Don't ask me to "back" with blinds on. I am afraid to.

Don't run me down a steep hill, for if anything should give way I might break your neck.

Don't put on my blind bridle so that it irritates my eyes, or leave my forehead that it will be in my eyes.

Don't do so careless of my harness as to find a great sore on me before you attend to it.

Don't lend me to some blockhead with less sense than I have.

Don't tie me out in the cold without a blanket, after driving me until I sweat, I can catch cold and die.

Don't put blinders on me. The God who created me would have given me blinders naturally if I had needed them.

Don't give me post hay after a hard day's work or a long, rapid drive. I have a stomach, and it needs filling.

Don't make my check-rein so tight that it almost breaks my neck. I suffer quite as much as you would in so unnatural a position.—Logan Journal.

A NEW OCCUPATION FOR WOMEN.

It is becoming the custom in all retail dry goods establishments to employ a person whose sole business is to write the advertisements used day by day, also to make up all pamphlets, circulars, posters, catalogues, in fact, to see to it all the advertisement matter used by the house, writes Virginia Frazee in an interesting article on "Women as Advertisement Writers" in the June Ladies Home Journal.

In the few cases known to the writer where women have filled this important place they have been eminently successful. It is work peculiarly fitted to women, for there is one thing in this world that womankind agree in loving it certainly is dry goods, and it is second nature to talk about them. And writing dry goods advertisements is simply talking about dry goods. Of course, the writer must know what to say, how to say it, and above all when enough has been said; must be able to say much in a few words and make those words "tell"; must exert her power of imagination to put her announcements in attractive forms that will catch the eyes of the readers as they glance over the paper. The chief object of the advertisement is to place the business written before the reader in the best possible light. All this comes with a very little experience, a little study of the matter. Some familiarity with the routine will soon put one entirely at ease.

A VETERINARY VIEW OF CRUELTY.

The following is the report of a committee appointed by the British National Veterinary Congress for the purpose of further considering the subject of cruelty to animals from a veterinary point of view, and publishing a declaration on certain practices and painful operations on animals.

Lameness may be painless or painful. Those cases where the lameness passes off with exercise are prima facie cases that are accompanied by pain—this specially applies to cases of navicular disease and spavin. In such cases horses ought not to be worked, and when worked it is cruelly.

The practice called twitching causes acute pain and is frequently unjustifiable. Extracting temporary teeth save for a surgical reason is cruelty.

Docking and nicking horses are cruel. Marking and branding animals when necessary, should be performed by the quickest and least painful method.

Operations of various kinds are frequently performed on animals by ignorant persons, and much cruelty is caused thereby, which ought to be publicly deprecated and prevented by law. All painful operations not required for the good of the animal operated on are of a cruel nature. No operation causing pain to an animal should be performed by an unskilful person. All necessary operations ought to be performed in a scientific manner and by the most humane methods, in order thereby to prevent the infliction of unnecessary pain.

THE HORSE SAYS DON'T.

Don't think because I go free under the whip, I don't get tired. You would move up if under a whip.

Don't whip me when I get frightened along the road, or I will expect it next time.

Don't make me up hill, for I have to carry you and myself and the buggy too. Try it yourself sometime. Run up hill with a big load.

Don't keep my stable very dark, for when I go out into the light my eyes are injured especially if snow be on the ground.

Don't put an overdraw rein on me. It cramps the muscles of my neck and tortures me especially in warm weather.

Don't say "whoa" unless you mean it. Teach me to stop at that word. It may check me if the lines break, and save a runaway and smash up.

Don't make me drink too cold water, or put a frosty bit in my mouth. Warm it by holding it half a minute against my body.

Don't forget to fill my teeth when they get jagged and I can not chew my food. When I get lean it is a sign my teeth want filing.

Don't ask me to "back" with blinds on. I am afraid to.

Don't run me down a steep hill, for if anything should give way I might break your neck.

Don't put on my blind bridle so that it irritates my eyes, or leave my forehead that it will be in my eyes.

Don't do so careless of my harness as to find a great sore on me before you attend to it.

Don't lend me to some blockhead with less sense than I have.

Don't tie me out in the cold without a blanket, after driving me until I sweat, I can catch cold and die.

Don't put blinders on me. The God who created me would have given me blinders naturally if I had needed them.

Don't give me post hay after a hard day's work or a long, rapid drive. I have a stomach, and it needs filling.

Don't make my check-rein so tight that it almost breaks my neck. I suffer quite as much as you would in so unnatural a position.—Logan Journal.
