The German building is by long odds the most picturesque of the foreign structures. In it are blended, harmoniously, many types of German and Prussian architecture. Its principal suggestion is that of a splendid town hall of a hundred years ago, but it makes one think also of mediaeval castles, cottages and cathedrals.
It is gorgeously colored and decorated, and the lover of architecture and exterior ornamentation will be glad to look at it by the hour. Within is a most interesting display, consisting principally of books and educational publications and appliances and German photographs. Here are fine specimens of the handiwork of German painters, book-binders, illustrators and photographers, arts in which the Germans easily lead the Great Britain's Victoria house, which occupies a conspicuous position on the lake front near Uncie Sam's battleship, is somewhat disappointing in its exterior, but within it is rich and delightful. The aim was to show a type of the fine old English half-timber houses of the sixteenth century, of which so many good examples ere still extant. Great care has been bestowed on the interior decorations. The library is a fine specimen of work in English oak, and there all the principal English journals are kept on file for the convenience of guests. The drawing room and the grand staircase help to show visitors just what the interior of an old English house is like.

Spain is just finishing a handsome building on the lake front. It is a reproduction of the Lonja at Valencia. Opposite Victoria house is a commodious structure erected by Canada, and it was one of the first buildings in the grounds to be finished and ready for visitors. Farther along is the low but showy building of New South Wales, where the wonderful progress made by Australia is exemplified. as it is in many other features of the expo-

The foreign building which will attract most attention, probably, on account of its interesting contents, is that of France, which occupies a commanding position on the lake front. It is a reproduction of the Hall of Hercules in the Palace of Versailles, where Benjamin Franklin signed the first treaty made by the United States with another power. Many of the Lafayette relics loaned by that patriotic family are here displayed. With an Ionic pavilion the French have connected the Hercules hall with a twin structure some and fountains. The corridor running from one building to the other contains an exhibit which cannot be excelled in popular interest. It is that of the City of Paris, and consists in part of large pic-tures of all the notable buildings, plazas and boulevards in the French capital There is also a complete exposition of the methods of government employed therethe police, the fire department, the hospitals, the great sewer system, the street cleaning department, etc. Everything is worked out in that manner precise yet picturesque which is decidedly French. Probably no other municipality in the world spends so much money for the comfort and health of the citizens, and men pictures of French criminals-here a set of photographs which show the eyes, there the moses, next the ears of a great variety of exceedingly tough customers. Most graphic of all is the Bertillon method of obtaining evidence in a case of death in the street or in a field. Walking through the corridor next to Lake Michigan you come suddenly upon the figure of a man lying on the floor. Though of wax, he has the ghastliness of death upon his brow, and he startles you. Above the prostrate figure is a camera carried on a tripod, and so arranged that by pulling a string the operator may photograph the deceased just as he was found, the picture (which is shown) containing not only the features, figure and clothing of the dead man, but the exact position in which he fell, the marks of struggle if any are in the earth, and the footsteps which may be there.

Next to the French building is the beautiful pavilion of the Cingalese, which is a formidable rival to the Hooden temple erected by the Japanese on the wooded is and. The people of Ceylon are said to have in this exposition the finest and richest display, in proportion to population, to be found among the contributions of the nation. This building on the lake front is filled with carvings and gems, and is worth an hour's visit.

The South and Central American countries have done very well. Brazil has spent nearly $100,000 on her building. which presents to good advantage the genius of Brazilian architects. Costa Rica has a striking building which resembles an Aztec temple, and Guatemala shows in front of its structure, which is decorated most charmingly in pistachio green tints, a rose garden where one may sip coffee made in the Guatemala manner. Colombia has a fine building, while Venezuela shows a white marble structure surrounded by gardens containing the rarest and most beautiful of tropical plants and orchids. Nicaragua, the little nation which some people think the United States will some day annex, along with Costa Rica, on account of the interoceanic canal, has a worthy building to which all visitors are warmly welcomed.

