THE HUMMING TOP. The top it hummeth a sweet, sweet song Merrily singeth all day long,
As it spinneth and spinneth away.
And my dear little boy

When he heareth the tuneful tone Of that busy thing
That loveth to sing
The song that is all its own.

Hold fast the string and wind it tight,
That the song be loud and clear;
Now hurl the top with all your might Upon the banquette here;
And straight from the string
The joyous thing
Boundeth and spinneth along,
And it whirrs and it chires
And it birrs and it purs

Ever its pretty song. Will ever my dear little boy grow old, As some have grown before? Will ever his heart feel faint and cold, When he heareth the songs of yore?

When he heareth the songs of your Will ever this toy
Of my dear little boy,
When the years have worn away,
Sing sad and low
Of the long ago,
As it singeth to me to-day?

A REPORTORIAL

For the fourth time the city editor of the Daily Chronicle stepped into the re-porters' room and looked anxiously at the three men who sat at their desks: copy was needed, and upon this night of all others.

The sporting editor was at Jackson-ville and his "stuff" would come to the night editor. The religious editor was attending a sensational debate, given for charity, between a well-known minister and a prominent and exceedingly clever society woman. The subject matter under discussion was: "The Rights of Woman Relative to Free matter under discussion was: "The Rights of Woman Relative to Free Speech." The police reporter, upon whom the city editor usually depended for early copy, had gone out with the detectives for a raid on a gambling den in ward nine. The young gentleman who was supposed to edit a column of gossip daily hadn't come in as yet; he was probably attending some social function—a favorite pastime of his. Added to add this it was nine o'clock—not a line of local had been sent in, while the machines were devouring reprint as fast as it could be clipped—and only two of the three reporters in the room were writing. The third was leaning forward on a desk, a cigar in one hand and a pencil in the other; he one hand and a pencil in the other; he was looking straight ahead, trying to keep from thinking about something that had a great deal to do with himself. He was a young man—a space-writer on the Chronicle, and who did bits of fiction to a momentary advantage upon

To describe him aptly and in a few words, he was twenty-four years old in age, thirty-five in experience and sixtyfive in disappointment. He was good looking, bright, and had just enough of egotism flavored into his sturdy character to make him thoroughly self-confi-

He walked to a window and stood looking at the night. The arc lamps winked their white electric light out into the wet air and the vivid, pulsating rays seemed to struggle with the damp wind and the dripping rain, shaking and wav-ering like white flags. As he gazed at this without seeing. Sumner laughedlove. Never before had he wanted to smoke half so bad, and after he had fin-ished she looked half frightened and then had taken him by the hand, and said: "You're joking, surely." And then, very pale, had given her refusal— companied simultaneously by a clap of thunder without reverberation. Immecould not forget, and somehow there diately afterwards she observed a dead rested in his breast the honest conviction gull lying in a grass field in front of that she loved him after all, though he the window, which, she is convinced, could find no reason for such a thought. | was not there before. He was too worried at the time to ask her the why of her refusal, and now it was too late. Maybe it was because her father was president of the Mechanic Banking association. His thoughts took a ludicrous turn and he wondered if he could get a note discounted there.

He gave the window pane a sharp rap
as if to relieve himself of some of the bitterness he felt, threw his cigar aside,

In a handsome home sat two women -mother and daughter-the faces of both showing traces of tears. Between her sobs the mother repeated and moaned: "What shall we do? What shall we sat down and began to work furiously as the city editor looked into the room for the fifth time.

The young woman finally arose and left the room; when she returned she was dressed for going out. She went to a window and saw the rain beating down and then turned to her mother, who had not noticed her entrance. "What are you going to do?" asked the elder woman.

"The best I can," replied the daughter, and left the room the second time.
The front door opened and closed.
"Not by yourself," screamed the mother, but the young woman had disappeared into the darkness. With no protection, save the gossamer, she bent her head low and hurried forward. It was only a short walk and she had reached the centre of the city. She heard the city clock striking, but did not stop to count the time; it was eleven o'clock. At a corner she hesitated and looked up at a row of large buildings. In one the lights were burning brightly and there were signs of life and industry. All the others looked dead and

To the lighted building she went and entered and found herself in front of the elevator. She wanted to go to the reporters' rooms, she told the elevator man; and while the hydraulic vehicle was ascending to the sixth floor in its' own peculiar and tantalizing gait the woman looked at herself in the mirror. that adorned it. She laughed an almost hysterical laugh as she saw her. own countenance, pale and frightened looking, staring back at her. She stepped out of the elevator and walked, down a short passageway. She could hear the buzz and whirl and rattle and clatter of machinery, and turned into the first doorway. She was met by a stalwart young man, in considerable neglige, who was carrying proof. She started back, saying: "I only wanted to see Mr. Robert Sumner." In the meantime two other men, costumed in the same manner, had come up and were watching her. "Mr. Sumner?" repeated the young man, with a strange look on his face. "Oh, this is the way." The other men laughed. He opened the door for her. She stepped inside the front of a desk where a man was leaning over, a shade above his eyes, writing. "Is this Mr. Sumner?" she asked, not being able to make out his features. It was the city editor. He looked up at her, taking in her pale face and wet garments at a single glance. He was about to ask what her errand was, but instead pointed with his pencil towards the door of the reportorial room. He watched her as she started in and noticed an air of hesitancy about her. He first thought he would call Sumner, but as he was reaching a decision in his but as he was reaching a decision in his mind she entered.

