Sir John, however, proved more yielding than Mr. Mocraft expected. As Charlie had promised reformation, he wished to give him a fair chance. He was willing to pay Morcashi all the money he had advanced to the young man, with 5 per cent. interest. If Morcashi did not choose to accept those terms he could take what steps he chose. Morcashi was furious. He raged prospect of losing £2,000 more was and threatened, but it was all no use. Sir John Trumper and his solicitor treated his raving with contempt. They knew he must accept the offer. If he refused it and made Charlie a bankrupt, he world only lose his money, and expose himself. And accept he did. But great as Sir John is now,' he said, as he pocketed the cheque, "I'll make him repent this dirty trick."

"Mr. Morcashi," replied the solicitor, quietly, "Sir John directed me to warn you that, on no account whatever, will he again repay you a shilling lent to his son."

"Oh, I thought his son had reformed?" answered Mr. Morcashi, with a sneer. "Sir John can't have much faith in his reformation when he thinks it necessary to send such cautions as that."

Perhaps the money lender was not so far wrong. Within three months after this interview who should come into Mr. Morcashi's office but Charlie Trumper. "What back again?" cried the money lender. "Yes, answered the lad, a bit shame-faced, "I want some money."

"How much?" "Ten thousand pounds." The money lender gasped.

"Ten thousand pounds!" he you think I'm such a blamed fool as to lend it to you after the way I was chiselled last time?" "I must have the money at once,"

was all Charlie Trumper replied. "Oh, you're in a hole, are you? Well look 'ere. I wouldn't lend you a sixpence on your note of and; not a sixpence." The money lender paused for a moment. Then he continued, speaking very de-liberately and watching the youth's face keenly. "But if you get somebody to back it, of course that would be different.' Charlie started slightly and reflected for a moment. "I must have the money," he

"Well, get somebody to back your bill.' "I'll try" answered Charlie, as Charlie Trumper arrived at Morcashi's offices. It was for £12,000 payable at three months. It purported to be backed by Sir John Trumper. Without a moment's hesitation, Morcashi drew a cheque for £10,000 and handed it to and left the office.

"Look here, Mr. Morcashi, let us understand one another. You took this note believing my endorsement to be a forgery; you took it after I had expressly told you I should pay no more of his debts. Under those circumstances I feel no obligation to meet the note nor pity for you, if you lose your money. You can do as you like.

"Good heavens! sir, surely you'll pay something to save your eldest son from a conviction for forgery?" cried Morcashi in agonized tones The prospect of having to compensate himself for the loss of £10,000 by prosecuting his debtor for forgery was the reverse of attractive. The solicitor-general reflected for

"Well," he then said, "perhaps I would, though I can't feel bound to do so. He promised me never to gamble or get into debt again; and so if he has broken his pledge he has no right to complain if I refuse to help him. Still, it would be disagreeable to see him in the dock. Let me see, now. "Well, I'll give you £2,000 for the note.

"Two thousand!" exclaimed Morcashi. "Only £2,000 for a note] advanced £10,000 upon!"

"Yes; it's not good business, I admit." said Sir John, quietly, "but it's better than nothing at all." "I won't take it!" cried Mor-cashi. "Oh, very well. But, perhaps The shop in Water Street, lately occupied you had better consider it. You'll as tinsmith shop, adjoining the Trading Co.'s people, and the fact that it cures to stay excuse me now-I'm very busy. Building, is to let. Apply to Good-morning - that's the way!

And this was his revenge. How Morcashi gnashed his teeth and swore vengeance against all the Trumpers, past, present and to come! What a miserable two days those were! Over and over again and prosecute, and over and over again he reconsidered his resolution. Prosecution would be so sweet: but was it worth £2,000 He had lost £8,000 already; the more than he could bear. On the second day after his interview with Sir John he again sought the solicitor-general's chambers. Ah, what a change had come over him since then! Then he was confident and elated at the prospect of wringing money from his adversary. Now he had come to capitulate and ask easier terms.

"Well?" demanded Sir John, "Will you accept my offer?" "Couldn't you say £4,000, Sir

John?" asked Morcashi, in humble "Not a shilling more will I give. Now, what's your answer? I have no time to lose.' "Well, I suppose I must accept it, but it's a gross fraud." "Don't talk to me of fraud, you blood sucker," replied Sir John contemptuously, as he took out his cheque book and drew a cheque for A minute later the note was handed to Sir John, who gave Morcashi the cheque. Morcashi then "By the way, Morcashi," said

"Ay, isn't it funny?" the solicitortor-general went on. "I told you at the time that I,d be even with you. And so I am. I haven't lost in the end over that transaction."

"What do you mean?" I don't understand you?" cried Morcashi understand you?" cried Morcashi, excitedly, He felt he had been tricked in some way or other.

"Oh merely this-that my son borrowed the £10,000 for me!" "Do you mean to say that your endorsement was not forged ? screamed the money lender.

"Most certainly not," replied the solicitor-general. Your enquiries must have misled you.

WONDER IN WELLAND! A Representative Farmer

MR. C. C. HAUN. The following remarkable facts are fully certified to as being undeniably correct in every particular. Mr. Haun is well known in the vicinity, having resided here over fifty years, and is highly respected as a man of the strictest honor, whose word is as good as his bond. As will be seen from his letter, four physicians had attended him, and it was only after he had given up hope of cure that he decided to try Burdock Blood Bitters on the recommendation of a neighbor who had been cured of a similar disease by its use. Mr. Haun writes as follows: DEAR SIRS,-I think I have been one of the worst sufferers you have yet heard of, having been six years in the hands of four of our best doctors without obtaining permanent relief, but continually growing worse, until almost beyond hope of re-covery, I tried your Bitters and got relief in a few days. Every organ of my body was deranged, the liver enlarged, hardened and torpid, the heart and digestive organs seriously deranged, a large abscess in my back, followed by paralysis of the right leg, in fact the lower half of my body was entirely useless. After using Burdock Blood Bitters for a few days the abscess burst, discharging fully five quarts of pus in two hours. I felt as if I had received a shock from shock from a powerful battery. My recovery after this was steady and the cure permanent, seeing that for the four years since I have had as good health as ever I had. I still take an occasional bottle, not that I need it but because I wish to keep my system in perfect working order. I for two reasons. The first is because many patrons who have been given credit, have abused the privilege to such an extent as to make the business of publishing the paper a non-paying one, and it is necessary, in my own interest and that of those who do pay, that I should no longer continue to furnish the AD JANCE to those non-paying subscribers. The second reason is, that I wish to meet the competition of the city weeklies, which are made up from the type of the dailies and, therefore, cost little for production in comparison with a local paper like the ADVANCE, the type of which must be set up especially for it.

Having published the ADVANCE for sixteen years, and endeavored to make it a creditable representative of Miramichi and North Shore enterprise-a paper which may be taken into any household without fear that it has catered to sensationalism at the sacrifice of that cleanliness of matter, which is too often neglected by the press of the day-I have reason to hope the foregoing announcement will meet with general approval and be the means of largely increasing the circulation and influence of the paper.
