The Mitchell House, Newcastle.

A rare chance to acquire a valuable prop erty in Newcastle is offered by Mr. John Rabinson who has decided to dispose of the premises so well known as the Mitchell House, situated on the principal street of the town opposite Masonic Hall. It has been for a good many years successfully run as a hotel, and is, therefore, well known to the travelling public-especially as a home-like stopping place for people from outlying the financial aspects of the Scott Act question as tollows : places in this and adjoining counties. The frontage on the street is 60 feet and the depth 176 feet, commodious stables being located at the rear, facing on a large yard which affords ample room for moving teams, while the other facilities for sheltering and taking care of horses are ample. The house has just passed through the hands of repairers and painters and, to use an expressive current term, is as good as new, so that the next occupant has only to move in and commence business, which must flow towards the old stand as soon as some lucky hotel man goes there and gives it a chance.

Indeed, I might, if time permitted, go on at great length to show the many excellent provisions of the New Brunswick Act, but I must stop, remembering that space-even in newspapers-is limited. What I cannot close without saying, however, is that if the Scott Act is not repealed we shall miss the opportunity to set this excellent law in motion. If the Scott Act is repealed, thousands in the County, who realiso its failure and are not in sympathy with it for that and other reasons, will become earnest friends of the present temperance workers in securing an honest carrying out of the more inteligent and workable measure. I do not hope to make converts amongst my temperance riends who appear to have grown rabid and nreasonable in their almost insane idolizing of the Scott Act, but I write as one who appeals to his fellow-citizens of moderate and reasonable views, who, when they know they cannot have all the temperance reform they desire, are ready to assist in getting the County under a better law for the regulation and suppression of the traffic than that found wanting.

The Councillors' Election.

Next Tuesday is polling day for the election of councillors. There are only three candidates for the two seats at the Board for the parish of Chatham, viz., the present councillors-Messrs. Roger Flanagan and Robert Murray-and Mr. Theophilus Des-Brisay. They are all good men. Mr. Flanagan having represented Chatham for many years, and also occupied the position of Warden of the County, Mr. Murray be which we have tried for ten years and ing a lawyer and, of course, fairly efficient acclamation, but for the fact that Mr. Murray has, since his election, become a creditor of the County to the amount of about $1,000. It is felt by many who would otherwise favor him that as the items of his account will need close scanning in the interest of the ratepayers, it will be fitting that persons other than himself should represent the parish of Chatham, which pays about one third of the whole contingent assessment of the County. When he comes to present his account he will-as a lawyer and creditor- have every opportunity to explain

MINCING LANE, LONDON.

The people who are ostensibly engaged in the campaign for the retention of the Scott Act in Northumberland, have resorted to rather fantastic methods for attract ing public attention on several occasions. but they succeeded in making an unusual display, even for them, on Tuesday evening in Masonie Hall. About a fortnight ago they imported a person who calls himseif "Jim Smith," and succeeded in giving him a decent standing by working him into one or more of the town pulpits, where, on one occasion, at least, he posed as an ex-prize fighter, but claimed to be now a good christian. After being away from Chatham several days he reappeared here at a meeting on Tuesday night in Masonic Hall, which was presided over by Mr. W. S. Loggie, one of our most prominent merchants, and called under the auspices of that gentleman and others associated with him in the active work of the Scott Act campaign, for the purpose of sustaining the Act. Mr. Loggie and Mr. "Jim Smith" were the only speakers at the meeting. Mr. Loggie confined himself to advocacy of the act and did the best he could in claiming support for it, Mr. "Jim Smith's" address. however, was a slashing assault on the AD-WANCE and its editor, personally. After abusing both in the terms characteristic of persons of his class, "Jim" appealed to the aulience and the general public, who patronise the paper, to do so no longer, etc We suppose that the presently excited citizens who brought this ill-mannered individual here to give public atterance to the venomous feelings they entertain towards but lack the courage to assume the pernal responsibility of expressing, imagine shey are, in some way, promoting their peculiar views by their course, but they will find that they are behaving very unwisely. They cannot possibly affect the ADVANCE or its business interests, much less work the injury upon its editor which they strive for, whenever they have opportunity. We cannot, of course, help a feeling of pity and contempt for the leaders and managers who hire such men as this "Jim Smith" and preside over and applaud his assaults upon respectable citizens, and sacraligeous references to church sacraments, and then give us their disavowals of personal responsibility for their utterances, but are satisfied that even these will, through the higher and better civilizing influences of the time, learn more intelligent methods by which to promote their views of public questions and become sufficiently enlightened and self-respecting to regret the part they now take as the as.
