A GREAT TROUT:-This has been a good season for the fishermen. Parties have been whipping the streams in all sections of the Province, and generally with success. To Mr. J. Arthur Dawson, who went no farther away than Loch Lamond, belongs the honour of having captured the largest trout. It was on exhibition Monday in the window of his tailoring establishment on Dock street and attracted general attention. The fish measured 191 inches long and 131 inches round; across the back it was 31 inches, and it was 51 inches thick. The weight was 4 lbs 10 oz. -Globe.

NEW KIND OF SALMON-FISHING:-The fish commissioners of the State are endeavor ing to introduce an innovation in Penobscot bay fishing which, if it succeeds, will create interest everywhere. A few days since Commissioner E. W. Gould, of Searsport, made an effort to catch sea salmon by trolling in a boat, in the same manner pursued in fishing for land locked salmon. Live fish were used for bait. The trial was made off Brigadier's island. Dr. Gould says he struck a salmon but did not succeed in capturing him. Commissioner Stanley was expected there this week to make another trial with Dr. Gould. The latter thinks that the mode of fishing is perfectly feasible and will be successful. - Bangor Commercial.

SHOOTING AFFRAY: - On Saturday evening last about 9 o'clock, George Bogle, of Barnaby River, was shot by a charge from a shot gun in the hands of his uncle, John Bogle, the charge took effect in the right shoulder. It appears that there was a dispute about a line fence between their two properties, John removing the former fence and placing it where he thought it should be, using some of George's fence rails in the new fence. Words arose and John seized the gun which it is said he had hid in the barn for several days and fired the George was brought to Newcastle on Saturday night and on Sunday was taken to the Hotel Dieu, Chatham, where he still remains under treatment, the wound is a serious one but he is expected to recover. John Bogle cleared out as soon as the deed was done and is supposed to be hiding not far away. - Advocate.

JUNE, 15, 1891. On Friday afternoon last about 2 o'clock a terrific whirlwind visited the vicinity Bathurst. Dark clouds in the northwest sky about that time foretold at least a thunder shower, but it proved to be violent hail and rain storm accompanied by a terrible gale. From reports, the width of the track followed was about three miles. So far as known, the damage done was between Feter's river and Salmon Beach, viz. from northwest to southwest. At Peter's river, the house of Dominique Doucet was shifted about 10 to 12 inches out of place, two chimneys hurled from the roof and all his fencing razed to the ground.

Following the course above described, the gale struck Youghal and Carron Point, levelling all fences en route.

At Salmon Beach, several fishermen over hauling salmon nets had narrew escapes. All their boats and canoes swamped at the outset. Some saved themselves by holding to the canoes in the best manner possible, obliged to jump from them and grasp the pickets or nets as the case might be and remain in that position until the storm had passed when they were rescued by parties from the shore. One of these described the gale to your correspondent, stating that he has been fishing on the coast for a number of years and it has never been (and he hopes never will be) his lot to witness such "short and wicked" storm, All the fences in Salmon Beach met the same fate as in

Peter's river and Youghal. At Carron Point large trees were torn from the ground and a number of lesser ones were also uprooted. Strange to say that although persons in Bathurst witnessed the blow there was very little rain or wind

Argument on these points lasted over nine days, and the archbishop reserved judgment. The momentous judgment was at last delivered at Lambeth Palace on Nov. 21, 1890. The Archbishop of Canterbury decided: First, that the bishop had offended by mixing the chalice during service; second, that by administering the mixed chalice he had not offended; third, that by drinking the ablution he had not offended : fourth, that by taking the eastward position | ball. during the first part of the communion service he had not offended; fifth, that he had offended by so standing during the conse the elements he had not offended : eighth. that in making the sign of the cross during absolution or benediction he had offended.

> The Bishop of Lincoln's supporters had some reason to be satisfied, seeing that out of the eight charges five were decided absolutely in favor of the bishop, and that the general tenor of the deliverance may tend to remove a widely existing suspicion that the observance of certain ritual customs means "Romanism." The anti-ritualist tion, were greatly chagrined, and lodged an appeal before the privy council. They appear confident that the judicial committee will reverse the judgment and vindicate what they deem Protestant principles and Protestant practices.
