HIS TYPEWRITER.

Burt Cline Halsted, broker, turned over a new leaf on a New Year. "I am going to settle down," he said, in a calm business-like manner.
Everything that Cline did was done in a business-like way, whether it was purchasing bouquets to send to a favorite address or having his bald head shampooed.
One day Cline, as I said, turned a new leaf. He did it methodically, calculatingly and firmly. He was polishing his dome before the glass, and as he laid the brush down he said, "I must get married."
Very punctilious and discreet was Cline. He proposed to get married just as he proposed to buy Brighton "A." It was a good investment.
Then he set about in the most extraordinary manner. "I don't want," said he, "any giddy beauties. I want a mature, sensible, sober, economical, level-headed, modest, healthy, good tempered, prudent, affectionate, sagacious, lovable, motherly, genteel, sterling woman. Girls make me weary, and I'm going to organize the business of getting what I want. I can give an hour a day for the next year to the finding of what I want, and I'm too old a business hand to have what I don't want."
When you get one of these financial intellects regularly to business, he knows what he is about, and he doesn't make any mistake.
So Cline at 44 organized himself. He set up a matrimonial bureau in that private office with cathedral windows, put his No. 11 boots on sentiment, threw the forgetmenots of his soul and came down to hard facts.
He would advertise. Yes, he would. No nonsensical rot about cultured lady, but straight business proposition. It would involve immense clerical system. Very well, would get typewriter. Dictate answers for an hour every morning.
"First thing to do, get typewriter. Must be business girl. Girl's bad, but have to put up with it. No women typewriters in the market; all girls. Beastly shame!"
One morning there came to Cline's general office in Broad street a girl with a baby waist, a pearl grey pelisse over her shoulders and a corneal ring on her finger. One of Cline's young men noticed her first standing by the door. He went round and said: "What can we do for you, madam?"
"I am a typewriter," said sailor hat very meekly. "I came to answer an advertisement."
Then they directed her into the little office with the cathedral windows, using a sign language of their own and telegraphing to each other by winks. Then they saw the sailor hat go through the fatal glass door, on the other side of which Cline kept his grim official severity.
He was signing checks. It was one of the most serious moments of his life. He looked up and saw the sailor hat on the brown hair. It aggravated him just a little, as if a very proper person should see a ballet girl in his country church, and she should bow to him sweetly.
He leaned back in his chair, stuck his legs out straight and fastened his commercial eye on his checkbook.
"Well, young woman, I want a discreet, confidential secretary to answer correspondents. She's got to be here at 10 o'clock every morning, attend to business strictly, and she can get away at 2 or 3. The salary is $8 a week. Do you think you can sit down to that kind of drudgery for that pittance and keep the business to yourself?"
All that Cline heard was a demure little "Yes sir," that had the same suggestion of tremolo in it one gets from a fine raspberry jelly.
Cline's private office had a new feature. There was an instrument under the window with a black tin roof over it, and a little sailor hat, with a blue ribbon on it, hung on the bronze peg opposite the door.
"Now, then," said Cline, putting on a most forbidding air of strict business. "You understand that the matter for which I have engaged you is entirely aside from the regular business of this office. By the way, what shall I call you? Miss what? Chalicey? Well, never mind the Nelly. I'll call you Miss Chalicey; it's more business-like, and I don't want you to talk outside of this room any of the business you have to transact here. Do you understand? If you get that into your head to begin with there'll be no trouble."
Then she turned her demure face toward him and said, "Yes, sir," so meekly and patiently and profoundly that he noticed her eyes.
They were agates—moss agates too. Funny little spots in them that swam and danced round and melted into each other in the most abstrusely molten way, as if there might be little caldrons under them where the light was boiled and softened down into some ridiculous girl nonsense.
The worst of it was the way they always seemed to be just on the point of boiling over, as if light, like music, had some kind of insubstantial pathos in it.
So they got along very nicely without any nonsense. Cline would come in about half past 10 or 11, look to see if the sailor hat was hanging on the peg; grunt out

General News and Notes.

Honduras is recruiting soldiers for service against Nicaragua. Salvador has asked Honduras to suspend hostilities until a conference can be held.
RHEUMATISM CURED IN A DAY.—South American Cure for Rheumatism and Neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 75 cents. Warranted by J. Fallon & Son.
A New York paper states that the Brazilian fleet to be bought in the United States by agents of President Peixoto will include at least 30 vessels.
Persons engaged at the Governor General's establishment in Ottawa have formed a branch of what is known in the old country as the "Haddo House Club."
A Wonderful Fish Preserver.—This is the little given to Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil by many thousands who have taken it. It not only gives flesh and strength by virtue of its nutritious properties, but creates an appetite for food. Use it and try your weight. Scott's Emulsion is perfectly palatable. Sold by all Druggists, at 50c. and $1.00.
The Prince Edward Island provincial elections, it is announced, will take place on Dec. 14. A prohibition plebiscite will be taken in the Province the same day.

Hotel Normandie
BROADWAY AND THIRTY-EIGHTH STREET, NEW YORK.
Have strictly first-class in all appointments, and in a most central and delightful location, easy of access to places of amusement and business, and one block from the Metropolitan Opera House, the Casino, the new Broadway Theatre and the new Empire Theatre.
The main feature of the Hotel is that it is absolutely fire-proof. The floor and roof beams are all of iron, and the fluting between the beams and several floors, and at the roof is of fire-proof brick arched work laid in concrete.
The sanitary arrangements have been made a special feature by competent sanitary engineers.
The Hotel is fitted with the most complete system of electric appliances ever devised to insure the safety of guests in any similar establishment. Every room is connected by direct speaking tubes with the office, and guests will be able to summon their waiters, or give orders to the office, ascertain their charge department, or call on the manager, without having to call on bell-boy, or when a guest desires to leave his room, by notifying the office, the room can be connected with a system of air-circulation, so that no one can enter it by the door, the window or doorway, without the fact being announced in the office; also, fire alarm signal to every room and to the Metropolitan Fire Department.
The hotel contains 300 rooms, on suite and single, all heated by steam, and conducted on the European plan, with a restaurant, cafe and saloons of peculiar excellence.
Special arrangements made to families. Rooms range from $2.00 per day and upwards.