Eleven o'clock it was when Robert Sumner finished his last piece of copy and sent it in to the city editor. Then he had put on his coat, took his umbrells and hat and was about to leave.
The rain poured down in such torrents that he decided to wait a few minutes and resumed his seat. Again he sat thinking, but this time his thoughts appeared to realize, and instead of reviewing past events he was castle building into the future. He imagined that he caught the rustle of a dress near him, and it accorded with his castles. Some one seemed to call his name, in a timid manner, and soft. He closed his eyes in a timid hope that he might hear it again. Again he did hear it, but it was so lifelike, so actual that he refused to open his eyes and destroy the train of thought that stretched in golden links into years to come. His name was repeated, not any louder, but accompanied by a touch. With a start he turned in his chair. "Mildred," he cried. "What are you doing here?" "Oh, Robert," she half sobbed, "haven't you heard about it? Don't you know all about it? Won't you keep it out of the paper? It's all I ask of you. Please keep it out." "What is it?" demanded Sumner, almost fiercely, hardly knowing what to suspect in her bewilderment, and despairing of what to say when he should

The woman, very white, but upright and dignified, said: "My father is an embezzler!"

And she told him all she knew.

"Certainly; of course I'll keep it out.
That's all right," said Sumner, horrified.

"But," he added, as though it were merely an afterthought and did not enter into any very great consideration—though he knew better himself, and trusted to her ignorance—"we'll see the city editor."

city editor." Together they went and Sumner spoke to him. He told the city editor the story as he had it from the woman, and the city editor throughout it I was mentally mapping out the space he could give it and where he should put it. Sumner read his thoughts, for he concluded quickly, sharply, and said immediately:

"But you are not going to use it; it is not to be printed! It's only known among the directors of the bank."

"Not go in?" he said, in a surprised tone. "Why, that's the best story we've got to-night. We'll use it, of course. I want a column. You're my best man handy. Go work it; it means ten dollars on space."

"It is not to be used," said Sumner, doggedly.

doggedly.
"Why don't you want it to go in,
Sumner?" asked the editor, finally. "Can't you give me some reason?"
"No," said Sumner, "but it's not go-

"Is it," asked the city editor, ignoring Sumner's mandatory tone, "on any personal ground? If it is, why"—and the city editor made a gesture of unconditional surrender. Sumner looked sideways at Miss Nelson. She laid a hand on his arm and stood, all expectant. A happy light came into the young ant. A happy light came into the young man's eyes.

"Well, sir," began Sumner, stammeringly, "you see, sir, that is, you understand"—he could feel Miss Nelson vatching him—"he, the gentleman under discussion and consideration, is to be my father-in-law!"

"Oh, Robert!" exclaimed Miss Nelson, but she did not remove her hand; the city editor stood up and congratu-lated both. Confused and embarrassed, Sumner led the young lady to the elevator, and, while that affair was slowly hoisting itself, explained him-

"I had to, you see," said he, "and, of course"—he became more confused still -"why, of course"-"This was the reason," she said, stopping him with a kiss, modest and

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

Stomach Liver Cure The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar. It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk. This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the proprietors and manufacturers of the Great South American Nervine Tonic, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by a few of the most learned physicians, who have not brought its merits and value to the knowledge of the general public. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia, and diseases of the general nervous system. It is also of the greatest value in the cure of all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the great nervine tonic qualities. which it possesses, and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body, and as a great renewer of a broken-down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the lungs than any consumption remedy ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nerv ousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic, almost constantly, for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen

NERVOUS DISEASES. As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human, family is heir are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow, and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied; and a thousand weaknesses and ailments. disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This South American Nervine has been found by analysis to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its universal adaptability to the cure of all forms of nervous de-

To the Great South American Medicine Co.:

DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the somach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of, but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervols system. If everyone knew the value of this remedy as I do you would not be able to supply the demand.

I A Harder, Ex-Treas, Montgomery Co. not be able to supply the demand.

J. A. HARDEE, Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co. consider it the grand.

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITAS' DANCE OR CHOREA. CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely a dicted with St. Vitus' Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus' Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, and for all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health, from whatever cause. State of Indiana, Montgomery County, \} 88:

Subscribed and sworn to before me this June 22, 1887. CHAS. W. WRIGHT, Notary Publica INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the one and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic. HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: | Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana,

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says:
"I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen." No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to a and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers
