CHATHAM, N. B., JUNE 22, 1893. A CITY OF MODELS.

Buildings, Farms and Towns Reproduced in Miniature. A DELIGHT TO FAIR VISITORS.

Graphic Representation of Farming in the Great West shown in the Washington State Building—Models of the City of San Francisco and St. Gothard Railway and Tunnel.

WORLD'S FAIR, June 6.—[Special.]—This has been called the Model City, and such, indeed, it is. It is also a city of models. To your mind there is nothing in the fair more interesting than the models of great buildings, of famous engineering works, of farms and cities which are displayed in various parts of the grounds.

Model Farm in Washington Building. Also seen for a quarter, but a tower is a model and yet a model too. It is a beautiful model of one of the handsomest structures in America, the state capitol at Des Moines. It is a model, very appropriately, for as it was the harvest from the soil which produced the wealth to build the capitol, with so it fittingly to the golden corn and the white wheat, saffron small grains to fashion the model.

Of course the farm house, the barn and the outbuildings are there, too. They are like life. The dog in the doorway is wagging his bushy tail and snuffing with his nose the noses of the visitors to the World's Fair. The milk cow stands in the shade of a blooming peach tree chewing her cud.

Water runs from the spigot of the pump and in a creek flows into a stream. The stream that is fed by the springs and runs through the barnyard is a stream of real water. The water which brings the visitors out of the visions of the old farm on which their youthful days were passed—visions of toil and happiness, of communion with nature and lessons of industry, economy and honor-wellness.

It is a miniature world, seeing, for it not only presents the eye and informs the mind, but stirs the imagination everywhere in this world I take off my hat to the farmer. To the genius who designed and constructed this most perfect of models I offer my congratulations.

There are so many interesting models in this exposition I cannot stop to mention them all, but two in the California state building are especially worthy of mention. One represents the city of San Francisco. It is a splendid work, and must have cost no small amount of labor. In an amphitheater much smaller than that in which a railway car is operated the visitor beholds a miniature of the whole city of San Francisco, excepting the suburbs. There are the waters of the bay, the wharves, the principal thoroughfares, all the great public and private buildings, the Chinese quarter, Nob Hill, the steamship wharves and cable line. It is not often one has the opportunity to study a city—street for street and building for building—without moving a foot. The other is a model of Alameda county, showing the city of Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, the suburbs, the farms, hills, valleys, country seats, school houses, churches, vineyards and little electric railways penetrating every part of the beautiful region.

Almost every building in the exposition has its models, and of course the transportation department is no exception to the rule. Railway tracks, locomotives and cars are, of course, best shown by means of the things themselves. But even the genius of Chicago could not devise a method by which the steamships of the world could be brought here in bulk, and hence there was nothing to do but to show them in miniature. In a former letter I spoke of the variety and beauty of these models, some of which are worth thousands of dollars to build. There is a model here of the St. Gothard railway and tunnel, with a panorama of the Alps for a background.

There is also a model of the Niagara canal—the canal that is to be if American energy and manifest destiny could get anything in the realm of prophecy—and it is always surrounded by large throngs of visitors. It is built of paper mache, and is itself a work of art. On the one side the Atlantic, on the other the Pacific, between them the canal, in the center the waters of Lake Nicaragua. A blood red streak shows where the canal is to enter the lake on its way from ocean to sea.

For the most part it follows the bed of some river, but here and there great cuttings must be made through the rocks, and in ten minutes the model gives every observer a better idea of the magnitude of the work than he could obtain by a day's study of printed maps and descriptions. The Nicaragua Canal company keeps a model in its office in the city of New York, and it is a model in which the model and the engineering difficulties that are to be surmounted, as well as to enlarge upon the advantages to this country which construction of the canal would bring.

A model which attracts much attention is that of the town of Pullman, twelve miles south of Chicago. Every factory, residence and other building in this model industrial city—which was created much as the World's fair was, on a comprehensive plan in an incredibly short space of time—is faithfully shown. Near by is a full-sized model of a mammoth steam hammer used in a Pennsylvania forge. Like a colossus it bestrides the water, and rises so far above the floor that at first one wonders whether it is an arch or a tower. If made of metal, which it is not, one would marvel how it was ever brought together. It is a wooden monster, but it serves just as well as the original could do to illustrate how man in carrying on his mighty operations employs forces which would be too great even for the power of Jove in his thunderbolt factory.

A model in which all farmers and stock-raisers will take much interest is to be found in the Agricultural building. It shows the famous Brookfield horse farm in England, owned by E. Burdett-Coutts, member of parliament, and known as "the pioneer stud of the new era in horse breeding." The buildings occupied by employees, the stables, the exercise rings, riding school, granaries, horse hospitals and all the paraphernalia of the famous farm are accurately represented. The attendant in charge explains all features of the farm and from him one learns the enterprise was started partly through philanthropic motives. When Mr. Ashmead Bartlett married the elderly Burdett-Coutts he not only became a very rich man but gained the means of carrying out certain ideas which he had long dreamed of. Believing the backbone and cart carriage horses of England had been so long neglected and left to degenerate, he determined to found a breeding farm for the purpose of elevating the stock. There is no doubt about his success.

We have here, as you may have heard, not only models of pretty much everything upon the earth, but some things within the earth, but a miniature of earth itself. It is in the Government building, and of course is a center of interest. This little world is 20 feet in diameter, which gives it a circumference of 63 feet and a scale on which the distance of 60 geograph miles or 99 statute miles is shown in an inch. It is one of the largest globes ever made.

In Midway pleasure the visitor who cares to pay 25 cents for the privilege may see a complete model of St. Peter's at Rome. If one have the time and money to spare the miniature is worth seeing. A model of the Eiffel tower at Paris may be seen at the same place.

The Canadian Lumber Company at Miramichi, N. Y., has passed into the hands of a receiver. Their liabilities are placed at about $150,000, with nominal assets of $250,000.

A Canadian Favorite. The season of green fruits and summer drinks is the time when the worst forms of cholera morbus, diarrhoea and bowel complaints prevail. As a safeguard Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry should be kept in the house. For 35 years it has been the most reliable remedy.

Bad Blood cured. GENTLEMEN—I have used your Burdock Blood Bitters for bad blood and find it, without exception, the best purifying tonic in use. A short time ago two very large and painful boils came on the back of my neck, but B. B. completely drove them away.
