A MOUNTAIN RIDE.

"It was a good many years ago," said the judge. "I was in Tennessee then, practising law. I had a case in which I wanted very badly a mountaineer. wrote to him, but he would not come. Finally he sent word that I might come up and see him. He specified particularly the day I was to arrive and the exact time I was to begin the ascent of the mountains. On the afternoon named my horse was tugging bravely up the rough road along the mountain side, when a boy not over 17 years old slouched down into the road. A rifle was slung over his shoulder in such a way that it could be swung into instant use. He made no attempt to get out of my way, and I was obliged to pull up my horse.

"'Are you Judge N.?' he drawled. "'I'm the man,' I said. " 'All right, I'll go along with you,' he replied. "Thank you,' I answered, 'but who are you?'

"'I'm Bill Johnson's boy." "'Did he send you down to meet me?'

"'So you'd get there alive,' he said sententiously. 'You're a stranger.' "'Won't you get in?' I asked.

"'No,' he said dryly, 'I'll walk. It's safer for you.' "A mile or so farther on another man about 21 dropped suddenly into the road. He, too, had a rifle slung on his shoulder. "'Hello, Jim,' he said, 'is this the judge?'

"'Yes,' said Jim. "'All right,' said the other, and he swung along on the other side of my

"Who is that?' I asked Jim, when I got a chance. "'My brother,' said Jim. 'You're a stranger, you know. He's come to help take care of you.'

"Soon another young man appeared in the same mysterious way and joined my bodyguard. He was another of Bill Johnson's boys. "At a later turn in the road an old man, stoop shouldered, gray haired, wrinkled and, bent, but keen eyed and alert, stepped silently before us. He, like the rest, was armed. "'Is this the judge?' he asked his boys.

"It was the judge, and he climbed into my wagon. Protected in this way, I drove way, or they go in a coffin."

"Strangely enough," said the railroad man, "I, too, have a story to tell about moonshiners and strangers. I was building a railroad down in Georgia in my younger days. I am a Georgian, you know. Once following our surveys I saw a chance to ride across the mountains, and thence to my home to visit my father. It was early in the afternoon when I started on my long ride. The moon was shining high in the heavens when I began to climb. was jogging peacefully up the incline, when from a shadow a horse and rider came out from the side of the road and fell in at my side. "'Good evening, stranger,' said the man politely. "'Good evening, sir,' I said, glad o even unknown company. "'Which way you going?' asked my new companion

"'Over the mountains,' I answered. "'Reckon I'm going that way, too,' he said, and then I had an opportunity to look at my friend's face. It was a strange face. Smooth shaven, young and yet old. It was calm and placid, as expressionless as stone, and yet there was a certain set about the jaws that kept me uneasy. And no matter how often I looked at him, how quickly I turned my glance on his face, his deepset eyes were always watching me. I felt even when I did not look at him that he was watching me like a cat. We rode for hours, talking as one does with that class of people, until at nearly daylight we had crossed the mountains and were making our way along a comparatively level road. When we came to a river which we had to ford, my friend reined up.

"'This is as far as I go,' he said. "'I'm sorry to lose you, I replied civilly. "'Stranger,' he said, when my horse's forelegs were in the river, 'where are you "'Georgia,' I answered; 'this is my

Half a dozen times on that ride I made up my mind you were revenue, sir, and each time I was just ready to do it. But I hated to do it, sir, you looked so square. I'm glad I didn't.' "'So am I,' I answered, with a false, jerky laugh, for that emotionless man gave me the chills, and I sent my horse across the ford. "'Goodby,' I cried, from the other side. "'Goodby, sir,' he replied. Then his horse carried him off in the gray light, and I felt a sudden sense of relief."-Exchange.

for 30 years upon a narrow ledge of sand stone, sprouting from a joint in the masonry less than an inch in width. The main stem, just above the stone, at the present time has a diameter of 5 inches. The tree is 15 or 16 feet in height, and possibly 8 feet across its widest part; the branches are thick and numerous, and for some years each autumn they have been bright with the vivid scarlet berries peculiar to this species of tree.

Protruding from a chink in a mortared wall, 42 feet above the street, exposed to the glare of the sun in the summer and the masonry through which to penetrate in search of nutriment, the question may well be asked, Where does this tree obtain the elements that enter into the composition of all plant life? But my mind was equal to the emergency. In that supreme moment of despair one mightier than I seemed to instill my bewildered brain with a new energy. Slowly I began to shut off steam; the terrible speed slackened; the distance between the two engines decreased gradually, diminishing until a dull thud followed by a slight jar told me that they had met. The Duchess' Regiment. Near the close of the last century rumors of a French invasion alarmed the country and roused military ardor to such an extent as to lead to fresh regiments being raised. The Duchess of Gordon is said to have had a wager with the prince regent as to which of them would first raise a battalion, and that the fair lady reserved to herself the power of offering a re-

She soon announced to headquarters the formation of a regiment and entered into all the negotiations with the military an thorities in a most businesslike manner, reporting that the whole regiment were highlanders save 35. · Bird Reasoning. A little known and striking instance of foresight and industry exhibited by a bird is that of the Californian woodpecker. Like others of its kind, this bird is an insect eater. Yet in view of the approach of winter it prepares a store of food of a wholly different character and arranges this with as much care as an epicure might devote to the storage of his wine in a cellar. In the summer the woodpecker lives on ants. For the winter it stores up acorns. To hold each acorn it hollows a small hole in a tree, into which the acorn is exactly fitted, and is ready to be split by the strong beak of the climbing wood pecker, though too tightly held to be stolen either by squirrels or other birds.-Lon-

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the proprietors and manufacturers of the Great South American Nervine Tonic, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by a few of the most learned physicians, who have not brought its merits and value to the knowledge of the general public. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic, almost constantly, for the space of two or three years. NERVOUS DISEASES. As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a. general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow, and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied; and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This South American Nervine has been found by analysis to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its universal adaptability to the cure of all forms of nervous de-
