TUBERCULOSIS.

A Germ Disease Which the State Should Protect People From. It is now well established that tuberculosis is a germ disease, in this respect resembling smallpox, yellow fever and many other maladies. This germ lives in great numbers in animal bodies and is prevalent in a greater number of animals than any other disease. Cattle are especially susceptible, but many domestic and other animals are subject to it and may be the means of conveying it to the human subject. Even rats and mice have tuberculosis. This germ manifests no power of voluntary motion and would therefore be classed as vegetable rather than animal. Its vitality is one of its strong characteristies, and it doubtless lives even after the substance in which it has grown has been dried to dust. Freezing cold does not kill it and it requires a temperature of about

158° to destroy it. The fact that it is liable to occur in every day food products, as meat and milk, yet is so minute as to escape ordinary means of detection, accounts in large measure for the wide distribution in the germs of consumption with such certainty that it now becomes the duty of the State to protect people against the liability to purchase and use the products of animals affected with this disease, and more, to take a similar course to that pursued in the recent stamping out of the dread cattle plague and rid the country of all tubercu-

A Grand Short Horn. The grand Short Horn bull Baron Lavender 106324, whose portrait appears herewith, was bred by Wm. Duthie Collynie, berdeenshire, Scotland, imported by ohn Miller & Son, Brougham, Ont., and sold by them to his present owners, the is of noble ancestry, having been got by Leonidas (59260) out of Lavender 46th by Dunblane (47792), g. d. Lavender 20th by Pride of the Isles (35072), and when his grand conformation and excellent quality are considered, it will be seen that he is a decided acquisition to the Short-Horn blood of the United States. He is a youngster yet, having just passed his third birthday, and will doubtless render good service for years to come. - Country Gent-Horses are Nervous. The great superiority of the horse to all other dumb animals, according to Mr. H.

C. Merwin, is the fineness of his nervous system. Almost all the fastest horses, says the same writer, have been remarkable for their nervous "high strung" constitutions. Others have had as good legs and as good lungs but have lacked the necessary courage and determination, the "do or die" spirit, which makes a horse keep on after he is tired. But this very nervousness renders the horse the most irritable of creatures, the most easily worried and distressed. Upon this point Mr. Merwin makes some observations that are worth reading by all who have or expect to have horses of their own,

Harsh treatment, though it stop short of inflicting physical pain, keeps a nervous horse in a state of misery. On the other hand, it is perfectly true, as a besotted but intelligent stable keeper once observed to "A kind word to a hoss is as good sometimes as a feed of oats." In dealing with a horse, more than with most animals, one ought to exercise patience, care, and, above all, the power of sympathy, so as to know if possible the real motive of his doing or refusing to do this or that. To acquire such knowledge and to act upon it when acquired is a large part of the ethics of horse keeping. The Perfect Farm Horse. The perfect farm horse has not been developed yet, and it is probable that there may not be entire concurrence in the ideal may not be entire concurrence in the ideal drawn. This summary of its accomplishments, however, is not beyond attainment. It must have the size and strength to draw a plow with ease; the style and action necessary to make a trip to market and back in the least possible time; of a docile disposition, but not to the detraction of pages a most necessary qualification of nerve, a most necessary qualification of a good farm horse; and, lastly, it must be such a horse as can successfully meet competition in the sale ring.—N. Y.

The Feathering of Cochins. One of the evidences of purity in the Cochin fowl is that the shanks are heavily feathered on the outside down to the end of the toes, and the middle toes should be well feathered. When young they are almost naked for awhile, as they feather slowly, but when fully matured they are heavily feathered, which enables them to stand the cold well. They are excellent layers if not made too fat, and they should therefore be fed with judgment. As sitters and mothers, the hens rank higher than those of any other breed. than those of any other breed.

How Light Affects Bees. It is said that the sight of the bees is affected by both a dazzling and a dim light. A glaring light on the snow dazzles them, while it is stated that if they are thrown a short distance from their hives in the dusk, the effect is nearly the same. They will circle about and fall without being able to find their homes.

The Horse Sense of It. The power and longevity of the horse are in exact ratio to the intelligent care and feeding he receives. He can draw on his fixed stock of vitality to supply the sefici-ency of food or to do overwork, but it shortens his life and reduces his value .-N. Y. World.

How to Clean Crape.

A crape veil can be renovated by putting it out for a few minutes in a drizzling rain until well dampened. Then fold and put under a mattress over night. It will be wonderfully improved in the morning. in the morning.

