THE MOCKING BIRD. He didn't know much music When first he come along: An' all the birds went wonderin' Why he didn't sing a song. They primped their feathers in the sun, ? An' sung their sweetest notes; An' music jes' come on the run From all their thrillin' throats! But still that bird was silent

In summer time an' fall; He jes' set still an' listened An' he wouldn't sing at all. But one night when them songsters Was tired out an' still, An' the wind signed down the valley An' went creepin' up the hill; When the stars was all a-tremble In the dreamin' fields o' blue,

An' the daisy in the darkness Felt the fallin' o' the dew; There come a sound o' melody No mortal ever heard. An' all the birds seemed singin' From the throat o' one sweet bird! Then the other birds went Mayin' In a land too fur to call;
Fer there warn't no use in stayin'
When one bird could sing fer all!

A WESTERN IDYL.

"So this is Bang-Up City? Then the place is a living geographical lie."
Rose Kenyon looked indignant as she As she gazed about the collection of saloons and other dingy shanties which constituted the only visible portion of the far-famed mining camp the indig nant expression on her face deepened in

For Miss Kenyon had been led to expect a very different sort of place. She had been told that Bang-Up City was a species of earthly paradise, whose inhabitants were so well satisfied with life there that they did not care to make even a short excursion out into the outer

"From what I can see of it," she mur-mured, "I cannot understand how anyone can ever be induced to remain in the place over night. Where is all this western bustle of which I have heard? Where is the enterprise which builds complete new cities in a month? Bah! I have been imposed upon."

She paused, arresolute, upon the platform of the little depot that was half a log shanty and half tent.

Rose Kenyon was a very fair vision to gaze upon. Young—not over twenty—and pretty—decidedly pretty—she was the kind of woman who can be depended upon to set masculinity by the ears.
Suitors were no novelty to Rose. She had had many lovers, but had sent them all away. Not one of them had ever approached her ideal. And now sne had been allured to the Rockies by the illiterate invitation of three men, who subscribed themselves three men, who subscribed themselves as the school trustees of Bang-Up City.

They had, confessed in their queer letter, that Bang-Up City was as yet without schools of any description, but they had invited her, at a salary which had astonished the New England schoolteacher, to come out and change the state of affairs at Bang-Up City.

And Rose had accepted. She had expected that the trustees would be at the station to meet the first teacher of their new community, but there was not a soul near the depot. Then Rose remembered that she had not told them on which day she expected to arrive.

which day she expected to arrive. Finally Rose's eye fell upon a nondescript-looking Chinaman who was coming leisurly up the road. He was not an inviting specimen of the Mongolian race. To begin with, he was dirty. To add to that he was very ragged. And, to cap all, he had one of the most hideous faces ever seen.

"Cally yo' glip, missy?" he demanded, as he came close to her and picked up the heavy valise which lay at Miss Keny-"Is there a hotel here?" Rose asked. "Yes, missy; you wantee go there?"

"Then I cally yo' bag."
"How much?" asked Rose. She had New England eye to the cost of "Two bitee, missy."

"All right. Lead the way to the The Chinaman started down the dusty road, followed by Miss Kenyon. As hey got into what might be called the heart of the city Rose saw that there were a good many men about. As she walked along the number of men became larger, and she noticed, not without uneasiness, that they all appeared to be following her. For, in some way, it got noised about this decidedly pretty young woman was the new school-And every mother's son of them felt that he had an interest in the schoolma'am, to pay whom all were to be By the time that the Chinaman came to a stop before a shanty which looked just a shade more pretentious than the rest the street was crowded by miners. They all stared at her, yet Rose could not help feeling that she was the recipimade so bold as to step up to her and "Beg pardon, but mebbe yer the new "Yes, I am."

Walker turned to the Chinaman and said authoritatively: "Drop that grip right there, Jim Wah. I'll look after it. "You pay me, missy," said the China-

Any miner would have given five dol-lars bonus for the privilege of paying the Chinaman, but all felt, after a brief inspection of Miss Kenyon, that it would not be a safe offer to make. Miss Kenyon took out her purse and drew from it a silver quarter.
"Four bites," said the Chinaman. "Why," expostulated Rose, "you offered to carry it for twenty-five "You heap lie," retorted Jim Wah. Jim Wah didn't finish. There was a loud, sharp report, and the Chinaman rolled over and over on to the ground, holding his side and yelling with Walker pulled off his sombrero, and, bowing with native grace, and holding the smoking pistol pointed at the ground,

"I beg yer pardon for scaring yer, miss, but no Chinese galoot can insult a lady when I'm 'round. For Rose Kenyen had given a startled shriek, and now looked as if she was about to faint.

