CHATHAM, N. B. JUNE 30, 1892. LADY FLORRY'S GEMS.

Creak! creak! And then thud! splash! splash! and a horrible echoing, whispering sound, as the water drawn up by the two men at the winch rose some 10 feet higher, when each bucket in turn was caught by a check and reversed, to pour the contents into a huge cistern to supply the drinking water at the castle.

I, Charles Lester, had climbed the down after my early morning visit to the sea beneath the cliffs, where a plunge down into the clear depths had sent an electric thrill through me. There I had swum and dived for 10 minutes, dressed in the warm sunshine, and tramped back over the cliff slope, where Lord Gurtleigh's flock of South-downs were nibbling the short dewy herbage and giving their mutton a gamey flavor by crunching up the thousands of tiny snail shells as well.

I was satisfied with the look of the flock, laughed at myself as I thought what a farmer, bailiff, and general man of business I was growing in dear old Dick's interest, and then had gone round so as to pass through the gardens and let the men see I was about.

"I know they'll call me a nigger driver," I said to myself, "but they've all had too easy a time of it during Dick's minority, and things have been shamefully neglected." And then I turned on my heels respecting the management of the estate as I went back to the castle, making up my mind that, as Gurtleigh had placed everything in my hands, I would have none but good men about the place.

Nothing! Well, I have a little to say. Give me your keys, I shall have the plate examined at once. His lordship will be extremely loath to have you prosecuted, but you must leave here; and I can only say, how could you be so mad as to throw away so good a post?

"Oh, for God's sake, forgive me, sir," he cried passionately, and crying now like a child. "I'll confess everything, sir. The plate is all right, sir—I swear it is, sir; but I did take a little wine."

"A little, man! hundreds of dozens are missing!" "Yes, sir, it's true, sir; but have mercy on me, sir. I'll turn over a new leaf, sir, and be the best servant his lordship could have, sir. I did sell some wine, sir, I was tempted, sir. No one ever wanted to know about it before in all these years."

"And now the day of reckoning has come. Yes, sir; but I will mind, sir. For heaven's sake, forgive me, sir. I've a wife and family, sir, and it's ruin to me. You know it is. I can never get another place with a character like that. I'll be your slave, sir, and I'll confess everything, sir, and show you what's been going on in the stables, and at the farm and in the garden, and about the hares and fezzans, sir."

"I can find out for myself," I said sternly; and Lord Gurtleigh wants an honest butler, not a contemptible tale-bearing spy."

"Of course, sir, of course. But, Mr. Lester, sir, have mercy on me. Indeed I'll turn over a new leaf. Then go and turn it over, man, and don't grovel before me in that way. Let me see that you do repent. But, mind this, if the slightest act of dishonesty comes to my ken, there will be no more mercy."

"God bless you, sir; thank you, sir," he sobbed out. "I—I—"

He could say no more; but broke down, and stood with his face working.

"Sit down, Brayson, till you are more composed," I said quietly. "There is cold water in that carafe; take some. Don't let the servants see you in this condition."

"Thank you, sir; thank you," he whispered hoarsely; and the glass tapped against the bottle as he poured out some water to drink it.

"Weak, drinks more than is good for him—excepting the cold water from the well every morning to steady his nerves," I said to myself, as soon as Brayson had gone. "Well, I hope he will turn out all right, and that I have made him a friend."

force-pump turned by a pony or a donkey, as at Carisbrooke. Oh! by the way, Brayson, I continued, as I was crossing the yard toward the gates. "I want to go over the wine-cellar."

"The wine-cellar, sir?" he said and his fat face changed color. "Yes, to take stock. Your lordship talks of laying down a fresh supply. Have your cellar-book ready, and we'll begin at once. There was a slight dew on the man's face, or I fancied there was, and I said to myself, as I went round to the front:

"Master Brayson has been helping himself to a few bottles of port, and I've got to find him out. Deuced unpleasant, all this running tilt at the servants; I wish I had gone on reading for the law."

After breakfast I rang for Brayson, and began my inspection of the wine-cellar. That took up the greater part of four days. Result: I had Brayson into the little library, which was given up to me as my office, Lord Gurtleigh having merely reserved to himself the right to come of an evening and smoke a pipe.

Brayson came in looking very pale and sullen. In those four days he had lost flesh; and, as he stood before me, the miserable wretch perspired profusely and was trembling.

"Now, look here, Brayson," I said gravely, "you are aware that Lord Gurtleigh has placed everything in my hands."

"Yes, sir, his lordship told me so." "Exactly. Well I am very sorry to have to exercise my prerogative so soon; but I must make an example. You were in the late Lord Gurtleigh's service for 15 years, and the past seven years you have had sole charge of that valuable cellar of wine which has been shamefully plundered. What have you to say?"

"His lips moved, but no words came. Nothing! Well, I have a little to say. Give me your keys, I shall have the plate examined at once. His lordship will be extremely loath to have you prosecuted, but you must leave here; and I can only say, how could you be so mad as to throw away so good a post?"

"Oh, for God's sake, forgive me, sir," he cried passionately, and crying now like a child. "I'll confess everything, sir. The plate is all right, sir—I swear it is, sir; but I did take a little wine."

Headache.

Usually results from a deranged stomach or a sluggish liver. In either case, an aperient is needed. Ayer's Pills, the mildest and most reliable cathartic in use, correct all irregularities of the stomach, liver, and bowels, and, in a brief time, relieve the most distressing headache. These pills are highly recommended by the profession, and the demand for them is universal.

"I have been afflicted, for years, with headache and indigestion, and though I spent nearly my fortune in medicines, I never found any relief until I began to take Ayer's Pills. Six bottles of these Pills completely cured me."—Benjamin Harper, Plymouth, Montreal, W. I.

CURED BY two boxes of Ayer's Pills.—Emma Keyes, Hubbardstown, Mass. "For the cure of headache, Ayer's Cathartic Pills are the most efficient medicine I ever used."—Robert K. James, Dorchester, Mass.
