E FLOW OF THE RIVER

drones the air with sultry hum. When all the world with heat is dumb, hou dronest through the drowsed lea. To lose thyself and find the sea. As fares a soul that threads the gloom, Towards an unseen goal of doom, Thou farest forth all witlessly, To lose thyself and find the sea.

My soul is such a stream as thou, Leaping along it heeds not how; In one thing only unlike thee— Losing itself it finds no sea.

Albeit I know a day shall come When its dull waters will be dumb; And then this river-soul of me, Losing itself, shall find the sea. -William Watson.

AFEARFUL ADVENTURE

I was a medical student in Paris at the time the strange and startling adventure happened which I am about to record. Tired with long lectures and hard study, I was out one evening for a walk in the fresh air. It was a pleasant night in mid-winter, and the cold, bracing air, as it touched my feverish brow, caused a grateful sensation. Passing through a rather lonely street near the river, I was surprised at meet-ing a young girl—at least, she so ap-peared in the dim light of a rather distant street lamp—who carried in her hand some three or four boquets, which she offered for sale.

"Will monsieur have a boquet?" she asked in a sweet, musical tone, holding out to me a well-arranged collection of beautiful flowers.

"They are very pretty," said I, taking them in my hand. "Monsieur will purchase and assist me?" she said.

"Do you, then, really need assistance, "Why else should I be here at this hour of the night, monsieur?"

"And why here at all?" quickly returned I. "This street is little frequented, and is about the last in the world I should have selected for disposing of a luxury most suited to wealth and fashion."

She sighed, and reached out her hand for the boquet, which I still retained. "What is your price?" said I. "Five francs." "A large sum." "Monsieur will remember it is winter, and flowers are not plentiful."

"To aid you I will purchase," returned I, handing her the requisite silver coin; "for though I love flowers, I would otherwise hardly indulge in the luxury to-night at such an ex-She thanked me, and seemed about to pass on, but hesitated, looked up at me,

"Could monsieur direct me to the house of a good physician, who would turn out to-night and see a patient for a small recompense? "Any friend of yours ill?" "My mother," with a deep sigh.

"Where does she reside?" "Only a short distance from here." "What is the matter with her?" "She has high fever, for one thing. When is she taken?" 'She cal wn last night, and has "Why did you not send for a doctor

"We hoped she would get better soon, and it is so expensive for poor people to employ a physician."
"I am myself a medical student, with considerable experience among the sick of the hospitals, and if you are disposed to trust the case to me, I am at your service without charge," I rejoined, already feeling deeply interested in the

"Oh, how shall I thank monsieur?" she exclaimed, with clasped hands, and an upward, grateful look. "Pray follow me, "Monsieur le Docteur. She turned at once and moved off at a rapid pace down the street, toward the river Seine, in the direction I was walking when we met. In less than five minutes we had entered a wretched quarter, among narrow streets, old, tottering buildings, and squalid-looking inhabitants, some of whom seemed to glare at us as we pas-

"Is it much farther?" inquired I, beginning to feel uneasy. "Only a step, monsieur. It is just Almost immediately she turned into a covered passage, which led in back among habitations that I should never have voluntarily visited in the broad light of day. A distant lamp just served to make the gloom visible, till she suddenly stopped, and opened a door into total darkness. "Your hand, Monsieur le Docteur," she said, at the same time taking it, and leading me forward. I was tempted to draw back and re-fuse to go any farther, though I me-chanically followed her.

We now went through a long, narrow passage, in total darkness, and, after two or three short turns, began to descend a flight of creaking, rotten stairs. "Is it possible you live in a place like this?" said I, secretly wishing myself safely out of it. "In Paris beggars cannot be choosers," replied the girl. "But even in Paris it is not necessary for the living to take up their abode in sepulchres," I rejoined with some asperity, being vexed at myself for suffering my good nature to lead me into a den from which I might never come out To this my fair guide deigned no reply. On reaching the foot of the stairs, she pushed open a door into a small, dimly-lighted room, and I followed her into it with some secret misgivings. There was a bed in one corner, and on it appeared to be a human form, lying very still.

"I have brought a doctor, mother," said the girl, as she closed the door be-

As there was no reply to this, she turned to me, saying:
"Will Monsieur le Docteur please be seated a minute? I think my mother is asleep."

"I beg mademoiselle will bear in mind this case to-night, as I have another call I wish to make immediately," I returned, feeling very anxious to depart from that subterranean quarter as soon

"Monsieur shall not be detained long by me," rejoined the girl, passing out of the room by another door. I did not sit down, but walked over to the bed, where the patient was lying very still—so still, indeed, that I could not detect any breathing. A woman's cap was on the head, and the end of a sheet concealed the face. I ventured to, turn this down carefully, and beheld the eyeless sockets and grinning teeth of a human skull! I started back in horror, and at the same moment, the door by which the girl had left was thrown open, and in marched, one after the other, four tall human figures, in black gowns and masks. I knew at once, then, that I was to be robbed, and probably murdered. I wore a heavy diamond pin and ring, carried a valuable gold watch, and had in money about my person some five hundred francs, but not a single weapon of any kind. Resistance being therefore out of the question, I felt that my only chance—if, indeed, there were a chance—was to conciliate the ruffians. and buy myself off. With a presence of mind for which I still take to myself considerable credit, I said at once: "I understand it all, gentlemen, and you will find me a very liberal person to deal with. There is one thing I value very highly, because it is the only one I have, and I cannot replace it—that is my life. Everything else of mine is at your service, even beyond what I have

They were undoubtedly surprised to hear me speak in that cool, off-hand manner, but they marched forward and surrounded me before either returned a

"How much have you with you then?" inquired one, in a civil way, but in a low, gruff tone.

