Of the great prime ministers of England there is only one that can be compared with Sir John Macdonald for the length of his administration-Sir Robert Walpole. He is the first of the premiers of the House of Hanover, his first appointment to the supreme office in the realm dating just after the accession of George I. He was head of the Cabinet from October 10, 1714, till April 10, 1717 -just two years and six months. After the brief attempt to govern of the Hon. James Stanhope and the Eurl of Sunderland, he resumed office on the 20th o April, 1720, and continued in power till years, or, in all, twenty-four years and three months. The time during which Sir John Macdonald was absolutely at the head of a government under the Union and under Confederation about equals, while the period of his virtual supremacy surpasses this protracted ministerial reign. Henry Pelham ruled for nearly eleven years; Lord North, for more than twelve years; the Earl of Liverpool for nearly thirteen. No later English Premier has been more than six or seven years the head of the nation, and, if we seek for parallels to Sir John's long and efficient tenure of the reins of power we must seek them abroad in such careers as Prince Bismarck's, Herr Tieza's or Count Taafe's, not one of which, however, equalled in duration the rule of our late Premier. - [Montreal Gazette-

The route lay along one street, and to that point the people of the city and thousands of visitors flocked. As the imposing procession moved along and the hearse passed by every head was bared, and to the tribute of respectful silence there was in many cases added the tribute of loving tears. The drapings of mourning were general all along the line of watch, and were not limited at all to places of business. Some of the private houses were bedecked with emblems of sorrow in tasteful style. The distance to the cemetery was three full miles. This, with the return, was more than the walkers could be expected to endure, loyal and loving as was their purpose, and hence, according to arrangement, they halted just outside the city limits and allowed the procession of vehicles to pass between their ranks. There was about 100 of the marchers who considered no sacrifice too great for their chieftain, and they pushed onward to the cemetery. It is, perhaps, now too late for us to do much good in adding another to the many previous and neglected warnings we have given on the subject, but we take occasion to say that the attempt to confine parent salmon in the Carleton Mill Pond at St. John at the present time, for the purpose of procuring their ova and milt for hatchery purposes in the latter part of October next, ought to lead to service, at least, of whoever is responsible for the cruel and unscientific blunder. To those who understand the habits of salmon and the conditions necessary to their propagation, the ignorance displayed in impounding salmon in such a place for such a purpose is inexplicable and well calculated to bring the Department into contempt. It is to be hoped that some competent person in St. John will note the result of the absurd experiment of our fresh-water friends at Ottawa, and see that they are not successful-in connection with their mill pond stupidity-in repeating the frauds and impositions already exposed by our efforts and recorded in the departmental reports.
