Partyism and Meritism.

It is an interesting commentary on the exigencies of party politics to find the St. John Globe and Telegraph endeavoring to whitewash ex-mercier of Quebec, while they are outspoken in condemnation of several prominent conservatives who were implicated in the Tarte-McGreedy charges of the last parliamentary session, but exonerated by the investigating committee.

Honest liberals are much encouraged by the course of such men as P. B. Casgrain, member of the Canadian parliament for L'Islet from 1872 until 1891, an occupant of one of the front rows seats on the opposition side in the House of Commons, and who shows an example which his leader, Hon. Mr. Laurier, would do well to follow.

"I squarely repudiate Mercier, because no honest man can defend his actions as now exposed, and as they will continue to be exposed, I have resolved to fight him and his gang with the object of bringing about a radical change of regime and putting a stop to a system made up of crookedness, pillage and robbery. I have had, before now, the occasion of forming and denouncing face to face with Count Mercier, and prejudicially to my own interests, the persons forming his gang, and I predicted to him what would happen. He can now recall my words. They will all be recalled. It is too late for Mercier to pretend that he will not keep the same one, for this is scarcely to be believed, seeing that he is now trying to have them re-elected. His late friends have showed themselves up as accomplices and some of them have even gone so far as to perform on him. Such is the result of a political policy when one attempts to render it paying."

Mr. Casgrain defends Governor Angers on the constitutional ground, by showing that Mercier's guilt and that of his accomplices has been clearly proven, and that he has not attempted to repudiate any of them. Mr. Casgrain indignantly commences: "It seems to me that Mr. Mercier rose too quickly and too high; arrived at the top, he lost himself in the clouds of praise and over much honor. His head got turned and he falls and rolls to the bottom without anyone knowing of it or being able to stop his fall, and I say it with respect as a French Canadian, he has left us a dishonored and stained national honor, a province humiliated and despised by others; the unnumbered probations and unjust contempt of other creeds towards the morality of our religion. The marks of distinction and the honorable titles he received from the court of Rome ought to have induced him to remain always worthy of wearing them with a noble pride and unstained honor."

A Montreal despatch says: "Provincial Treasurer Hall's statement to the electors shows that starting in 1887-8 with a surplus of ordinary revenue over ordinary expenditure of $373,196, due to a combination of ordinary circumstances, the Mercier ministry succeeded in converting a balance into a deficit of $688,376 on 30th June last, and $711,000 prospectively for the current year. Every large surplus was paid out of capital for special purposes. These special expenditures have been on a colossal scale. What between deficits and capital expenditures the debt has been piling up at the ruinous rate of two to three millions annually, with income practically at a standstill. It can be enlarged only by means of fresh taxation. In 1886 the ordinary revenue reached $3,000,000, and five years later, in spite of the imposition of a tax on commercial corporations, increase in grant-in-aid from the Dominion Government, etc., the revenue only reached $3,457,000; but the ordinary expenditure jumped up from $3,022,000 to $4,005,000. The Mercier government collected $460,000 more revenue by means of taxation, and spent a million more in administration of the ordinary services. When the Mercierites secured power the liabilities of the province were $22,143,447, against $13,841,000 and assets of $9,000,000, making a net debt of $8,302,447. Five years later, that is on Dec. 17th, the liabilities had increased to no less than $35,984,875, or by $33,843,000 more revenue, and the net debt $11,361,191 only, making a net debt of $24,623,684, or more than double the amount which it stood in 1887. The thought will occur to almost any reasonable citizen that there can be no defence for Mr. Mercier and his associates, either on his personal record or the merits of his administration. What confidence then, can be placed in papers which undertake the task? When partyism stops so low, it is time for self-respecting men to have nothing to do with it. The little organs are endeavoring to have their squeak of delight in chorus with the big ones over the fact that Judge Jette of the Bay de Chaleur railway commission of enquiry has reported that he believes Mr. Mercier's declarations of innocence rather than the strong chain of circumstances and documentary proof showing his guilt. The Moncton Transcript jubilates as follows: "The value of the exoneration is accentuated by the circumstance that Judge Jette is a Conservative and was appointed a commissioner by the De Boucherville government." As the Mercier government was in office when Judge Jette was appointed, and as that government was dismissed in consequence of the majority report of the commission of which Judge Jette was a member, and as the De Boucherville government was not called into existence until after such dismissal, it will not be difficult to estimate the value of the Transcript's "accusation of the circumstance." It is to be presumed that the Transcript makes such wild statements in the hope that some of its readers are sufficiently ignorant to believe them.
