Nearly all the newspapers of Canada have had their say about the political scandals that have been in course of development at Ottawa since the opening of Parliament, and the ordinary citizen, who has depended for his information upon a very large number of them, has been puzzled as to what he ought to believe. He has taken up his paper with conservative sustained. leanings, and learned from it that certain damaging developments have been made, but he also finds these explained away in such a manner as to leave the impression that some envious or lying liberal has been endeavoring to injure the reputation of the government or some member thereof. Turning to his paper that has a liberal bias, he finds the same damaging developments in liberals from having the truth known and the guilty punished.