The next instant, to the amazement of all the miners, she was kneeling in the dust by the side of the wounded Jim Wah lay silent under the touch of her fingers, as she examined his

"He's not very badly hurt, after all," she said, finally. Jim Walker stood over her with shame-faced air and said: "No, miss; he ain't very bad hurt, that's sure. I'm ashamed of myself. time I'll make sure of killing the moon-Warranted by J. Pallen & Son. Rose looked up at him with a look of Then she turned to the others and

"Gentlemen, will some of you pick up | float. this wounded man and take him to a bed

"And the Chinaman—are you sorry for him?" she demanded, sternly. "No, miss; nobody out this way is ever sorry for a Chinaman.'

"But he has a life, sir." "So has a monkey or a rattlesnake. "But a Chinaman's life is human." "You're the first, miss, who ever said so in Bang-Up City. We hain't been used to looking at it that way. All we know 'bout 'em is that they're more low down than Injuns. I beg yer pardon for saying it, miss; but when you've been here longer you'll think the same way about it that we do." "Never!" retorted Rose, with a shudder. "If I thought that I could ever become so hard hearted by remaining here I would take the next train At this declaration the men looked apprehensive. The vision of trim, pretty, dainty womanhood had just dawned in Bang-Up City. Better even that a Chinaman should be mayor than that she should go from them. "Boys," proclaimed Walker, "from this day forth no Chinaman is to be shot at.

Do you hear?" A chorus of affirmatives came from the crowd. Then came a gust of sighs. It was a difficult law to live up to. "We are losing time" cried Rose. "and the poor victim is losing blood. Take him on to the hotel, if you please, gentlemen." From that day on Jim Walker was in disgrace with the new schoolma'am. For two weeks she attended the wound-

At last Jim Wah was discharged as It was months before Jim Walker could get back into the good graces of Miss Kenyon. And when she did once more condescend to treat him as an equal, the poor fellow, who was desperately in love with her, felt that it would be worse than folly to even dream of declaring his passion to her.

"And all over a cussed Chinaman, too," he would mutter. One night in winter Rose Kenyon sat all alone in her room at the hotel. It was dark, but she had not lit the lamp, for she preferred in her then mood to sit in the dark and think. Suddenly she became aware that the door had or ened, though it was done noiseless'y enough. Her eyes being accustomed to the darkness, she was able to make out the nondescript figure of Jim Wah. He stole toward the table on which she had deposited a satchel containing her last month's salary.

The Ct. aman must have figured or must have known where the little satched last for her ways their containing the satched s el lay, for he went to it without hesitation, picked it up and started to leave "Give that to me at once, Jim Wah," cried Rose, springing to her feet and seizing the Chinaman resolutely by the Jim Wah struggled to get away, but she only held to him tighter, and screamed for help. The noise of footsteps was heard. Jim Wah uitered a Mongolian curse and drew a gleaming knife. Just at this moment the door opened, and five or six men burst into the room. One of them carried a lamp. A shot rang out, and Jim Wah sank to the floor. He was dead. The shot had been fired just in time to save Rose Kenyon's life.

It was Jim Walker who had fired the shot, and it was he who said, trium "I told yer, Miss Kenyon, that the next time I fired at that Chinese galoot But Rose didn't hear him. She had "Boys," ordered Jim, "carry out that yellow snake"-pointing to the bloodstained body. The remains of the murderous celestial were lugged out with little ceremony. The coroner of Bang Up City wouldn't take the trouble to hold an inquest. When Rose came to she was lying on a sofa in the hotel parlor. The landlord's wife was bending over her, but Rose saw only Jim Walker, who stood at the foot of the sofa. Beckoning him to bend over her, she whispered: "My preserver!" "Don't say another word about it. "But won't you ever let me thank you, Jim?' James Walker, Esq., and Rose Ken-yon were married in the spring.—N. Y. Morning Journal.

About the Bible. During the most of the sixteenth century the English people called the Bible the Bibliotheca, or the Library, this word being limited in its application to the Scriptural writings. The "Vinegar Bible" is so called from an error in Luke 20. 'Parable of the Vineyard" appeared as "Parable of the Vinegar." It was printed by the Clarendon Press in 1717.
