GUATEMALA MUSIC

Played by Full-Blooded Indians at the Fair.

DELIGHTFUL TIME IN THE "PATIO."

Newspaper Men Given a Reception by the Guatemala Commissioners to the World's Columbian Exposition—Canada's Display of Fish in the Fisheries Building—Other Exhibits Made by the Dominion.

WORLD'S FAIR, Aug. 26.—[Special.]—Guatemala was so much pleased with her general experience at the fair that she arranged a little festival for her particular friends, including all the newspaper men who have dropped in from time to time to rest in her pleasant "patio" and take coffee with her polite officials. With some 200 others I received an elegant card, the plain English of which ran thus:

"The Guatemala commission of the World's Columbian Exposition has the honor to invite you to listen to the Marimba and partake of the native coffee Thursday at 4 p. m."

The building is in the general style of a well-to-do Guatemala gentleman's residence—that is, large and airy rooms are arranged around a court which is open to the sky, and on the four sides of that are broad, interior porches. In Mexico I heard this interior called the plazito or little plaza, but this the Guatemalans call the patio. All the ground of this central square is beautifully set in native plants and flowers, and in the center is a natural looking rockery and on its summit a spring where the crystal waters gush from the rock and thence it pours down over the miniature precipices in truly happy imitation of a mountain stream. Above red and green parrots swing on little twigs as natural as life, and below the water drips upon and rustles among long and trailing vines and plants which the ladies called maidenhair ferns—the combination making a scene which these dark children of the tropics call homelike and we northerners find delightfully cooling and restful.

Around the walls were curious reminders of the forests and mountains of the republic. Among them were immense plaster slabs with reproductions of the ancient carving and lettering in the ruins of Sastanquiqui, department of Peten. There were also interesting maps, masses of orchids and assortments of minerals—in short, it was a section of Guatemala. The building being closed to the general public, the tables were arranged around the inner porch and then followed orange sherbet, Guatemala wine, cake of many kinds, ice cream and so on to coffee, with music, laughter and animated conversation in three languages. The Marimba seems to be a sort of combination of piano and xylophone, and the notes are struck with hardwood knobs on elastic stems, as a dulcimer is played.

But the musicians were most interesting. They were four full blooded Indians of the most ancient race in Guatemala. All played at once and the music was indeed delightful. In addition to their native melodies they played the leading airs of the nations represented by the guests, and our own patriotic tunes were given with a soft and delicate sweetness which showed me I had hitherto failed to realize their complete charm. The names of the musicians are Antonio Chavez, Pedro Chavez, Samuel Chavez and Lucio Castellanos and they are the star Indian quartette of Guatemala. The Indians there are said to show special aptitude for music, especially of the soft and plaintive sort, most of their airs being in the minor key.

* * *

Having decided to give two days exclusively to our neighbors on the north I went to the official headquarters of the Dominion of Canada for a start and was surprised to find that almost every province is well represented by resident commissioners, besides a goodly array for the Dominion at large, these making quite an exhibit in themselves as they seem to have been selected as representatives of the ruddy and sturdy men of the north. Among Canada's men here are Hon. George R. Cockburn, Senator Joseph Tasse of Montreal, Executive Commissioner John S. Larke, Nicholas Aury, for Ontario; Hon. John H. McIntosh, for Quebec; Senator Perley, for the northwest territories; W. D. Dimmock, secretary of the commission, and many others, "all proper, personable and horse-riding men," as Ezekiel said of the Chaldeans. Among them is one Polander, Sir Casimer Gzowski, who is aide-de-camp to Her Majesty in Canada.

Dominion day was July 1, anniversary of the confederation of the provinces in 1867, and the orator of the occasion was Hon. George A. Kirkpatrick, lieutenant governor of Ontario.

Lieutenant governor in Canada, you know, means governor, as in contemplation of law he is held to be merely the lieutenant of the governor general, Canada having adopted substantially that framework of government proposed for us by Alexander Hamilton. There is, therefore, a disarrangement of titles in crossing the border which makes the American reporter wary (or should), as instance the case of Mr. McIntosh, who is a cabinet minister without a portfolio—in Canada slang a "ticket-of-leave minister." Charles F. Laws is here for British Columbia and R. B. Voak for Nova Scotia, but Hon. James Smart, commissioner for Manitoba, has got the grand bounce, though no one can tell me why. New Brunswick and Prince Edward's island have no commissioners, though their exhibits are immense, especially in the Fisheries building.

There I was cordially received by Mr. Philip Veale, superintendent for the Dominion, and for hours we walked among Canada fish of every kind known to science and commerce, and birds of all the kinds which prey on fish. A curious complication has risen here. All the other exhibitors have given only plaster casts of their chief fish, but Canada has the real fish's skin stuffed and mounted to make it look exactly as in life. So it is a question if she is to take a medal for the best exhibit as there is none other of the kind. Many of these stuffed skins have been across the ocean four times and have been exhibited at the Paris and other foreign expositions, but the system employed is so admirable that the fish look as if just out of the water. Canada maintains a permanent fish exhibit at Ottawa, of which Mr. Veale has charge, and selections from it are taken to the various expositions in Europe and America. To gaze on these monster sturgeon and red-meated salmon, to note the varieties of beautiful trout and that constant favorite, the whitefish, and learn that Canada's waters are still lively with them, gives assurance that fish eaters may rejoice for many years to come.

