OTTAWA, Aug. 13 .- Sir John Thompson moved when the house met to-day that, in consequence of the refusal of Thomas Mc-Greevy to reply to questions asked in the privileges committee, he be summoned to report to the house in his place next Tues-

On the motion for supply, Sir Richard Cartwright submitted the following amend-

"That the acceptance of gifts or testimon-ails of any kind on the part of ministers of the crown, or any member of their families, from contractors, government officials or others having pecuniary relations with the government, is entirely opposite to sound principles of administration and calculated to bring parliamentary government into contempt, and that the example thus given tends to corrupt and demoralize the officials serving under the ministers who have accepted Thursday of next week. monials, as aforesaid."

Sir Richard said that his motion did not the government. What he protested against | A. Macdonald. was the acceptance of money from contractors or from other persons interested financially in legislation or administration. He referred to testimonials to Sir John Macdonald and other ministers and said the thing had become a public evil. His motion was not intended as a resolution of want of confidence and he hoped the gentlemen opposite would see their way clear to vote for his position in respect to the abstract proposition made in the motion before the house, he would refer to Sir Richard's observations. He was quite inaccurate in his account of the Sir John Macdonald testimonial of twenty years ago. It was not then thought that Sir John would ever be in a position to supposed to be on his death-bed. The persons who subscribed to that testimonial could not have been open to censure, and indeed Sir Richard could not have intended to impute wrong motives, for he believed Sir Richard was himself a contributor to that testimonial. Referring to the testimonial presented to Sir Hector Langevin eight years ago, Sir John Thompson did not care to say more than one thing, namely, that Sir Hector had sworn that he did not know the name of more than one contributor and he was not a contractor, therefore he could not have been influenced. Further than this he as one of the judges in the case before the committee declined to discuss the matter. Sir Richard had quoted Mr. Blake on the Langevin testimonial, observing that the ministers had conceived recent respect for that gentleman Sir John Thompson admitled the respect for Mr. Blake's character and Abilities, but refused to endorse everything he might have said in times past in the heat of debate, even if Mr. Blake had now come into conflict of opinion with former associates. He protested against the statement that Canada had become a reproach and a by- Murphy about 17, was holding a board for lan, Wm. Hon. Mr. Costigan said that as one minister who had received a testimonial he would briefly discuss the question, first observing that he was quite in favor of the motion. He did not at the time he entered the m n istry flatter himself that he was called to the cabinet for his great ability. He was chesen as the representative of an element in the population. He was not free from faults, but he knew that he was free from temptation to try to make gain out of his influence as a minister. When a testimonial was given him he assumed it to come from friends and from the people he specially represented Two years ago, and not till then, he learned the names of the subscribers. as sufficient proof. Hon. Mr. Chapleau took Mr. Laurier t task for quoting the Le Presse pamphlet against Sir Hector Langevin as conservative utterances. Mr. Laurier knew well that at this time Le Presse was a bitter and violent opponent of the government and that the pamphlet he quoted was the most bitter and venomous attack ever made on a public man or a government. This alleged conservative pamphlet was circulated among a riotous crowd which tried to mob him (Chapleau) at the famous Langevin meeting. The secre tary of state expressed the hope that the amendment would not be considered retroactive, for he had received some presents in his time and really could not say who contributed to them. Stronger Iron Castings

Some of the most prominent iron founders are introducing a new and simple practice in order to secure stronger castings. the method in question consisting in placing thin sheets of wrought iron in the centre of the mould previous to to the operation of casting. This method was first resorted to, it appears in the casting of thin plates for the ovens of cooking stoves, it being found that a sheet of thin iron in the centre of a quarter-inch oven plate rendered it practically unbreakable by the fire. This result has led to the process being now applied to the casting of large iron pipes, a core of sheet iron imparting additional strength and lessening the liability to any fracture. As an evidence of the additional strength capable of being imparted by this means, it A FLUME 52 MILFS LONG :- A large flume | is stated that a plate of iron one-fourth of an has been constructed in California 52 miles | inch thick, cast with a perforated sheet of long, for carrying timber from the place of 27-wire guage wrought iron in the centre, possessed six times the strength of a similar in the Sierra Nevada mountains gives a sup- plate had the strength of a plate one inch

Hon. Attorney-General made a graceful acknowledgment of the address and ther proceeded to speak on the politics of the province and the administration of the Gov ernment since 1878, proving that the gov ernment of which he was the leader had carried into effect all the pledges he had made to the people. He reviewed the financial position of the province and showed how the controllable expenditure, such as contingencies, public printing, expenses of the executive and of the legislature, had been reduced, and explained how the increase of the public debt was caused by necessary railways and other works to which the province was pledged under the previous administration, or that were demanded for the development of the country.