THE FARM HORSE AT WORK. How He Should be Gradually Brought Again Into Work in Spring. After a season of comparative rest and idleness during the winter, the farm horse should be brought gradually into full work in the spring. Do not put the horses at a hard day's plowing at first, but rather let them do lighter work for the first few days. Their shoulders will need watchmost frequent cause of sore shoulders. Sponge the shoulders night and morning with a strong decoction of white oak bark until they get hardened. Many farmers think it too much trouble to remove the collars at noon, but I think it would well repay the trouble in added comfort to the horse. It is like taking off your hat when you come in at noon, tired and heated by horses are eating gives the shoulders a chance to become cool. When a gall does come, bathe it at least three times a day with cold water. If possible, let the animal rest until the place is healed, but by all means try to arrange by winding cloth around the collar to relieve the pressure upon that spot. Do not hurry the team too much, but let it take its own natural pace, and it will not need to rest so often, and will leave the field fresher than if hurried along with a whip. In marking out ground for corn or potatoes, if one horse is used it is not so easy to drive in a straight line as when two horses were used. If a single horse is used it will go straighter and better if allowed to go slowly. A horse that is jerked and yelled at becomes nervous and does not know what it is about, and can not do half so well as when he is unexcited. Give a horse a loose rein when he is at work. He cannot use his full strength if his head is drawn up with a tight check rein. Perhaps it is not best for all kinds of work that there be no check rein at all, for a horse will be reaching down to the ground when standing still, but it should certainly allow the horse to get his head down to a level with the rest of his body. Some horses naturally carry their heads high, even when at work, but most of them do not need to get their heads down to throw all their weight into the collar to move a

Clean Horse Collars. One reason why horses gall their shoulders while at work is the neglect of the attendant in keeping the portion of the collar that presses against the skin free from the dirt, or dandruff, which is constantly gathering upon the leather. This is rolled into lumps by the friction of the coliar against the shoulder in walking. At the beginning of the season's work the shoulder is tender, the hair long and full of dandruff, and when the work is heavy the But modern science has furnished the | collar should be cleaned every morning and means of detecting the presence of these | noon, before commencing work. For the first few days one or two cleanings during the half day will prevent galling. This can be done by rubbing the hand briskly several times over the surface. It takes but a moment and can be done while the team is resting. The shoulders should also > white oak bark has been boiled for fifteen minutes the skin is toughened and the galling prevented. Colts, particularly, should have their collars well fitted. - American Train Colts to Walk. Many colts are now learning to work. The rate of travel required of them is important Confining the travel mainly to a walk is not the rule with all drivers. As soon as the young animal ceases to rear and plunge in the harness, it is often considered "broken" and is allowed to take any gait it may choose. The old horse by which the youngster is hitched, is allowed to advance by long rapid strides, thus forcing the colt out of a walk from the start. The older animal needs to be held the learner can equal. Gradually increase the rate, but only in keeping with the ability of the colt to walk. A colt that proves naturally slow at the walk must be given short trips of not more than five miles, and be steadily urged to a faster gait. It is work to drive a "green" colt properly. The man who takes the reins at such times for pleasure, is out of place. The early habits of the colt will cling to it. For this reason it should be learned to travel at a brisk walk during the first three months it is worked. The well-trained horse finds it a relief from the walk, of course, to be given a brisk trot during the last one-third or one-fourth of the jour-

back and forced to walk at a rate which

ney. - Orange Judd Farmer. Clean Food and Drink for Poultry. The device shown herewith, from a sketch in American Agriculturist, will enable a poultry keeper to secure cleanliness in the food and drink he supplies his fowls. The slatted arrange. ment is placed upon house, a portion of TROUGH FOR POULTRY the front being hinged, to permit food and drink to be placed close behind the slats, long troughs being used for the food, to permit all the fowls to eat at once. The enclosed space can be made long enough to provide accommodations for all the fowls which are kept on the place.

Choosing Breeding Sires. In breeding the best is none too good for anyone. Few, however, take the pains to get the best when such pains incur extra expense or care. Just now farmers must decide upon stallions and within a few weeks the services of a bull will be in demand. Because poor horses are bad property, many will not try to raise colts next stallions are beyond the means of the average farmer, and as five years must elapse before the produce will be ready for market it seems reasonable that those who now breed their best mares in the best possible way will be in line for fair profits in the future. The service fee should not stand in the way, if the breeder would be successful. Ten dollars invested may return a $150 horse, and half of $10 would probably produce a $50 horse with the same amount of food and care in either case.

Sweet Potatoes as Feed. The tops of sweet potatoes make an important feed for stock, and especially for dairy cattle, says Bulletin No. 28 of the Texas station. Since they grow in bunches and stand up well they can be cut with a mowing machine and put up like regular forage crops. They also make a saiad of very fair quality. Thirty-one varieties of sweet potatoes were tried and reported on-The bulletin cautions growers that the northern taste being so different from the southern, sweet potatoes shipped to the former market should be dry and mealy, in order to command ready sales and the
