STOLEN TREASURE.

The hardships endured by the Red River settlers during the pars 1867 and '68 are still remembered old settlers in the Northwest. In the sammer of 1867 the mosquitoes appeared in such numbers as to make it almost impossible to travel over the plains, and in 1868 the grasshoppers came in dense clouds, so that the light of the sun was darkened and every green thing in the way of veg etables and grain was destroyed. In those days the only means of transporting supplies into the settlements was by supplies into the settlements was by means of ox carts driven over the prairies from St. Paul to Fort Garry, and many of the settlers were engaged in the business of freighting. The merchants or traders usually contracted with the freighters during the winter months to proceed to St. Paul in the spring and bring back their goods, and it was customary to make advances so as to secure the necessary number of carts when required. The traders seldom owned carts themselves, but employed those owned by the settlers, and freighting was therethe people of the country. Brigades of carts numbering from 50 to 100 were formed, each cart being drawn by a single ox, and carrying from 900 to 1200 pounds weight. It required one man to each three carts, so that a camp belonging to a brigade of 100 carts would number from 25 to 30, men, many of whom culty now in keeping him in view, as he strode along a path with which he evidently was well acquainted. For several miles, however, I succeeded in following him, when suddenly he stopped and look ed around, as if to see whether any one was in view, he dropped on his hands and knees and crawled through an opening into the thick brush. I was now confirmed in my opinion that there was some mystery about the young fellow's according to the size of piece.

A dealer in artificial limbs estimates that 300,000 Englishmen have lost one or both legs.

PALATABLE DISHES.

Corned Beef,—If very salt, soak over night; if not, wash off the brine and cover well with cold water. Should not boil, but simmer slowly from four to six hours, according to the size of piece.

Apple Float.—Pare and core six good was formed, and in the evening it generally presented a very animated appearance, with its camp fires, around which women and children with bustling activity cooked supper or prepared for the night, while the men, weary with the day's march, lay around in groups or were engaged in making some necessary repairs to the carts. The construction of these rude vehicles was of a peculiar description, no iron being used in with its camp fires, around which women and children with bust-ling activity cooked supper or prepared for the night, while the men, weary with the day's march, lay around in groups or were engaged in making some necessary repairs to the carts. The construction of these rude vehicles was of a peculiar description, no iron being used in their composition. When a break occurred it was not difficult to mend it, an axe, saw and auger being all the tools necessary, and a broken shaft or wheel necessary, and a broken shaft or wheel was generally made as strong as ever by means of rawhide cut in strips soaked in water and wound around the injured part. As the hide dried it contracted and drew the parts together as if in a vise, and the break seldom gave any further trouble. In the early days grease was very little used on the axles, and as a result each wheel when it revolved emitted a creaking, disagreeable sound, and a brigade of carts in motion could be heard at several miles distant. The ox carts generally travelled about twenty miles a day, so that it was quite a journey for them to go from Fort Garry to St. Paul and return.

In the summer of '67 the brigades left. St. Cloud and St. Paul for the settlements usually heavily loaded, and all twent well with them until they approached Fort Abercrombie, when the first signs of the mosquito plague appeared. It was customary with the freighters to camp about noon and allow their oxen to rest and feed during the. hottest part of the day, but the mosquit-oes were so thick even then that the animals were nearly driven wild with them. Toward nightfall, however, the insects appeared in denser clouds, and there was no peace for man or beast. No such experience had ever been felt before on the plains, and as a result many of the oxen succumbed from exhaustion on account of inability to rest and want of feed. Ox after ox gave out and was left to die on the plains, and I well remember how nearly every mile a dead animal lay by the side of the trail all the way across the plains. It was discovered that many of the poor brutes choked to death by inhaling the mosquitoes, and balls of the little pests were found embedded in the throats of some of the dead oxen.

The loss of so many oxen and horses was a great hardship to settlers, and the season was a very unprofitable one to them. Very soon distressing accounts of starving families were heard and it was realized that some steps would have to be taken to save the settlers A committee was formed of which I was appointed a member and of which the present archbishops of Rupert's and St. Boniface were the most promin ent members. Appeals for aid were then lorwarded to England, Canada and the United States, the first reponse being from the Hudson's Bay Company, who came forward nobly to the assistance of the starving people. Then donations poured in from various parts of England and Canada. The committee at Fort Garry had an arduous duty to perform but the members proved equal to the oc-casion. The greatest difficulty was the transport of the food as winter set in. Large stores of flour, pork, etc., had been brought as far as Fort Abercrombie but from that point the only means of bringing in the supplies was by sled over the plains. It was therefore resolved to oner the freighters of the settlement to pay them in food for transporting the re-

About this time I had occasion to visit St. Paul and on behalf of the relief committee I undertook to appear before the Minnesota legislature and make an appeal for aid. I therefore started in company with a couple of other traders and a young Englishman whom I took as a companion and of whom I will have more to say later on. Along the roads we met numbers of the freighters bringing in the supplies and in several instances we found that the men were actually starving although their sleds were laden with flour and barrels of pork, Their own stock of food had given out, but they would not touch the relief supplies which they did not consider they had any right to until they had delivered their loads at Fort Garry. It was a remarkable instance of honesty on the part of those simple children of the

In fact we were all forced to abandon everything and make our exit from the hotel as quickly as possible, and by the time we reached the streets the whole block seemed to be one mass of flames. Several of the inmates of the hotel in the upper floors had to be rescued from the windows by means of ladders. Women and children were brought out wrapped in blankets, and it seemed as if most of the guests had lost without coats, vests or caps and one of the first things we did was to repair to a clothiers and buy something to wear. One of our party left behind him three gold watches belonging to people in the settlement which he had taken down to have repaired. But the young Englishman seemed unable to overcome a feeling of remorse | that of the lower portions is said to resemat what he termed his criminal carelessness and gradually he took to drink and went from bad to worse. Before he left on his unfortunate trip with us he became engaged to a beautiful and estimable young lady, and this engagement was now broken off owing to his dissonant late hebits.

I must say the case of this young fel-low perplexed me, because I could see no reason for his taking a matter so much to heart which in no way could reflect upon his honesty or integrity, and the more I thought of it the more I became convinced that there was something else behind it which had not been explained. I therefore became interested in him and cultivated his friendship in order if possible to fathom the mystery and be of service to him. I really felt sorry to see him going to the dogs and hoped to be able to save him. He formed a strange habit of going off by himself on long walks, generally off by himself on long walks, generally in the evenings and always in the same direction, so I resolved on one occasion to follow him, which I managed to do unobserved. He walked quickly, and turning round the wall of Fort Garry, he plunged into the woods leading up the River Assiniboine. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia, and diseases of the general nervous system. It is also of the greatest value in the cure of all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the great nervine tonic qualities; which it possesses, and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body, and as a great renewer of a broken-down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the lungs than any consumption remedy ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic, almost constantly, for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has then able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow, and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied; and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied.