Ontario, of course, has the finest general exhibit and is well represented in every building on the ground. In the Art palace half a dozen paintings which draw and hold the crowd are by Ontario artists, the most noted being that entitled "Foreclosure of the Mortgage." In the Agricultural building her display is wonderful and in the Mines building Ontario nickel leads that exhibit. The famous Sudbury district is now partially under the control of United States capitalists, who have a contract to supply this country with an immense amount. I almost forgot to mention that in the fish line every kind of product shipped from Canada is also shown in its prepared state, the actual fish in pickle or otherwise, in cans or barrels of the same kind it is shipped in, all open to inspection, but fresh and sweet and good enough to eat. Even the cod liver oil does not look disagreeable and the great piles of dried codfish do not out "rank" the average village store of my acquaintance.

It is quite a surprise to learn that Canada has produced $100,000,000 in gold, of which Nova Scotia contributed $8,000,000, that the industry has lately revived, that Ontario's quartz mines now yield $1,000,000 a year and that sanguine projectors firmly believe the Dominion is to be the great source of the world's future supply. But some of the world's leading experts in that line have declared that, according to the principles demonstrated by past experience, practically inexhaustible quartz veins may be looked for in the as yet unprospected sections of British Columbia. Manitoba got here late and so her building is located outside of the grounds and comparatively few visit it—a great pity for the exhibit is fine. As yet, however, I have inspected only the Canadian display in the fisheries and but glanced at her minerals and grains, and must give her another day.

* * *

There is one room in the Government building where one may always find many old soldiers and often hear odd reminiscences and secure some quiet amusement. A squad of bluecoats is a common sight there and the militia companies and veterans who come in squads generally go there in a body. There are old blunderbusses and Queen Anne muskets which, apparently, would jam the shoulder off a common man if fired with a full load in.

THE NEW ARMY GUN.

There are old muskets picked up on almost every battlefield of the Revolution and war of 1812, some restored and others just as the battle or lapse of time left them. There are old flint locks, some made anew just as they came from the old factory and others as they were after one or more generations of use. And there is a complete assortment of all the rifles and muskets used during the civil war, arranged in the order they were introduced, so any veteran can pick out the kind first issued to him and note the dates it came in and went out. And all these collections are arranged in historic order.

In the patent department is the new rifle proposed for the United States army and often described, I suppose, and around it there is generally a group of curious veterans. To a man who "drawed an Enfield" or "Belgian smooth bore" in 1861 or '62, and now looks on this almost ideally perfect instrument for dealing death, it looks as if ages had elapsed between the two inventions. There is really almost as much difference as between the bow and arrow of the savage and the Enfield. All around are other instruments of death and in the big gun department it looks as if an enemy could be annihilated as soon as he came within reach. Yet the peace congress has been in session here right along and General Howard used these same far-reaching death-dealers as proof that the reign of peace was at hand. They do prove, I think, that hereafter science will win and that no half civilized people will be able to withstand a civilized. And indeed the gap between the higher and lower races of mankind has been increasing for thousands of years. The best drilled and armed Roman legion could hardly contend successfully against three or four times its numbers of Gauls or Getulae, but 500 well equipped British troops can march through hundreds of thousands of southern Asiatics and without serious danger.

* * *

The great live stock show is on and booming. The Stock pavilion is the center of attraction and the attendance at the fair has materially increased in consequence. Today the Belgian horses have their innings, on Monday the Arabs, on Tuesday Cleveland bays and French carriage horses, and on Wednesday ninety-two will contend for the lead among German coach horses. So the programme will continue with a change of horses every day till Sept. 8 when the great show of Shetland ponies will come off and there will, says the exhibitor, be "fun for the little boys." The cattle show runs with similar changes: 243 Jerseys next Monday and Tuesday, 67 Holstein Frisians on Wednesday, Guernseys, Devons and Ayrshires on the next three days and so on till Sept. 7 and 8, when the grand sweepstakes will end the live animal exhibit. Of future days of importance the grandest will be Oct. 9 when, if present plans do not miscarry, Chicago will picture her desolation in 1871, and subsequent great revival in a wonderful series of floats and pageants. Among the fireworks at night will be one piece 100 feet long representing "Chicago on Fire."

J. H. BEADLE.

The Life-Saving Service.

The exhibitions of the United States life-saving service at the fair are especially interesting to inland people. Those who live on seacoasts have opportunities enough to familiarize themselves with the maneuvers, though of course there are thousands of them, too, who know nothing of the service but what they read. The exhibitions are given on the shore of the lake just off the north end of the Manufactures building and are valuable illustrations of the work and worth of the service, though they lack the impressive accompaniments of hurricane winds and mountainous waves.

LIFE A TORTURE.

Kendrick Outhouse, of Tiverton, N. S., says: For several years I suffered from severe attacks of biliousness, which came on periodically, about every ten days. I had awful headaches and the smell of anything cooking turned me sick. I became weak and nervous, and had no ambition or strength to work. I passed many sleepless nights, and for days could not retain food on my stomach. I suffered intensely with piles and hives, and my life was a constant torture to me.