I immediately mentioned the different articles of value, and the exact amount of money. "All of which I shall be pleased to present you with, if one of you will be kind enough to escort me to the street above," I added. "You said you had more, monsieur."

"Yes, gentlemen, I have ten thousand francs in the Bank of France, and will willingly add a cheque for half that "Cheques don't serve our purpose very well," said a second voice. . "Then I pledge you my honor that I will to morrow draw out fire thousand francs, and pay the amount over to any person who may approach me with this boquet in his hand," said I, holding out the flowers I had purchased of the fair minute, I suppose?" "No, on my honor, he shall depart un-harmed and unquestioned; and no other human being shall be informed of the transaction for a week, a month, or a when he was an editor, that if no one else were at hand he would appeal for advice to the office boy.

"Let us first handle what you have here," said the first speaker. I immediately took out my pin, took off my ring, drew out my watch, produced my pocketbook and purse, and place them all in his extended hand. "You make us a present of these, now?" he said. "Yes, on condition that one of you will forthwith conduct me to the street,"

"Monsieur is a very liberal gentle-men! Eh, comrades?" said the mask, turning to the others. "A very liberal gentlemen, indeed, was the response. They then drew off together, scrutinized the articles by the light of a smoky lamp, and conversed together in low tones. I felt that they were holding a consultation that involved my life, and, to speak the beneat truth in to speak the honest truth, it seemed as if every nerve in me quivered; and it was with difficulty I could stand.

At length the principal spokesman turned to me and said, in a very cool and methodical manner: "Monsieur has acted more like a gentleman than any other person we have ever had dealings with, and if we could. consistent with our business, oblige him, we should be happy to do so; but unfortunately we are governed by a rule, which is a law with us, that dead men tell no tales, and we think it will not do to make an exception in this case. We will, however, in consideration of monsieur's gentlemanly behaviour, be as mild and lenient as possible in doing our duty, and grant monsieur five minutes for saying his prayers.

"You have then resolved to murder me?" gasped I. "Monsieur uses a very harsh term, but we will let that pass. You have five minutes yet to live by this watch."

The villain then held my watch to the light, and I felt indeed that my minutes were numbered; and I secretly began to pray for the salvation of my soul, be-lieving that I could not save my body.

A death-like silence now reigned in that gloomy apartment for some time, and then one of the ruffians bent down and lifted a trap-door, and from the dark pit below issued a noisome smell. beheld my intended grave, and shuddered and shook like an aspen But why stand there and die like a dog, without a single attempt at escape? At the worst it could be but death, and there was a bare possibility that I might get away. I fixed my eye on the door which opened upon the stairway, and with a single sudden bound reached it, but found it fast locked. Then, as the hands of the ruffians seized me, with muderous intent, I uttered a wild shriek, the door was burst in with a loud crash, and in a moment the room was filled with gendarmes. I saw that I was saved, and fainted and fell. The four masks, the fair decoy, and some two or three others concerned in that murderous den, were all secured that night, and I subsequently had the pleasure of giving my evidence against them, and seeing them all condemned to the galleys for life. The place had been for some time suspected and the decoy marked. On that night a detective had secretly followed the girl and myself, and, after ascertaining wither she had conducted me, had hastened to bring a body of gend-armes to the place. The delay of the ruffians in their murderous design had been just sufficient to save me. I scarcely need add that I never again volunteered to accompany a distressed dam-sel on a secret adventure while I remained in Paris.

Finger Print Identification. Francis A. Galton, as the result of his investigation of anthropometry, affirms that "the patterns of the papillary ridges upon the bulbous palmer surfaces of the terminal phalanges of the fingers and thumbs are absolutely unchangeable throughout life and show in different individuals an infinite variety of forms and peculiarities. And these are the two most important essentials that any method of identification could have. The chance of two finger-prints being identical is less than one in sixty-four thousand millions. If, therefore, two finger prints are compared and are found to coincide exactly, it is practically certain that they are prints of the same finger of the same person; if they differ, the inference is equally certain that they are made by different fingers.—

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

Stomach Liver Cure The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar. It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk. This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the proprietors and manufacturers of the Great South American Nervine Tonic, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by a few of the most learned physicians, who have not brought its merits and value to the knowledge of the general public This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of indigestion. dyspepsia, and diseases of the general nervous system. It is also of the greatest value in the cure of all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the great nervine tonic qualities which it possesses, and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body, and as a great renewer of a broken-down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the lungs than any consumption remedy ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic, almost constantly, for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow, and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied; and a thousand weaknesses and ailments. disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repairthe wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This South American Nervine has been found by analysis to contain the

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITAS' DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887. My daughter, eleven years old, was severely a dicted with St. Vitus' Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus' Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, and for all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health, from whatever cause.