Norway and Sweden have a large building of characteristic Scandinavian architecture, rather sombre without but light and cheerful within. A pretty and rich Turkish pavilion stands facing the lagoon, and within it the visitor will And some rare tapestries, rugs and hangings. Hayti has a commodious building of one story with a broad piazza, characteristic of the hot countries. It contains an interesting display of the products of that West In-

As might be supposed, these foreign buildings are crowded with visitors from morning till night. This is particularly true of the structures representing European nations, for the thousands of natives of those lands who have found homes in America, and their descendants, think a visit to the World's fair incomplete without a call at the headquarters of the country of their origin. The manner in which Europeans, Americans both north and south, Asiatics and Egyptians mingle here in friendly concourse is most instructive. One lesson which the observing exposition visitor may learn if he will is that all men are brothers, and that these great international expositions are not only scenes of friendly rivalry in the arts and industries, but peace congresses sure to leave their impress upon all time. ### A Westbrook Lady's Case.

WESTBROOK, ONT., June 12th. One the most popular ladies of this district and one who has been for years as strong a worker in the church as her health would allow, has recently after six years of terrible suffering from kidney troubles, been cured by Dodd's kidney pills. Her case was one of the most pathetic in our knowledge; she had tried all remedies, had interviewed many famous specialists, and had tried treatment at Kingston Hospital, only to be discharged as in-curable. She was quite hopeless, and resigned herself to a few more years of horrible suffering, when by chance, without much confidence in a cure, she tried Dodd's kidney pills. She has taken in all six boxes and is miles around of her release from a bondage of pain, and has said to your correspondent that the proprietors of the remedy do not advertise half enough. "It should be proclaimed from the housetops" she said. "I am positively convinced that it is a certain to a finish or not. The petition was turned into a special case. The trustees paid the government stumpage, the expenses of get-ting out the lumber, and also $500 to Mr. It is not necessary, we presume, to disayow any such motive, especially as our can thank its discoverer more than I."

A Very Creditable Entertainment.

A very large audience, representing a classes of our people, assembled in the new building erected for the community of the Hotel Dieu, Chatham, on Tuesday evening, to witness a muscal and dramatic entertainment by the pupils of the convent school. The building is a barn about hundred feet long and thirty-five feet wide and the entertainment took place in its upper portion. On ascending the broad and easy stairway at eight o'clock. just as the performance began, the visitor saw a very pretty scene that made him forget all about the barn. Evergreen trees abounded along the sides, and posts and girders were wreathed and festooned so artistically as to make them present many beauties of form and coloring. There was an ample stage, which was flanked by draperies forming "wings" which, we suppose, were for the accommodation of the directors and stage participants of the entertainment. Two organs and three pianos besides other accessroies were amongst the dressings of the stage, while the background, from floor to ceiling, was composed of more than a hundred girls, all in white dresses who sat on tiers of seats rising, the one above the other. The whole scene was one of fairyland-harmonious and, therefore, beautiful, in which artistic design and good taste combined to challenge the onlooker's admiration. The programme

There was no list of the names of the many performers, or of even the principal ones, but if we had the names it would take more than our limited space permits to bestow the praise due to even the latter. As fail. an amateur performance it was much more than satisfactory in its perfection, while we are sure that no dramatic or concert company that has yet visited us could so please and interest its patrons. Whether one of the young lady pupils performed on the After the ceremonies a large number were piano, or two were at each piano, and one entertained by President Connors at his at each organ performing the same comhome. The C. M. B. A. was organized at position, there was uniform correctness and precision of time and touch; in the calisthenic exercises there was similar evidence of careful instruction and its results, which admitted of no error or faux pas; the little dramas were perfectly enacted, the lines well and correctly spoken, the costumes correct and the stage business well done. What impressed the on-looker most of all, perhaps, was the remarkable manifestation of method, system and order in everything. It is evident that the young ladies and children who are so fortunate as to be pupils of these sisters are in good hands for their mental and moral development, while the important matter of physical culturewithout which the others cannot be perfected-they have evidently, the advantage of the most modern and effective system. The whole entertainment was a very pleasant as well as instructive one, and one of the most gratifying features of it was to see many representatives of the different religious elements of the town both on the stage and in the audience, showing that Catholics, Presbyterians, Methodists and others can mingle in the school—as they do

Kendrick Outhouse, of Tiverton, N.S., says: For several years I suffered from severe attacks of biliousness, which came on periodically, about every ten days. I had awful headaches and the smell of anything cooking turned me sick. I became weak and nervous, and had no ambition or strength to work. I passed many sleepless nights, and for days could not retain food on my stomach. I suffered intensely with piles and hives, and my life was a constant torture to me. I became so weak that my friends gave up all hopes of my recovery. My brother brought me a bottle of
