standpoint. In view of the various manners in which the different speakers from the east to the west have dealt with the subject under discussion, I desire to submit to the House, as best I can, matters which, to my mind, demand most the attention and consideration of this Parliament.

WE HEAR TO-DAY THE SAME OLD CRIES against this side of the House, that the Government have been negligent in their administration of our public affairs, and that they have neglected public business to such an extent that a vote of censure should be passed upon them. Hon. gentlemen opposite urge that the Government of to-day is just as responsible as the Government between 1867 and 1873, and ought to be similarly dealt with. The same policy, the same cries, the same crude criticisms are used by the Opposition against the Government to-day as were used in the past, when we came to give to them that fair and honest consideration and criticism which the importance of the question which before Parliament demanded, it is only just and right that we should bring to bear, in our criticisms and judgment upon the acts of the Administration, that fair-play and honest dealing to which the Government are entitled, recognizing the great responsibilities that rest upon them, either in case of failure or success.

THE TREATY OF 1864.
Why, is it possible to-day that we, sitting here, should be told that the old Government, from 1867 to 1873, were negligent in their conduct of the affairs of the country? We are told that if they had acted prudently and wisely, the Treaty of 1864 which continued to 1896 would have been renewed. What is the use of talking such nonsense as that, and bringing up these old issues, when the same men who sat on the other side from 1867 to 1873 hurled the same denunciations against the Treasury benches of that time which they are now hurling against the Government? They said then, and they say now, that if they were to occupy the Treasury benches they would solve the problem—that infinite problem and that uncertain policy which they initiated at the late election. When they got into power, in 1873, with all their promises of what they would accomplish they ignominiously failed in obtaining a renewal of that reciprocity treaty. I propose to quote utterances from some of the best men in the Liberal party on this subject, men who governed and controlled the country at that time; and to show that they were unable to succeed in this matter as well as the Administration that they followed.

HON. GEO. BROWN.
Let me cite an authority which, though it no doubt carry weight, though it may have been quoted before in this House, the testimony of the late Hon. George Brown, in reference to this question. He says:—
"That be this as it might, it was not for the people of Canada to be influenced by such anticipations. They had shown their ability to open new markets for themselves when the American market was closed against them, and the clear path for them was to follow with resolute energy and perseverance the policy on which they had entered." Let them seek to develop their great natural industries, and especially the agricultural, shipping, fishing and lumber industries. Let them open up new markets adapted to their trade, and let the Canadian flag be found floating on every sea."

These are the words of wisdom that fell from the lips of the Hon. George Brown, and this was the legacy he left to his Liberal friends. He was unable and his party were unable to succeed in what they desired, and this brought to the mind of Mr. Brown the fact that Canada must do something for herself, that she no longer could depend with any hope upon a renewal of that treaty, and he advised that the policy he mapped out should be adopted, that the views he submitted for their guidance should be followed, and then he predicted that success would come. Within the boundaries of this little nation of ours, we are able, if we have fair-play, to compete with the rest of the world. Only give us the chance, let us avail ourselves of what we have, and we will secure success. Repeating between the lines of the words I have quoted from the late Hon. George Brown, it appears that he marked out to the Liberal party, that the only security for Canada was to adopt a NATIONAL POLICY.

He laid the foundation and gave the advice that the time was not far distant when they must adopt a trade policy for themselves as against the United States. My hon. friends on the other side do not see fit to follow the advice tendered by their late leader, but it is evident, looking backward and observing the words which were uttered then, the people were told to look to the development of our own country, to develop its resources, and that in that way only would we meet with success.

HON. ALEX. MACKENZIE
As another illustration, let me quote the words of wisdom which fell from another hon. gentleman who occupies a seat in this House to-day—I refer to the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, late Premier of Canada. He said:—
"I deprecate the idea of eriging to the Americans."
Is that the policy of the Liberal party to-day? Do they demand that we shall not erig to the United States? Is not their policy that we shall try to negotiate with the United States in such a way that the control of our fiscal policy shall be taken from the Canadians and placed in the hands of the United States? Later on I will prove that their policy of unrestricted reciprocity must mean political union—there is no other solution. Mr. Mackenzie says:—
"I deprecate the idea of eriging to the Americans. I fully appreciate the benefits of reciprocity, but I do not think it becomes us, under present circumstances, to make any efforts for its renewal. I believe that we should pursue our trade policy without regard to reciprocity."
What words of encouragement do we need more than these? There is no eriging to the Americans, but he believes that we should pursue our own trade policy without regard to reciprocity. He tells us to depend upon ourselves, to test our own strength, and that the country can provide for its own wants, and, if the old member could tell his story again, I believe he would tell the same story, and would say: Let us not erig to the Americans but have hope in ourselves. And it must be remembered that these are words coming from hon. gentlemen opposite, who differ from us, who oppose us, and who charge the Administration of to-day with gross mismanagement of public business.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT
Now, Mr. Speaker, I come to another authority, the authority of the hon. gentleman who has moved the amendment to the resolution, the member for South Oxford. If I take him as an authority, hon. gentlemen opposite must consider him a good one. Now, surely the words that have fallen from his lips must have some influence with the men of this country. The hon. gentleman, in 1878, spoke in the constituency of the hon. member for Queens, P. E. I. (Mr. Davies) and speaking with all the responsibility of a Cabinet Minister, when addressing the people of that place in reference to the question of reciprocity with the United States and the failure on the part of his Government and the preceding Government to obtain a further continuation of it, what advice did he give to the people of the Island? He says:—
"If you say you are going to frighten the United States into reciprocity by imposing certain duties on articles now coming in from that country, all I have to say is, that the men who tell you that reciprocity with the United States is essential to your existence are, in my opinion, playing a most unwise and unpatriotic part."

Danzig officials are said to have discovered that bacillary infections can be communicated by the "membranes" of telephones.

Nicoret Notes.
I have suffered continual pain from cancer of the stomach and my face and body were covered with pimples. I tried Bardsley Bitter, and the first dose occasioned slight pain, but I soon found relief, and after taking 5 bottles I B. B. B. came completely cured. I think B. B. B. is the most powerful remedy known to science.

The Use Of

Harsh, drastic purgatives to relieve constiveness is a dangerous practice, and more liable to fasten the disease on the patient than that cure it. What is needed is a medicine that, in effectually opening the bowels, corrects the constive habit and restores a natural daily action. Such an aperient is found in which, while thorough in action, strengthen as well as stimulate the bowels and excretory organs.

"For eight years I was afflicted with constipation, which at last became so bad that the doctors could do no more for me. Then I began to take Ayer's Pills, and soon the bowels became regular and natural in their movements. I am now in excellent health."
—Wm. H. DeLaune, Dorset, Ont.

"When I feel the need of a cathartic, I take Ayer's Pills, and find them to be more than any other pill I ever took."—Mrs. E. C. Grubb, Burwellville, Va.

"For years I have been subject to constipation and nervous headaches, caused by derangement of the liver. After taking various remedies, I have become convinced that Ayer's Pills are the best. They have never failed to relieve my bilious attacks in a short time, and I am sure my system remains in tone longer after the use of these Pills, than has been the case with any other medicine I have tried."—H.
