and Sibyl having retired early, wearied by a special touch of an exquisite sympathy. day of sight-seeing, Halbert and himself were smoking together in the sitting-room his eyes to the joyous brightness of another of the former. The door was open, partly day in the land of sunshine; and all the for the balmy air, partly that they might | brightness was tenfold enhanced when the and its garden always present at night,—the his apartment—brought by the messenger graceful encircling galleries lighted brilliantly with incandescent electric lights, every day-was that Don Maurizio and his and the rich tropical foliage of the garden household had arrived. fully revealed in the white radiance.

'I have never been in a place that charmed me so much as this,' said Halbert, after a pause of some length. 'I do not think it is the peculiar circumstances that make everything seem so enchanting. And, by the bye, Geoffrey, I feel that I ought to tell you something about those circumstances. It hardly seems fair to keep you in ignorance. Sibyl insists that it makes no difference; but I am not sure-'

'Sibvl!' repeated Derwent, staring at the other. He had never known Halbert so familiar before, for Mies Lenox, though a the hardiest constitution, while to those with relative of Mrs. Derwent, was not at all related to the young man, who was Derwent's cousin on his father's side. 'What are you talking about?' he asked. 'What circumstances have occurred which Sibyl thinks do not concern me?'

Halbert smoked for a moment silently before he answered. Then he turned and faced his companion directly. 'She promised to marry me,' he said, 'and, although she assures me positively to the contrary, I fear the news will not be pleasant to

There was more than a moment's silence now. Derwent felt indeed as if he had been most unexpectedly knocked down. This was an event on which he had not reckoned in calculating the possibility of atoning for his father's wrong-doing. In all his considerations he had never contemplated the probability that Sibyl might marry before she attained her majority, and thus anticipate the time of settlement : in fact, there can be little doubt that the general opinion of every one about them had led him to fancy that he might marry her himself, if he chose to do so. The blow to his vanity (which really had been very little concerned) was not, however, the cause of his silence. He was overwhelmed by the terrible necessity of telling Halbert how matters stood.

But nothing was more natural than that Halbert should have misunderstood his silence. He said at length, in a low tone, 'Geoff, I am more sorry for this than I can say. I feared it would be so, but Sibyl was sure that I was mistaken. She insisted that you never were in love with her, but I knew you could not have been associated with her so closely and fail to be.'

'Sibyl is right,' said Derwent, rousing NOTICE TO NON-RESIDENT himself with an effort. 'I suppose it is because we have been associated so closelyalmost like brother and sister-that I never was in love with her, though I know of no girl more altogether worthy of a man's love. As far as that is concerned, you have my heartiest congratulations; indeed, you have them in any case. But your news has been the partiest congratulations indeed, you have them in any case. But your news has been the partiest congratulations indeed, you have signed Justice of the Peace, at his office in the Parties of Chatham, County of Northumberland, Province of New Brunswick, within two months from the partiest congratulations. As far as that is concerned, you have my a shock to me for an altogether different reason. I am in terrible trouble about Sibyl's fortune.

'Geoffrey !' 'Yes: that is why I am here. When I Flett, Enoch looked into my father's affairs after his Kelly, William M. (Estate)16,50 15.90 5.70 Killam, A. You may not have known that he was concerned in several unlucky specalations during the last years of his life.'

'I suspected it,' said Halbert. 'In fact it was whispered once or twice that he was very hard hit. But, when nothing seemed to come of it, I forgot the rumors. Geoff, my poor fellow, this is awful! How does his own fortune stand?'

'Very much impaired, -so much that when I make good the loss on Sibyl's fortune my mother will be very straitened in means. It was to save her from this, and also to save my father's honor, that I intended trying to replace what had been lost during the time that remains of Sibyl's minority. I decided that my best chance to make money quickly was here: so] came, -with what result, thus far, you

'You have not been here very long,' said Halbert. 'One failure signifies nothing. How have you been impressed by the possible chances?'

'I have been very well impressd. There is no place in the world, I am sure, where it is possible for the investment of a little capital to produce such large results. But time is needed to accomplish these re

'That is the case everywhere- Only in dreams are fortunes realized in a day. Well, my dear fellow, as far as I am concerned, -and I know I can answer for Sibyl, -the time is yours. > (To be Continued.) The Dangers of Spring.

Poets and novelists go into ecstasies over what they romantically call "beautiful spring," and "gentle spring," and while, no doubt, every one is glad to see winter release its icy grasp, "beautiful spring" is, after all, one of the most deadly seasons of the year, Sudden transitions from warmth to extreme cold, with piercing, chilling winds; from dry to sloppy, "muggy" weather, all combine to make the season a most trying one, even to weak constitutions the season is one positive danger. Undoubtedly the greatest danger at this season of the year is from cold in the head, which very few escape, and which if not promptly and thoroughly treated, developes into catarrh, with all its disagreeable and loathsome effects. Catarrh, neglected, almost as certainly developes into consumption, anaually destroying thousands of lives. At this trying season no household should be without a bottle of Nasal Balm. In cases of cold in the head it gives almost instant relief and effects a speedy cure, thus preventing the development of catarih. Where the latter disease has already secured a hold it is equally efficacious, and with persistent use will cure the worst case. From the outset it sweetens the breath, stops the nauseous droppings into the throat and lungs, dispels those dull headaches that afflict the sufferer from catarrh. Nasal Balm is not advertised as a cure-all-it is an honest remedy which never fails to cure cold in the head or catarrh when the directions are faithfully followed, and thousands throughout the country have reason to bless its discovery. Nasal Balm may be had from all dealers or will be sent post-paid on receipt of price (50 cents, small, or $1, large size bottle) by addressing Fulford & Co., Brock-

One Dollar and Sixty Cents a Year!

I have made the foregoing changes in the business of the ADVANCE The first is because many patrons who have been given credit, have abused the privilege to such an extent as to make the business of publishing the paper a non-paying one, and it is necessary, in my own interest and that of those who do pay, that I should no longer continue to furnish the AD JANCE to those non-paying subscribers. The second reason is, that I wish to meet the competition of the city weeklies, which are made up from the type of the dailies and, therefore, cost little for production in comparison with a local paper like the ADVANCE, the type of which must be set up especially Having published the ADVANCE for sixteen years, and endeavored to make it a creditable representative of Miramichi and North Shore enterprise-a paper which may be taken into any household without fear that it has catered to sensationalism at the sacrifice of that cleanliness of matter, which is too often neglected by the press of the day-I have reason to hope the foregoing announcement will meet with general approval and be the means of largely increasing the circulation and influence of the paper.
