IN TICE'S OFFICE.

The purlieus of Squire Tice's little office harbored many quaint characters, who found the shade of the big mulberries before the door a pleasant lounging place in summer and the warmth from the smoky little ramshackle stove very grateful in the cooler weather, when the keen, frost-laden air drove them from the boxes and kegs that served as seats, to the shelter of the dingy little office.

A strange and motley crowd they looked on one rainy evening after a long day of idleness. Near the glazed door, where the light was strongest, sat the old squire himself, intent on the contents of the evening paper. Near the stove the head bailiff, long and lank, out at elbow and down at heel, sat busily masticating tobacco and squirting the juice at a jagged knothole in the old floor and watching a figure near by which was partly hidden in the murky surroundings by the denser gloom of the huge desk.

They were not picking on him to-night. They were listening with listless attention to an oft repeated story of one of the hardened veterans of the gutter, whose would be thrilling denouement was answered by a quiet observation in a squeaky, quavering voice:

One morning a batch of prisoners were brought in, consigned to their cells, and their crimes docketed, and before the name of a particular man the charge of "violating the revenue law" was written.

Time had changed both men much, but the prisoner recognized immediately the justice who had tied his nuptial knot many years ago. He was many days a prisoner before his pathetic story was unfolded to the sympathetic ears of the old jailer.

who have not brought its merits and value to the knowledge of the general public. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia, and diseases of the general nervous system. It is also of the greatest value in the cure of all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the great nervine tonic qualities which it possesses, and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body, and as a great renewer of a broken-down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the lungs than any consumption remedy ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic, almost constantly, for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow, and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied; and a thousand weaknesses and ailments. disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This South American Nervine has been found by analysis to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its universal adaptability to the cure of all forms of nervous de-CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.
