An Interesting Study at the World's Fair.

HUMAN NATURE.

REPRESENTATIVES OF ALL RACES.

The Human Interrogation Point To Be Observed All Over the Grounds and Buildings-Do Not Be Backward About Asking Questions When Your Curiosity Is Aroused. World's Fair, May 18. - [Special.] -

No part of the big show is more interesting than the crowds which visit it. When you read in the papers that there were thirty, forty or fifty thousand paid admissions to the fair on a given day you must not imagine that these figures convey an idea of the size of the multitude to be seen wandering about the grounds and buildings. In addition to the paid admissicas there are all the time fifty to seventy-five thousand persons within the gates who did not pay. They are the exhibitors and their assistants, watchmen, workmen, newspaper representatives, the guards, firemen, guides and rolling-chair men; also, commissioners, directors, both domestic and foreign, and their families. Even on the dullest days we have as a rule upwards of 100,000 human beings within the enclosure. But there is no crowding. The great exposition and its mammoth buildings swallow them up as a field of corn takes in the butterflies which are attracted by its green and glis- There is a complete fire department, just Treat and cure Skin Diseases, tening fragrance. It is curious to watch these crowds as they go on their sight-seeing rounds. If you want to study human nature this is a pretty place in which to do it. You behold here not only representatives of all races and countries, but about as great a variety of human animals as it is possible to get together in any one spot on the earth's surface. The throng presents one characteristic which stands out strongly above all others. It is such a conspicuous thing that after a day passed on the grounds one goes away with a vivid recollection of having seen a large section of humanity in a certain posture. The pos-

Specimen of the race to which we all be buildings or without, it is the same. A specimen of the race to which we all be buildings or without, it is the same. A specimen of the race to which we all be long leaning forward, a look of expectancy upon his face, the word of inquiry trembling upon his lips. This is a world in which it seems one-half is put here for the purpose of asking questions and the other half for answering them. Later in the summer, when the crowds get bigger, the proportions will change. When the daily fumber of visitors rises to three or four hundred thousand, as it is expected to rise in September and October, we shall see each exhibitor, guard or other permanent resident of the White City surrounded by seven or eight strangers within the gates, while streams of inquiries and answers are sent running to and fro.

This is as it should be. This vast exposition is placed here for the education of the people. They are invited to come that they may see and learn. It is the right of In addition to all this there is a city council, composed of the board of directors council, composed of the board of directors of the exposition company and the national commission, and they make the laws and the ordinances. If there is any official corresponding to the mayor of the city he is Director General Davis. This quickly created city has its music hall, its restaurants, its telegraph lines, its railway stations, its streets and alleys, its palaces and its shops, like any other city. But it is a its shops, like any other city. But it is a city in which people do not sleep, excepting the guardians of peace and property. It is a city in which there are no hovels and no display of poverty, no public exhibition of vice. It is a city in which the weakness and the wantenness of many are weakness and the wantonness of man are weakness and the wantenness of man are excluded, where he has gathered to show all the good and great and beautiful things of which he is capable. Therefore it is an ideal sort of city. As a social study it is altogether as interesting as from any industrial or artistic point of view. You and I will live a long time if we survive to behold another like it.

losed. But you will learn three times as much and remember what you do learn ten times as long if you ask questions of people who may be able to give you intelligent explanations.

As a rule Americans are not backward about asking questions. At least, western Americans are not. The visitors who come from eastern cities are not so free with their inquiries. They have a sort of reservation of manner, as a rule. They are interested, and would not attempt to deny that this is a wonderful school, but they assume that they will be able to get all the information they want out of it by simply looking. Notso with the westerner, the genuine, common, everyday American. He is from a farm out in Iowa or a mining town in Colorado. He stands, for instance before the marvelous machines echibited by a New England watch-making company. He has never seen a watch made. All the ideas which he has ever had about it are that most of the work must be done by men who sit all day long at a bench with a magnifying glass screwed over their best eye, just as he has screwed over their best eye, just as he has seen the watch-repairer sit in his home jewelry shop. But the complicated nature, the perfection of finish and the rhythm of the motion of these machines fascinates him. He must know all about it. If he asks one question he asks fifty, and as soon as the attendant has explained to him that the machines need nothing but feeding in order to enable them to turn out all the parts of a watch, he wants to know all the particulars and details. This is the true method. Permit me to advise all my readers to come to the fair in this spirit of inquiry and seeking after knowledge. It is the way to get your money's worth, and that is what we all want. There is no difficulty about getting it, either. For it does not matter what a man may be interested in he will find it course he doesn't care anything about them. It is not his line. But if he hap-pens to be the publisher of a newspaper, and a practical printer, and a man who loves his profession and his trade alike (as every good newspaper publisher, in my opinion, does) wait till he comes to that

All the right, title, and interest of Francis Cassidy in and to all that certain piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the town and parish of Chatham, in the County of Northumberland and Province of New Brunswick, being part of the Peter Brown lot, which piece is bounded as follows, to wit: Commencing at the north side of the Queen's highway or Water street at a distance of nine feet westerly from the southwest corner of the Dunn house so called, owned by Daniel Elkin; thence westerly along the north side of the said highway fifty feet; thence northerly on a line parallel with the Dunn or Elkin house aforesaid thirty feet, thence to run easterly on a direct line to the outer corner of the block at the north west corner of the Dunn line fifty feet north from the north side of the said highway, thence southerly along the west thousand years ago, which must make him marvel at the art of his ancient forerunners in the business. For the physician there are all the medicines and tools of his trade, not only those made in his own country but those used by his brothers in all the lands of the world. For the minister there are no end of pulpits ancient and modern, rich and rare, too, the beloved Bible in all the languages of the earth-all the curious editions of Bibles, the Bibles of the ancients and the moderns, even the
