from his box, and an extempore court was soon formed. On a vacant lot stood an empty wagon, and this was at once appropriated to be the judge's bench. A few kegs of nails were quickly placed in two rows, facing each other, at right angles to the wagon; and rough boards laid upon them formed two rude but substantial seats. This made three sides of a quadrangle, some eight feet by twelve. The fourth side was left open, and a single nail keg was set in the middle, intended for the prisoner. Captain Sollas ere long had selected his jury, and took his seat upon the wagon as his bench, while man after man came forward and was sworn in on a Bible or Testament, produced from somewhere, and took his seat, afterwards, on one or other of the impromptu benches,

I have made the foregoing changes in the business of the ADVANCE for two reasons. The first is because many patrons who have been given credit, have abused the privilege to such an extent as to make the business of publishing the paper a non-paying one, and it is necessary, in my own interest and that of those who do pay, that I should no longer continue to furnish the AD JANCE to those non-paying subscribers. The second reason is, that I wish to meet the competition of the city weeklies, which are made up from the type of the dailies and, therefore, cost little for production in comparison with a local paper like the ADVANCE, the type of which must be set up especially Having now published the ADVANCE for nearly 19 years, and endeavored
